Speaking to his lawyer, Prinzip stated that he got bombs and money from a rich merchant of Belgrade.

He added that he tried to assassinate the Archduke during the military manoeuvres at Tarc.

Prinzip followed the Archduke about from the moment he set foot on Bosnian soil.

He promises to divulge the names of other conspirators. He repents the murder because his accomplices betrayed him.

EUMENTHOL TOOTH POWDER,

THE GREAT ANTISEPTIC POWDER, which contains no Acid, and is Guaranteed ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS TO THE ENAMEL. In contact with moisture the Powder liberates free active Oxygen, and it is the Oxygen which whitens the teeth so wonderfully and wards off decay as no other preparation for the Teeth can or will do.

"The Lancet," London, January 17, 1914, states:—

"This tooth powder is designed on sound principles, and is very agreeable to use. The distinctive feature about it is that in addition to some approved germicides it contains magnesium peroxide, which readily parts with free oxygen, as our experiments have shown. This probably leads to a favourable cleansing action upon the mouth, and a slight whitening effect upon the teeth. The powder is finely divided, and is free from harmful constituents and gritty substances.

MORE CONVINCING EVIDENCE.

THE TEST OF EXPERIENCE.
WITH "INVINCIBLE" ENGINES.

Mr. O. Petersen, Coff's Harbour, writes:—"The 12-h.p. Four-cylinder 'Invincible' Engine I purchased from you has been installed about two months, and HAS GIVEN EVERY SATISFACTION. She is capable of driving a much larger hull than mine, and we get nine miles an hour with the throttle half open."

Mr. C. McLennan, Newcastle:—"I have pleasure in informing you that the 6-h.p. Invincible Engine I purchased from you at the beginning of the year IS RUNNING WELL AND GIVING EVERY SATISFACTION. I have had no trouble whatever with it, and it is surprising how easily it starts."

Mr. P. B. Bettini, Narooma, writes:—"My launch is 28ft long, 8ft 6in beam, and fitted with one of your 12-h.p. Engines, Model G. The engine IS RUNNING WELL, AND HAS GIVEN NO TROUBLE. I am using it nearly every day, and have done some heavy towing. At full speed I have DONE TEN KNOTS, and there is not much vibration. The pump for the water works well also, in fact, it keeps the engine so cool that one could sit on it all the time.

GUARANTEED FOR FIVE YEARS.

SKANDIA, SKANDIA, SKANDIA.

The Successful Semi-Diesel Engine.
MARINE, STATIONARY, PORTABLE.
Specially constructed to use as fuel,
KEROSENE, HEAVY OIL, and RESIDUAL OIL.

Further records to the long list:—

The Federal Government, after exhaustive search for an auxiliary vessel to operate in the Northern Territory, to be used in lighthouse construction work, have purchased the Auxiliary Ketch "Forbes Bros." in which is installed a SKANDIA ENGINE of 30 h.b.p. On the trials, and over the measured mile this craft attained a speed of 6½ knots. This is a remarkable speed when considering the dimensions of the hull are length 75ft, beam 22ft, and depth of hold 6 feet 8 inches, with 110 tons carrying capacity. Cost of running this engine is 1/6 per hour on full load, and the Federal Government have since purchased another Skandia of similar power. Another addition to the motor fleet in this harbour is the launch Pegasus, with a 15-h.p. Skandia Engine installed. She cannot be mistaken. She is painted green, and moored at Fort Macquarie, between the hours of 1 and 2 p.m. Do not fail to view this little craft. She is absolutely up-to-date. Cost of running, 6d per hour on full load. We guarantee the power and a little in reserve.

NO WATER DRIP BATTERIES, CAMS, or GEARS to get out of order.

THE NIAGARA (4-Cycle) MARINE MOTORS

Compare favourably with the best in finish and efficiency, and with the cheapest in price. No high-class imported engine in this market is locally priced so close to manufacturers' actual cost, and thus buyers of Niagaras get twenty shillings real engine value for every pound their outfit costs. We refer you to all owners of Niagaras.

Many owners of FERRO MARINE ENGINES never operated an engine before they purchased a "FERRO," yet they never have trouble, and can handle their "FERROS" with every confidence. Hundreds of testimonials prove this statement. We guarantee that any novice can drive a "FERRO." Don't buy a complicated engine, or you will buy trouble. Inspect the "FERRO," from 3 to 25 h.p. MONARCH MARINE MOTORS are the most marvellous performers on kerosene and benzine that have ever been landed here. They are 4-cycle, heavy duty, extremely high grade, have all the advantages of a benzine motor. No added complications. No hot heads to crack. No oil pump injections to block up with carbon. No blow lamps to give worry and trouble. Latest Kingston Ignition or any system desired. Monarchs are used by the Russian Government and the American War Office. Two shipments have been landed here, and were all sold before landed, except one. This one is now sold and running a Government Tourist Boat, and a large number of other Motors are now ordered and sold, and many more promised.

If you want to save money and not lose efficiency, and have an engine running as sweet, clean, and even as a motor car, come and have a run in a Monarch Boat. All powers supplied. Remember, Monarchs are the only motors built with the patent By Pass System, so that it is really two distinct motors in one, charged while running by simply turning on the different oil tanks.

THE CINEMATOGRAPHIC CHEF D'OUVRE
OF THE CENTURY.
OF THE CENTURY.

The intensely tragic story is re-enacted with a most masterly and gifted portrayal of the principal characters, and with a brilliance and splendour of setting almost impossible for the human mind to conceive.

"A MASTERPIECE OF MASTERPIECES"

is the expression used by more than one London critic in describing the wonderful sequence of memorable scenes, which are absolutely without parallel.

"THE VERY LAST WORD
SPECTACULAR EFFECT."

A Fabulous Sum was spent over the production, and thousands of people were employed for many months rehearsing the stupendous scenes.

THE NEW SOUTH WALES PONY AND GALLOWAY OWNERS' AND TRAINERS' ASSOCIATION.

PUBLIC NOTICE.

The General Committee of the above Association desire to inform the Public generally that its members have decided not to nominate any of the Ponies and Horses in their control at the forthcoming Victoria Park Race Meeting, advertised to be held on WEDNESDAY NEXT, JULY 8th, 1914.

The point at issue between the Associated Racing Clubs and the Association is the question of increased Prize Money in each race, and also several minor matters connected with racing generally.

The Association desires to advertise that it is forced, under the Rules of the Associated Racing Clubs, to deal with that body, and such controls the following Courses:—

Victoria Park, Kensington, Ascot, and Rosebery.

And until better conditions are conceded the Pony and Galloway Owners' and Trainers' Association has decided to withdraw its support from all Meetings held under that control.

The Association comprises most of the leading Pony and Galloway Owners and Trainers. The Ponies and Horses controlled, numbering i the vicinity of 700, include nearly all the best Ponies and Horses which have hitherto raced on the Associated tracks.

The Association looks forward with confidence to the support of the Sporting Public in the action taken.

Our Motto: "LIVE, AND LET LIVE."
By order of the General Committee,
E. R. SYMONDS,
Secretary.

PHOTOGRAPHY AT NIGHT.

THROUGH THE PHENOMENAL ADVANCE IN

THE SCIENCE OF LIGHT

WE NOW TAKE THE HIGHEST CLASS PHOTOGRAPHS BY

CONDENSED SUNLIGHT.

READ THE WONDERFUL ADVANCE;

IT IS MOST ENTERTAINING AND INSTRUCTIVE.

In the early nineties, our Mr. Blow was the first to introduce the flashlight into Australia.

A year or two later the incandescent gas mantle was introduced, and he went into exhaustive experiments, but with unsatisfactory results.

When acetylene gas was first discovered, he thought he had the most ideal light for photography, but on experimenting it was found deficient in actinic values, although its brilliancy was all that could be desired.

His experiments with the electric light from time to time have resulted in varying degrees of success, but the ordinary single arc light, although very popular with certain photographers, has never proved itself worthy of a place in a first-class studio, for the following reasons:—First: The whole of the light emanates from one point, thus giving chalky whites and heavy dark shadows. Second: The light is in its intensity too piercing. Third: The light is too yellow, therefore, photographs from the ordinary arc lamp are most noticeable, even to a novice.

Our Mr. Blow, being the photographer manager of the largest photographic concern in the Commonwealth, has been the pioneer in all these methods of lighting, and although he has held tenaciously to every new method, he has from time to time had to admit either failure or lack of effectiveness in the light under test.

Until the advent of the present new carbons, which give a splendid blue white light, and have proved of the greatest possible value, first-class artistic photographs were impossible by artificial light. This new method, with the vastly improved arrangements and installation, and the greatly improved light filters for the effective diffusing and blending of the blue and yellow rays, has lifted the artificial light on to the highest possible plane of efficiency, and has not only equalled the beautiful effects obtained by the daylight studio, but has far surpassed the possibilities of the older methods, and has enabled the artist photographers of the Crown Studios to obtain pictures possessing all those art values in high light, half-tones, and deep blacks, so pleasing to the aesthetic temperament. Mr. Blow, recognising that the ladies and gentlemen who patronise his studios expect something quite superior to the average photograph, can with confidence invite them to sit at his night studios with a full assurance of results at least equal to the best obtainable in any daylight studio, especially as all kinds of photographs can be equally well treated under the new light.

As the sitter enters the studio there is a flood of bright, soft light; there is no glare, no blinking of the eyes, all objections that were associated with artificial light have been overcome. This new light studio is most convenient for those who would like to be photographed in evening dress, without the necessity of a change of costume during the daytime. Many come to the Crown Studios on their way to a concert, a ball, the theatre, or a social function, whose time is too valuable to lose during the day, and find the results all that could be desired.

Our prices are the same for either day or night Studio, 12 High Art Cabinets 10/6, 12 Coroco Cabinets and a Framed Enlargement 10/6; 12 High-class Bromide Cabinets, 15/6, or with a framed enlargement 21/; 12 Postcards 5/, or enclosed in our artistic and attractive folders 1/6 extra. They are most effective greeting cards. All other processes are equally reasonable.

All the good things that have been said of our day studio work can now be said of our night studio photographs.

STUDIOS OPEN FROM 9 A.M. TILL 9 P.M. SIX DAYS A WEEK, INCLUDING HOLIDAYS.

"BIBLE MYSTERIES."

Morning, 11.—Mr. W. J. SPENCER. Subject: "Difficulties Removed."

Dean Inge, of St. Paul's Cathedral, has publicly declared, "The choice of Sunday lessons is often and reasonably criticised. . . . The layman who has learned to think for himself . . . is not edified by what he considers the puerile legends of a barbarous Oriental tribe, inspired too often by ferocious patriotism and sacerdotal bigotry." Reference to the Holy Word in such terms must deeply grieve many pious souls.

It is surely a function of the Church to show that every portion of the Word of God contains instruction worthy of its Divine Authorship. This function the New Church endeavours to fulfil.

The special subject of the above discourse will be the Evening Lesson for the Day in the Book of Common Prayer, i.e., I. Sam., xiii.

We have Cars and Lorries that have had very little use going for half or less than half their original cost, and we are authorised by the owners to guarantee their condition. We have sold hundreds of Cars, and can refer you to satisfied clients throughout the country. We have Cars that have been taken as part payment for larger Cars of later models, and some that are portions of assigned estates.

Write to us, stating the class of Car you want, and we will forward particulars of the Car we would recommend for your purpose if we have one that would suit you. Should you purchase a larger Car or a New Car, we would take your small Car as part payment. We have Cars we can sell on terms.

THE CO-OPERATIVE MOTOR SOCIETY, LTD.,
45 HUNTER-STREET, SYDNEY.

EVENTUALLY YOU WILL—

Some people judge a car by its size—some by its paint—some by its lamps and accessories—for these reasons some people don't get satisfaction.

Think of the men in your district who own successful cars—what sort of men are they? Are they keen buyers and good judges? Or are they listless, weak-minded men that get carried away with the first article they see? No—when they bought their car they studied cars—dived into this point and that point. In the end they bought the car they thought most suitable to their roads and conditions—the car the other fellow had tried and found satisfactory.

"OAKLAND"

(with the pointed nickel radiator).

A medium size, medium weight car, containing every known improvement ever placed on motor cars—a car with "Delco" electric self-starting and lighting system—five tyres on five interchangeable rims—a luxurious, low set, flushsided body, with khaki-coloured hood and windscreen—the gear levers are on the driver's right—a door at the driver's right—underslung springs, and detachable cylinder heads. The best value obtainable around four hundred pounds.

"CHALMERS"

(the Premier Car for Australia).

The rough-road car—the car you cannot break—the car that you find away out back, where there are no roads—the car that will stand up for years under conditions which ruin other cars in a few months. Over 250 Chalmers in this State—fifty of them have gone over forty thousand miles each. A thoroughly-proven car—a perfect car—fitted with luxurious Australian-made body, and complete equipment, including 5 tyres on five interchangeable rims, and air pressure self-starters, £490.

"SINGER"

(the one Baby Runabout).

The little "Rolls Royce"—the miniature edition of the most perfect car ever built—the car without a competitor the car that sells in Sydney faster than all the other baby cars combined. It is a genuine motor car—will last as long as any car (on rough roads, too)—go faster than most cars—go where any car can go, and cost of upkeep less than any car.

In the "General Efficiency Trials" and the "R.A.C. Light Car Trials," the Singer proved its superiority over 60 small cars, and won both trials.

£285 Complete.

"ARROL-JOHNSTON"

(Built in Scotland).

The nearest approach to an ideal car for Australian conditions ever built in England or Europe—a car that tracks in a buggy track—has high clearance—enclosed mechanism—good, strong springs, and a body that won't warp and rattle to pieces—a car with a radiator large enough not to boil water—with strong, enclosed brakes and a frame made like the Firth of Forth bridge—a good car—a car that will be running in 20 years' time. In stock now. The 11.9 Model beat the best at the Wildwood Hillclimb in Victoria recently.

THE TRIUMPH OF THE MINERVA

AUSTRIAN ALPINE TRIALS.

News has just come to hand that the AUSTRIAN ALPINE TRIALS of 1820 miles, recognised as the World's Greatest Annual International Touring Contest, have resulted in an absolute win for the MINERVA CAR, out of a field of SEVENTY-FOUR STARTERS, comprising teams of the foremost cars of England, France, Germany, Italy, Belgium, Austria, and America, each of which countries had two or three teams of different makes entered. THE KNIGHT MINERVA won outright.

ISLE OF MAN TOURIST TROPHY RACE.

SWEDISH WINTER TRIALS.

Some little time before this, the Minerva scored an ABSOLUTE WIN in the SWEDISH WINTER TRIALS described in the "Autocar" as "APPALLING," and in the "Motor" as "THE MOST STRENUOUS TEST EVER HELD," in which out of sixty-one International competitors only twelve finished.

The standard 18 H.P. MINERVA completed the course without the loss of a single mark, winning this competition for the third time—a feat without parallel!

We have some fine examples of this magnificent car in stock.

SPEAKS WELL FOR THE "TRIUMPH."

1200 MILES WITHOUT A STOPPAGE FOR REPAIRS.

The man who has proved the superior running qualities of the TRIUMPH cannot help speaking well of it.

Every part of its mechanism is high-grade, and fills every requirement under all conditions.

The testimony of Mr. L. Norris, of Tallawang, emphasises this:—"I have much pleasure in stating that the Triumph Motor Cycle, which I purchased from you six weeks ago, is running splendidly. I have ridden it about 1200 miles in that time, and have been over some of the worst roads you could meet with, some of which are very hilly. The Motor is running splendidly, without a single stoppage for repairs since I have had it, which speaks well for the 'Triumph.' The machine is easy to manipulate, and is fast on the level. I often ride over 40 miles an hour. It is also a good hill-climber, and for reliability, neat appearance, and strength it would be hard to find a better. I can, with every confidence, recommend the Triumph to anyone requiring a Motor Cycle. Make what use of this you like."

LIFE IN LONDON AND THEREABOUT.

(CHRONICLED BY SIR HENRY LUCY.)

Home Rule Bill Sent on to the Lords.—"What Will They Do With It?"—The Tragedy of Parnell.—How Captain Cook Called it New South Wales.

WESTMINSTER, May 29.

There was singularly little excitement in the House of Commons, when, on Monday night, the three years' long struggle round the Home Rule Bill came to an end. It is a well-known characteristic of the House that it never long maintains or speedily renews an outburst of exceptional disorder. Even among the most reckless Die-hards there was a feeling of shamefacedness when reflecting on the scene of last Thursday. The fortunate interval of a week-end had provided their leaders with the opportunity to take counsel together, with the result that Mr. Bonar Law was authorised, doubtless personally disposed, to assume that authority over his followers he disclaimed on Thursday. The mot d'ordre was to get the third reading of the Home Rule Bill settled as quickly as possible, and so add a full day to the measure of the Whitsun holiday. As the leader of the Opposition put it in a phrase hugely appreciated by his followers, "Let the curtain ring down on the farce, and the sooner the better."

Thus it came to pass that within an hour of the order being reached, the Bill was read a third time, and promptly carried over to the House of Lords. The comparatively small majority, overwhelming in number compared with some that have carried equally momentous measures, was due to the abstention from the division lobby of Mr. William O'Brien, Tim. Healy, and their sparse following. This aloofness is not proof that they love Home Rule less than they did in former years, but that they hate John Redmond the more.

In spite of the increased hostility towards settlement of the Ulster question, noisily displayed in the Conservative camp, Ministers are hopeful that a more or less amicable conclusion will be arrived at. The Prime Minister is resolutely sanguine in the matter. He recognises the fact that with the Home Rule Bill actually added to the Statute Book a new condition of things will be created. The game of bluff will be played out. The terrible responsibility resting on the shoulders of leaders of the Conservative party, who have openly allied themselves with promoters of sedition and advocates of civil war, will be realised. In short, the actual business of bargaining will begin, and may be expected to be carried out on commercial principles. Each party will endeavour to obtain the better of the other, but in the end, after the manner familiar in Eastern bazaars, a middle price will be accepted.

It is a grim coincidence that at the very time Parnell's labours for Home Rule reach the stage of fruition there should appear through the agency of his widow what she calls, "His Love Story and Political Life." Oddly enough, in avowing the authorship, she writes herself down, "Katherine O'Shea," adding in explanatory brackets Mrs. Charles Stewart Parnell. Everyone is agreed that the work is indecorous and disloyal in its disclosures of the private life and confidential letters of a man one of whose striking characteristics was an almost fanatical reserve. It should, however, be admitted that, in order to arrive at that judgment, everyone must have read the book. It is almost brutal in the frankness of its revelations, more particularly to the discredit of Parnell's following in the House of Commons, and of Mr. Gladstone, who sacrificed place and power, shattering the Liberal party at a blow, in order to serve the national cause of which Parnell was the embodiment and the leader. According to Mrs. Parnell, he was accustomed to refer to the Liberal statesman as a "Grand Old Spider," and to the Irish Nationalist Party in the House of Comomns as "my rabble."

It may be well to take these and other offensive phrases which overload the two volumes with considerable grains of salt. The Irish members assembled in committee room No. 15 were naturally wrath with the man who had sacrificed the cause of his country on the altar of a passion treacherous to one who regarded himself as a bosom friend. As for Mr. Gladstone, when Parnell's guilty secret was made known in the Divorce Court, he plainly announced his resolution to withdraw from the Home Rule fight if Parnell maintained his prominent position in the van. These are things an angry and disgraced woman could not be expected to forgive. Having made opportunity for reprisal Mrs. Parnell does not neglect it.

In one curious important particular there is certainly no exaggeration in her delineation of the conduct of the Irish Parliamentary leader. He kept his colleagues at arms' length with an uncompromising roughness not excelled by the Czar of Russia or the Emperor of Germany in their dealings with subordinates. At one stage he is represented as saying to his "Queenie," "I could never keep my rabble together if I were not above the human weakness of apology. Never explain. Never apologise." I have personal recollection of an incident that bears out this revelation of character. One night in the early 'Eighties an important debate on Irish affairs raised by the Parnellites occupied the sitting. Their leader was conspicuously absent. Chancing to be in the lobby about 11 o'clock I saw him enter by the members' staircase opening from Palace Yard. He stopped to converse with me for some 5 minutes, and then passed on, not into the House but towards the library. Immediately he was out of sight Dick Power, the popular Irish Whip, asked me if I could tell him whether Parnell intended to take part in the debate. It struck me as a remarkable thing that the Whip of the party, chargeable with direction of its affairs, should not only have not been made aware in advance of the leader's intention in respect of the debate, but that he should refrain from the natural course of going up and asking him what he intended to do.

Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson are preparing for sale at the distant date of the 10th of July, same rare letters and manuscripts relating to the early history of Australia and New Zealand. Among them are a series of letters written by Captain Cook, giving an account of his first and second voyage of discovery in far southern seas. The letters are addressed to Mr. John Walker, a partner in the firm of Whitby shipowners, with whom Cook was bound apprentice. The manuscript, dated Mile-end, London, September 13, 1771, shows signs of age and frequent handling. It is torn at the folds and at the seal, and has been fondly but somewhat awkwardly mended. From the South Sea Islands, which Cook describes as "an earthly paradise," they made their way to New Zealand, a small part of whose west coast was discovered in 1642, by Tasman. Up to the time of Cook's arrival in H.M.S. Endeavour, it was believed that such land as had been discovered, formed part of one huge continent. Cook found it to be "two large islands, together nearly as big as Great Britain." It took him six months to circumnavigate them.

From New Zealand the hardy adventurer steered for discovered but unexplored land known to geographers of the day as New Holland. "I explored the coast of this country, which I call New South Wales," writes Cook, "to its northern extremity, in the doing of which we were many times in great danger of losing the ship. Once we lay twenty-three hours on a ledge of rocks, was obliged to throw our guns and many of our stores overboard." How Captain Cook would stare if he were by chance able to run a ship into Sydney Harbour, and thence proceed on an inland tour over the territory "I call New South Wales." After his second visit to Australia Cook reached England on July 29, 1775, and was promptly rewarded by an appointment at Greenwich Hospital. But the old sea lion pined in confinement ashore, and in the following year was at sea again.

THE SLIGHTED HUMANITIES

(BY REV. C. J. PRESCOTT.)

The warning uttered by Professor David at the recent Ascham speech day is specially timely. He said ("S.M. Herald," June 26) that there was a danger in laying too much stress on mathematics and science, and in the corresponding less time given to languages, literature, and history, which were the great subjects for elevating the character. The German gymnasiums showed 15 per cent. more time allotted to languages than was the case in the State High School curriculum, while the time given to mathematics and science was several points per cent. more. This is significant in itself; it is specially so in coming from Professor David. He is admittedly one of the foremost scientists in Australia. He is a Fellow of the Royal Society of London—one of the highest honours obtainable by a scientific man; yet he is a product of the old classical training, and in 1878 obtained a first-class at Oxford in classical moderations. He is not the only first rank scientific man whose early education was on quite different lines. Lord Kelvin has spoken of the benefit which a young scientist reaps by learning Greek in his youth, and his opinion was shared by that Rupert of scientific debate, Professor Huxley.

No one in these days is likely to urge much against the importance and the utility of science and mathematics. They are far too widely recognised. Indeed, stress should rather be laid upon this that they have an ideal aspect, which the practical man is too easily disposed to overlook. In the hands of a master like Poincare both are treated as great fields of culture, worth pursuit for their own sakes, quite independently of the material results that a material age emphasises as the most important. And the great triumph of the scientific method in spheres outside that of pure science—in history, in theology, in literature—is an indication that the study of science need not be, and is not really, something that ends in material results. These aspects, however, are not generally regarded by the average student, and perhaps too little is done to draw his attention to their existence. For the average student they would appear, if he knew them at all, rather as the by-products than the main outcome of his subject.

The prospects of the Faculty of Arts at Sydney University do not appear to be bright, except in so far as the teaching profession calls out an increasing number of students. In the old country the arts course attracts a large number of young men of private means, country gentlemen, and budding statesmen; it attracts also a large number of men intended for the Church, while many who go to the Bar elect to take an arts degree at Oxford or Cambridge before entering the Inns of Court. With us the case is totally different. We have very few belonging to the leisured class, and of these the tastes are not usually literary. The percentage of intending clergymen is not as large as it is desirable it should be, so that there are really very few from whom the arts classes can be supplied. Journalism is a calling that might be looked to to contribute to the arts school. But up to the present our principal and most successful journalists have been men who, in other callings, have discovered their aptitudes, and have passed by an easy transition into the service of our newspapers. Of literary men, pure and simple, we have very few; nor are the encouragements great. If many young men had the prospect of being able to live upon the profits of authorship we might look to an increase in the arts school from their number.

It is obvious, therefore, that the sources of supply for this department of university study are somewhat scanty and do not give much promise of extension, and the tendency of the other faculties to outstrip this one must steadily grow stronger. Once launched upon the study of medicine or engineering, it is goodbye for the students to all literary training. The demands are so great and the course is so exacting that the best men have no opportunity and soon lack the inclination to pursue any subject of the old humanistic colour. The prospect, then, for these subjects to play a considerable part in the moulding of the nation's thought and interest is distinctly gloomy. That we shall turn out an excellent body of doctors, engineers, dentists, and chemists is not to be doubted. We are doing it already, and the quality of the men equipped in our Australian universities reflects lasting credit, not merely upon university teachers, but upon the raw material they have to work upon. But, unless the past is a wholly fallacious guide, the absence of the influence of the other group of studies will give us one-sided men in these professions, and ultimately a restricted and one-sided view of life to the people generally. If there is any truth in the old conviction that the study of languages, literature, and history has a refining and guiding influence upon human character, then those who care for this must jealously keep watch lest that which has proved fruitful in the past should cease to be recognised to-day.

A cursory examination of the official syllabus and the regulations accompanying it gives the impression that all is right. For the intermediate examination at least six subjects must be studied, drawn from three groups. It is open to a boy then to select English, history, three languages, and one mathematical or scientific subject, and continue them for the leaving certificate. This would give a full preponderance to the humanities. But though permissible, such a choice will practically never be made. If a boy took such a group of subjects he would close the door of the University against himself; and even if he had no direct intention of entering it, he would probably be unwilling to close his school career without feeling that he had qualified himself to enter it later on if he changed his mind. And that consideration at once modifies the selection. Mathematics must be included, and continued, not as before up to the standard of a junior pass, but to that of the old senior pass, while they cannot be dropped until the leaving certificate examination at the end of the fourth year is completed.

For a boy with marked literary talents, but weak in mathematics—a not uncommon type—this is a very heavy demand. And it is made not by the University, but by the syllabus. The old matriculation requirements remain as before, with a simple standard for a mere mathematical pass. But if the road to the University is to be through the intermediate and leaving certificate examinations, a much larger proportion of time must be given to mathematics by all boys and girls.

The pathway of the young humanist is thus strewn with grave possible difficulties. But when we examine the way in which he (or she) is to pursue his studies when he gets to them, the lions in the path will begin to roar very loud. The average boy will take two languages. The boy of humanistic tastes will take three, and there are plenty of men now living who in the unenlightened days of a receding past took four in their school work. The question is not raised here as to the superiority or otherwise of the classical to modern languages, although educational text books of good authority state that the latter are usually taken for utility rather than culture. For the moment, they may be regarded as of equal culture value. But what is the position of the unlucky lad who is set to begin, as he must, two or three languages at the same time? As he must! If any one disputes this, he has only to refer to the syllabus just published. The four years' course of study is planned for each subject. It is utterly unfeasible to skip one for a year, and then crowd the two years' work of another language into one year. School exigencies make it compulsory that a boy must be in the same year for all his subjects. His first year's work must be done in the first year, and the third in the third.

Now, if there is one point on which our wisest educational authorities are agreed, it is that to begin two languages at the same time is a mistake. Here if the syllabus is to be carried out, it may be necessary to begin three. Those who know the difficulties of Greek accidence will be able to understand the unhappy lot of the boy who sets himself in two years to surmount them as well as his Latin accidence, to read a couple of authors in two new languages, while, at the same time, he is being pressed by his mathematical master to keep up to the mathematical collar, and his master in science not to diminish aught of his tale of scientific bricks.

The outlook for the humanities, then, does not appear reassuring. They are crowded out at the University. Professor MacCallum recently lamented "the exclusively one-sided development we have witnessed in the last twenty years." The same danger besets the schools. And yet we would not be pessimistic. Thirty years ago Matthew Arnold lamented a similar tendency in England. But he took heart of grace.

I cannot really think that humane letters are in much actual danger of being thrust out from their leading place in education, in spite of the array of authorities against them at this moment. So long as human nature is what it is, their attractions will remain irresistible. As with Greek, so with letters generally. They will some day come, we may hope, to be studied more rationally, but they will never lose their place. What will happen will rather be that there will be crowded into education other matters, far too many, there will be, perhaps, a period of unsettlement and false tendency, but letters will not in the end lose their leading place. If they lose it for a time they will get it back again. We shall be brought back to them by our wants and aspirations.

MRS. BESANT IN LONDON.

A MESSAGE FOR AUSTRALIA.

THE RISE OF THE COLOURED RACES.

(BY LESLIE CURNOW.)

LONDON, May 29.

At a recent church congress in London it was admitted with sorrow that more than half the churches in the metropolis were nearly empty on Sunday. For the past two Sunday evenings Mrs. Annie Besant, the head of the Theosophical Society, lecturing at the Queen's Hall, has had the large building packed from floor to ceiling with two thousand eight hundred people, and hundreds turned away each night. She is paying her annual visit to London, and, as she did last year, giving a course of four lectures.

It is a remarkable sight at the Queen's Hall—the aged, slightly bent but dignified figure clothed all in white, draped in a robe of Indian silk, marked with strange designs, wearing on her finger the large signet ring that Madame Blavatsky had.

As she quietly comes on to the platform and ascends the dais in the middle the great audience rises to its feet and stands, reverently, until this modern high priestess has taken her place before them. She bows gravely, and those present reseat themselves. Then for an hour and twenty minutes, without a break, save the punctuations of applause, she holds the audience spellbound. The voice, if it has lost the ringing vigour of former years, is still wonderful. In firm and incisive tones that penetrate to the farthest ends of the hall, and with hardly a movement of the hands or the body, the speaker pours forth her fervid gospel. Only the flashing eyes remain to remind one of the vibrant personality of long ago.

When you come to speak with Mrs. Besant you find in her a sweet graciousness of manner and a keen interest in many questions of the day. At the house of friends with whom she was staying at South Kensington a strange sight was encountered. Three motor cars were drawn up before the house, and within it was like the vestibule of a busy hotel, crowded with people, among them a number of Indians. Included in these were the two Indian boys on whose behalf Mrs. Besant has just won a victory in her appeal to the English courts to be allowed their care and education. She is sending them into the country in England to prepare for Oxford or Cambridge University.

Mrs. Besant was setting out to pay a visit to Bachelet's Laboratory to inspect the marvellous flying train or the "railway that runs on a road-bed of invisible impulses," as the inventor terms it. As her motor car worked its way through the traffic of London we talked. She is profoundly interested in Australia, partly because of her many friends and disciples there, but also in a large measure because the "White Australia" policy comes acutely in conflict with one of the biggest aims of her life—the uplifting of the coloured races.

Here is her message to Australia, delivered impressively under what were surely the strangest of surroundings:—

"Australia has a great future before it, but, unless care is exercised this prospect may be ruined. First it must remember that a nation does not only consist of its manual labouring classes; that, if legislation is exclusively in their favour, to the detriment of the professional, artistic, and leisured classes, there will be a new and less hopeful future.

"Secondly, if Democracy will recognise that the only safe leadership must be based on knowledge, character, and a sense of equal justice, and will discover the way to such endowed rulers of the country, it will in the end cultivate, as it seems now to be beginning to do, a willingness to submit to discipline, a sense of reverence for great ideals, a love of its country, and a spirit of self-sacrifice for its sake. Democracy must inevitably fail unless self-control precedes self-government."

In view of the fact that theosophy on its esoteric side is interested in world evolution, I turned the speaker's thoughts in this direction. "I think a new era of civilisation will soon begin," she said, "as the result of the coming of a great religious teacher." It has been frequently stated that Mrs. Besant regards one of the Indian boys for whose guardianship she fought the recent case as a great soul reincarnated, one who is to be a modern Christ, destined to bring about a great revival. The boy occupied the front seat of the motor car in which we were travelling—a slim, comely, but reserved youth, of about 18 years of age, with a high forehead, dreamy eyes, and long jet-black hair. I asked if she could say who was to be the great teacher. She only shook her head, and answered, "I cannot speak about him now." Continuing, she said: "The new age will be characterised by co-operation instead of competition. I think that the advanced coloured races will emerge, and obtain equality with the white races. I hope that this will come through the white races accepting the equality, and not as the result of a prolonged war. The policy of the British colonies in excluding Indians will, if persisted in, wreck the Empire. Indians express themselves strongly in regard to this attitude, and Australia is included in their stern resentment. They wish, indeed, to have Australians excluded from India unless Indians are admitted to Australia. They wish also to impose prohibitory duties upon Australian products. People in England or in the colonies do not recognise how radically India has changed within the last 10 years. Education is widespread, and the people are acquainted with what is going on in the world, with the result that there is a growing national feeling of retaliation against the exclusion policy of the colonies.

"Some people think that by voicing it the danger is increased. I don't; I think it is diminished. The Indians are a patient and forbearing race, but their patience and forbearance are being taxed beyond endurance. Three hundred millions of people cannot be held for ever in thrall, confined within their own gates, forbidden expansion without, and denied freedom within. A rude and sudden awakening must come if Great Britain and the oversea Empire persists in ignoring India's just claims for freedom and equality. Indians are loyal at present, but existing conditions are straining their loyalty to breaking point. Australia is constantly fretting over the possibility of an invasion from the Farthest East, but, in my opinion, there is grave need to look at India, which is a little less distant; for, although Japan may have vague designs upon the Commonwealth, that is more or less a contingency that might arise, from one cause or another, in any part of the world; but the unrest of the natives of India is due to questionings about their rights as British citizens. They are wondering—'Is it after all worth while?'"

As she spoke Mrs. Besant glowed with all the old propagandist fire. During her whole life she has been championing some cause, and is still the same ardent fighter. How much she has identified herself in spirit with her beloved Indian people was unconsciously revealed by a few simple words in her last lecture. In illustration of one of her points she said: "As one of your poets puts it," and then quoted the words of an English poet. It was just as if a German, a Frenchman, or any other foreigner were speaking.

At the Bachelet laboratory Mrs. Besant followed with the closest attention the extraordinary actions of the various models, a steel cylinder weighing 40lb, impelled by electric waves, rising in the air and passing rapidly in flight from one end of the room to the other, an aluminium plate lifted and poised in the air, successfully resisting all efforts to press it downwards into space. As we listened to the inventor's description of the wonderful forces at work, and how he had experimented, there came from him a sudden and remarkable tribute to Australia. He was telling of the long and difficult work of securing patents for his discoveries. He said: "Do you know where to find the smartest people in the world? It is not in England, not in France, not in Germany, not in America. It is in Australia. Yes (meditatively) they are the smartest people in the world. When I sought to secure my patents there they discovered a mistake in my plans, and they wrote and informed me of the fact. It took me and my engineer a week to find the flaw. It was there sure enough, but no other country in the world discovered it." As he uttered these words Mrs. Besant turned towards me and smiled, as though to say, "Tell the Australians that." Mrs. Besant, in parting, said that she looked forward to revisiting Australia within the next few years. It might be the year after next, but she would not commit herself to any definite time.

RUSSIAN TYPES.

II.—THE NOBLE.

(BY H. K. M.)

Let us take the life of an average noble. He will probably have one or more estates in one of the country governments and a house in St. Petersburg or Moscow. The summer he spends on his main estate, overlooking its administration, and indulging in hunting, shooting, fishing, or any other country sport possible in his district. During the winter and spring, however, he lives in his town house, where a greater variety of occupations is possible. In many cases he holds a military commission and has many regimental duties: or he may be a high official of some kind, or a senator. As military service for a certain period is compulsory in Russia for all except the eldest son, there is a great supply of officers drawn from the nobles, and many retire when they have reached the rank of colonel. This often occurs at a comparatively early age, and the retired officer's sole business in life henceforth is to manage his estates and engage in the numerous social diversions of St. Petersburg. If he is musical he is well provided for. Besides the large Opera House subsidised by the Czar, where Russian opera and ballet are produced, there are sometimes three or four other opera productions all going on at the same time. Then, all that is good in music is heard sooner or later in St. Petersburg. French and Russian theatres give performances through the winter. But apart from these public amusements there is a constant whirl of private balls lasting often till 5 o'clock in the morning, so that a man may go through the week without seeing daylight, which will have fled by the time he rises for breakfast. Many have this experience, for the social life of St. Petersburg is very strenuous, and when once caught in its swirl, they continue a fevered life which allows of no repose. It frequently happens that a family after a mad social career finds itself faced with financial ruin. The number of very rich families is small; the average income of a noble from his estates or official appointments will not support for an unlimited period the demands made by the extravagance and improvidence to which so many are constitutionally liable. Another result of this life is that a large number of the younger generation "go away," as it is called. A new scandal arises every day at St. Petersburg; when a man lives "fast" he goes really fast till he falls. Few families have not one such among their immediate circle or close relations. Usually the fall consists in literal and ghastly physical ruin. Sometimes it takes another turn. The son having exhausted his allowance and created more debts than he can carry, compelled to resign from his regiment and sick to death of his hot-house life, suddenly conceives a sentimental attachment to a fair-faced girl of the simple folk, whom he marries out of hand. These events occur anywhere, but in St. Petersburg and Moscow with extraordinary frequency. There is a peculiar lack of reserve strength in Russians of this class. They lack both the faults and virtues of class pride. They are Russian by birth, but possess nothing of the real spirit of Russia, attempting to supply this loss by a veneer of Western civilisation. "We lack character," many parents will complain, and try to supply the want by engaging English tutors for their young sons. This pursuit of social excitement is, of course, not common to all nobles. All families who are rich enough, however, have foreign tutors and governesses for their children. In the earlier years there is a German governess, followed later by a Frenchwoman. Formerly this was considered sufficient, but now in the higher and richer circles an English tutor is engaged at a later stage; a knowledge of English and English customs being considered essential. It is astounding the respect and consideration which Englishmen meet with in Russia to-day. The French are loved because there is something in their temperament kindred to Russians. But their respect is for the Englishman, and they admire him for solid qualities, above all for what they call his trustworthiness. Many shortcomings are forgiven him. The Russians themselves speak fluently and really well at least German, French, and English, besides their own language. At table they will change from one to the other according to the nationality of the person addressed. The Englishman rarely speaks more than French besides his own language, and then often with a vile accent. This is all taken as a matter of course, and in no way lowers their opinion of his capacities.

At a Russian noble's table the foreigner will find much that is new to him. There is a special Russian cooking which is good, though with nothing of the French excellence. At an ordinary meal there will usually be four courses, all of them strange to a newcomer. One is served by men servants, according to the western fashion. Occasionally the stranger may be shocked at the table manners. The younger generation of nobles have adopted entirely the ways of polite Europe, but in some cases there is a freedom of movement and mastication, which come as a surprise amidst well appointed surroundings. At the commencement of a meal in a devout family, all cross themselves facing the ikon, which is in the corner; this observance usually varies according to the standard of education. At the close the ceremony is repeated, followed by a stampede of all the diners towards the hostess, whose hand they kiss, thus rendering her thanks.

The kissing of the hand is a form of salutation accorded to married women, or to very close friends. It would be a lack of courtesy not to accord it where it is due, but yet one must not kiss the hand of an unmarried woman—at least, not officially. In case of doubt, therefore, it is better to abstain. Usage requires much formality in greetings. You shake hands, and raise your hat, when you meet and when you separate, even if the friend is a man and your bosom friend. Schoolboys walking home from school solemnly shake hands as they part. If it be your misfortune to take your departure from a room filled with people, you must first make the circle of the room, and shake hands with all present. As between a man and a woman the man takes the initiative in recognition—a curious reversal. Another small point, which is strictly observed, is that the woman occupies the right side of a carriage seat. In certain public places, military officers and schoolboys (and a fortiori ordinary soldiers) labour under special disabilities. Thus, at theatres or concerts, all military officers in uniform must remain standing all the time that the performance is not actually in progress. The reason for this is the possibility of there being a royal personage present, or someone to whom those bearing the Government uniform should show respect. Schoolboys who are never without their uniform must do the same, and in addition, are prohibited from sitting in a row nearer than the seventh from the front.

In St. Petersburg itself, unless he is very rich, the noble lives in a flat; this is explained by the large rent of all house property in the city. But there are many fine houses in the Colonies—too far from the city to be called suburbs, which have grown up around the various palaces within easy reach of the city. In a typical house, we shall find a double-doored lobby (every window and door is doubled in the winter), leading to a large entrance hall, hung with tapestry or pictures, and containing a substantial stand for many heavy winter coats. All the rooms are large. There will be two or three reception rooms, a dining-room, a "cabinet" for the colonel, and a boudoir for madame, all on the ground floor. Upstairs will be the bedrooms, each large enough to contain three respectable English bedrooms, and possibly a sitting-room for the daughter, if she is old enough for such a privilege. In most houses the woman is the dominating factor. There is little give or take or agreement of equal personalities—the Russian noble usually renders his wife a subserviency which his more positive nature demands. A man who in things outside his house administers with great ability, who has commanded bravely in wars, who, perhaps, has governed a province, bears himself towards his wife with a humbleness which produces in the latter an under-current of contempt. It is she who plans the education of her children, who decides a career for her son, who persuades her husband to break other ties so that he may have more time in which to accompany her to social functions or on travels in Europe. Another side of this dominance of women is seen in the sudden passionate love-attachments of girls, often quite young. Many marriages, of course, come about as they do elsewhere, following the regular stages; but the strength of passion is sometimes terrible. In such a case the lack of response will goad a girl almost to madness. Forfeiting her woman's pride, she bends all her energies to bringing to herself the mate she has chosen, threatening suicide even, and —she wins in the end.

WHERE IS HEAVEN?

A remarkable sermon was preached recently by Dean Inge, in St. Paul's Cathedral, London, on the subject of Heaven. The preacher has earned for himself the soubriquet of the "gloomy dean," and his sermon did nothing to rob him of the title. He said he did not think there ever was a time when professing Christians thought less about Heaven than they did to-day. As long as the clergy talked of politics, and the subjects of the world and the flesh, men listened eagerly, but as soon as the question of a hereafter was introduced, attention flagged at once. The ideal Heaven, according to the working man, was an ideal state of society, which should be set up on this earth in the more or less near future. To him, Heaven had no spiritual value; due, he believed, to the fact that Heaven had been so frequently pictured by Christians in such a way as to deprive it of its spiritual value. Heaven was not a geographical expression, neither was Eternity to be confined within the framework of time. There might be a second edition of this world, in which case all the injustices which had been borne by mankind would probably be put right. A world might be anticipated in which the righteous could enjoy themselves in a most refined manner. "Many," said the dean, "are apt to look upon Heaven as a fairy story, and amongst them the most prominent appear to be those who are most in earnest in endeavouring to improve the condition of human society in this world. Many of them think, unjustly, that the clergy are trying to keep them quiet, to give them promissory notes to paid in another world that does not exist. They look upon the doctrine of the future life as a profitable fraud, which has at last been exposed. They now say they prefer payment in cash, as the bank in the skies has stopped payment. To put our beliefs in such crude and materialistic form is to not only impoverish the ideal, but to add a spurious form which cannot be defended in argument. The average man knows something about astronomy; he knows enough at any rate to feel the absurdity of placing Heaven either inside or outside the solar system. And the result is that the clergy are perplexed themselves, and so say as little about Heaven as they possibly can."

THE SAINT OF CHINA.

The Churches of Christ in New South Wales are looking forward eagerly to the arival of Dr. William Ewart Macklin, a distinguished physician, missionary, and statesman, from Nanking, China. He is due to arrive in Sydney on Saturday next by the steamer St. Albans, from the East. The doctor will be accompanied by his wife, and three children. Some three or four months will be spent in Australia visiting the churches and lecturing upon the situation in the East.

For 25 years he has been stationed at Nanking, and took a prominent part in the Boxer rising, being instrumental in saving many lives. As a translator he is well known. Amongst his works are translations into Chinese of the lives of such eminent men as Cromwell, Wickliffe, Thomas Jefferson; and also such solid works as Greene's "History of England," Schiller's History of the Thirty Years War," Henry George's "Progress and Poverty." Dr. Osgood, one of his co-workers, says: "In the hearts of thousands of Chinese in this part of the Empire Dr. Macklin is one of the greatest of men."

Lord Hugh Cecil, of England, is credited with sayings: "He was the saint of China." Dr. Sun Yat Sen, the first president of the Republic, met him daily when he was acting as president, in order that he might get the doctor's views on constitutional history. Dr. Macklin is coming as the guest of the Federal executive of the churches in Australia, and will attend the Federal Conference in Adelaide in September next. On Sunday, July 12, he is planned to preach at the City Temple (morning), C.M.M., Lyceum Hall (afternoon), and Enmore Tabernacle (night).

There was a great demonstration in the Albert Hall, London, on the occasion of the completion of the Baptist sustentation fund of £250,000, raised for the purpose of supplementing stipends of the ministers. An ovation was given the Rev. J. H. Shakespeare, on whom the main work of the fund had fallen.

Mr. J. T. Furnass, of the London Evangelisation Society, whose services were obtained by the Evangelical Council to conduct missions, in lieu of the Rev. Harry Owen, who was taken ill, has now completed missions at Lambton, Islington, Tighe's Hill, Merewether, and Aramstown.

CURRENT LITERATURE.

AMONG THE PENGUINS.

The extraordinary human characteristics of the penguin have been noted by many They inspired M. Anatole France, for instance, in his brilliant satire, "The Island of the Penguins," and they have provided Dr. G. Murray Levick with material for a most interesting book, "Antarctic Penguins: A study of their Social Habits." The author was zoologist to the Scott Expedition; close to the camp at Cape Adare was a huge rookery colonised by these birds, and Dr. Levick had some three-quarters of a million of them under observation. The species of which he writes is not the great "Emperor" penguin, which weighs up to 90lb, and hatches its eggs at a temperature of minus 78 deg. Fahrenheit. His friends were the little Adelie penguins, which stand about two and a half feet high, and walk very upright on tiny legs. "When seen for the first time the Adelie penguin gives you the impression of a very smart little man in evening dress, so absolutely immaculate is he, with his shimmering white front and black back and shoulders."

They migrate to Antarctica in the spring for the breeding season, then when winter draws near go north again to the pack ice, often hundreds of miles away. What happens to them subsequently is not ascertained but the next spring finds them back at their old haunts. They begin to arrive early in October, swimming, walking or "tobogganing" as the author describes their curious method of locomotion. "When wearied by walking, or when the surface is particularly suitable, they fall forward on to their white breasts, smooth and shimmering with a beautiful metallic lustre, in the sunlight, and push themselves by alternate powerful little strokes of their legs behind them." Some rested from their long journey, but often curiosity, a marked characteristic of penguins, overcame weariness. The author mentions that his party was encamped about 50 yards from the sea. "Parties of penguins frequently landed here, and almost invariably the first thing they did on seeing our tents was at once to walk up the slope and inspect these, walking all round them, and often staying to doze by them for hours." Then the serious business of courting and housekeeping began. The penguin's nest is composed of stones, and the wooer seeks to win his lady's favour by the gift of one. The female merely scoops a shallow hole and sits in it. She does not attempt to build while unmated. The males fight among themselves for the honour of proposing to her, and the victor, whose prowess has cleared the field of rivals, proceeds to pay his attentions in quite an orthodox fashion. "He would, as a rule, pick up a stone and lay it in front of her if she were sitting in her 'scoop,' or, if she were standing by it, he might himself squat in it. She might take to him kindly, or, as often happened, peck him furiously. To this he would submit tamely, hunching up his feathers and shutting his eyes while she pecked him cruelly. Generally after a little of this she would become appeased. He would rise to his feet, and, in the prettiest manner, edge up to her, gracefully arch his neck, and with soft guttural sounds pacify her and make love to her. It is difficult to convey in words the daintiness of this little scene. It was wonderful to watch one of these hardy little cocks pacifying a fractious hen by the perfect grace of his manners."

Then comes the important business of building the nest if the happy couple are not fortunate enough to have found one left vacant from the year before. Stones are in great demand, and the stone thief is by no means uncommon. "Depredators, when caught, were driven furiously away, and occasionally chased for some distance, and it was curious to see the difference between the fleeing thief and the pursuer. As the former raced and ducked about amongst the nests, doubling on his tracks, and trying by every means to get lost in the crowd, his feathers lay close back on his skin, giving him a sleek look which made him appear half the size of the irate nest-holder who sought to catch him with feathers ruffled with indignation." The consciousness of guilt, we are told, always makes a penguin look small, while anger has the opposite effect. The author tells us how he coloured some stones red, and bound others with green thread. The red ones were most popular, and soon were utilised for furnishing. The green ones were taken less quickly, but before long they, too, went to delight some housewife's heart.

When the hens are sitting the community enforces some sort of order, and puts down quarrelling and disturbance with a firm hand. Dr. Levick describes how two brawlers were promptly separated and sent about their business by their neighbours. After the egg is hatched the parents take it in turns to go and feed on the prawn-like euphausia which swarm in the Antarctic seas, and are the penguin's staple diet. However, by-and-bye a new problem arises. One bird cannot alone bring enough to satisfy the growing chick, while if both went off to forage, leaving him by himself, he might stray away and get lost, or be carried off by a skua gull, or be hurt by a "hooligan," as the author calls the bachelors and widowers who, lacking the refining influence of domesticity, fall into evil ways, and appear to form a very undesirable element of the penguin population. To meet the difficulty they have evolved quite an advanced achievement of communal enterprise. "The individual care of the ducks by their parents is abandoned, and in place of this the colonies start to pool their offspring, which are herded together into clumps or 'creches,' each of which is guarded by a few old birds, the rest being free to go and forage."

So much for the serious side of their life. Their relaxations are many and various. They spend hours playing a sort of "touch last" on the flat ice. Another pastime is boating. Small ice floes were continually drifting past the rookery, and "as one of these arrived it would be boarded by a crowd of penguins, sometimes until it would hold no more. This 'excursion boat' would float its many occupants down the whole length of the ice foot, and those that rode on the floes would shout at the knots of penguins gathered along the ice foot, who would shout at them in reply, so that a gay bantering seemed to accompany their passage past the rookery. At the farther end, half a mile down, those on the 'excursion boat' had perforce to leave it, all plunging against the tide, and swimming against this until they came to the top again, then boarded a fresh floe for another ride. All day these floes, often crowded to their full-est capacity, would float past the rookery." Another diversion was diving. The object of every bird in the party was to get one of the others to enter the water first. "They would crowd up to the very edge of the ice dodging about, and trying to push one another in. Sometimes those behind nearly would succeed in pushing the front rank in, who then would just recover themselves in time, and, rushing round to the rear, would endeavour to turn the tables on the others. . . . . When they had succeeded in pushing one of their number over, all would crane their necks over the edge, and when they saw the pioneer safe in the water the rest followed." Everyone has seen a similar spectacle at any swimming bath where small boys congregate. But the approach of winter puts an end to work and play alike. Before the long Antarctic night falls the rookeries are deserted, and their inhabitants have migrated north until the returning sun brings them back again. Dr. Levick has written a delightful book, and its numerous illustrations are unique of their kind. (Heinemann: G. Robertson.)

THE HOME UNIVERSITY LIBRARY.

The latest instalment of the Home University Library contains, as usual, several books which will appeal to the most varied tastes. One of the most interesting of these is a biography of William Morris, by Mr. A. Clutton Brook. The author tells the story of the life of Morris as poet, artist, craftsman, and agitator with an account of his friendships and an estimate of his literary works, his ideas, and influence. Morris was a man whose career was guided by his conception of art. He held that art was everybody's business, whether they were themselves artists or not, and by art he did not mean merely statues and pictures. "Indeed," says Mr. Brook, "he thought little of these compared with all the work of men's hands that used to be beautiful in the past, and now is ugly. The ugliness of houses, tables and chairs, clothes, cups and saucers; in fact, of everything that men made, whether they tried to make it beautiful or were content that it should be ugly—this universal ugliness at first troubled him like a physical discomfort without his knowing why." He sought the solution in the revival of old processes, and the invention of new ones, in which the maximum of utility could be combined with the maximum of beauty. At Merton Abbey he applied his principles to the manufacture of all sorts of commodities from carpets to cotton goods, and glass to embroidery. He was no mere dilettante, but a very capable craftsman, and Mr. Brook gives us many instances of his thoroughness. For instance, Morris came to the conclusion that patterns for dyed stuffs were unsatisfactory unless the designer had technical knowledge of the process of dyeing, and so he at once mastered the art from beginning to end, studying old French works on the subject, herbals and even Philemon Holland's translation of Pliny. In the same way he made himself an expert weaver of tapestries in order that in his designs the practical knowledge of the craftsman could prevent the artist from transcending the possibilities of the medium. Morris's attitude towards socialism arose from his conviction that beauty should be part of the daily life of all, instead of the privilege of the few. His socialism was based on esthetic rather than on economic theory. He felt that modern social organisation, particularly in its industrial aspects, was responsible for all the ugliness and sordidness and monotony of existence, and he saw no alternative but to sweep the whole fabric away. Although his Socialism, ignoring as it did all economic considerations, was unscientific, it has already produced greater results than all the cut and dried formulas of his contemporaries put together. It is largely to Morris's influence that we owe the modern enthusiasm for the beautification of cities and homes, and the recognition of the fact that the better the surroundings the better the work done therein.

Other new volumes of the series are "Chaucer and His Times," in which Miss Grace E. Hadow tells the story of Chaucer's life and analyses his works, emphasising his characterisation, humour, and descriptive power, and showing his far-reaching importance in the subsequent history of British literature; "The Church of England," in which Canon E. W. Watson, the Regius Professor of Ecclesiastical History at Oxford, gives a bird's-eye view of the development of the Anglican Church from its foundation through the troubled times of the medieval system and the Reformation, to the quiet of to-day; and "The Growth of Europe," in which Professor Grenville Cole shows how the present physical structure of Europe has arisen, and how it influences present-day life in that continent. (Williams and Norgate.)

THE DUTCH INDIES.

Readers of the "Herald" will doubtless remember a number of interesting articles on the Dutch East Indies by Professor Macmillan Brown, which appeared in these pages some time ago, and will welcome their publication with additions in book form, under the title of "The Dutch East." The author's travels took him well out of the beaten track to all manner of tiny ports and islands, where the average tourist never penetrates. For instance, there is the Gulf of Boni in Celebes, where it is only four years since the last pirate empire was shattered. There is the "forgotten outpost" of Kissa, where a little detachment of soldiers was sent in 1665 by the Dutch East India Company. Apparently the authorities failed to remember their existence; at any rate, they were left unvisited and unrelieved, and finally reconciling themselves to the inevitable, settled down to support themselves. They had their European wives with them, and their descendants are there to this day, a fine virile breed, which has retained its race, and its religion through the centuries, though it has lost its Dutch language. However, to follow the author's itinerary in detail would be impossible. He has a keen sense of observation, and a faculty for picturesque and vivid description, and his accounts of the places he visited and the manners and customs of their denizens, are full of interest. He propounds rather a novel theory about the degeneration of Europeans in the tropics. The reason he thinks is not the climate, bad though it may be, but the slackness of life which is the rule in these latitudes. Where life is too easy man becomes demoralised, and this applies to the natives as well as to the white population. If they do not have to struggle for subsistence, they become idle, shiftless, and decadent. In the East Indies the chief agent of degeneration is the sago-palm, which has reduced the necessity of work to a minimum. The author devotes a whole chapter to "The Curse of Sago." This tree provides the native with almost everything he needs, from cradle to grave. Its leaves furnish him material for his roof and walls. A single tree makes food enough to last a family for six months. And, finally, every native has his private gin palace in the sugar-palm, whose sap, as it drips through a little bamboo distiller hung below a slit in the stem, is converted into a sort of toddy. The islands where such lotus-eating conditions prevail might be thought to be earthly paradises, but the author significantly adds that their inhabitants were "the dirtiest, most nose-offending, most diseased natives" that he had ever seen.

Professor Macmillan Brown found that the possibility of Japan entertaining hostile designs against Australia was not taken very seriously in these regions. If he mentioned the "Japanese menace," the usual reply was an incredulous smile or a burst of laughter, and he seems to hold the same views. He points out that if Japan meant ultimate mischief for Northern Australia, she would flood not New Caledonia but Timor with her subjects and spies, and Timor, which belongs partly to Holland, partly to Portugal, and is not very effectively occupied by either, might easily be taken if trouble arose in Europe. But with Java, Saigon, and the Philippines in the hands of friendly Powers, and India, Hongkong, and Singapore in the hands of England, what chance would Japan have of keeping the Northern Territory, even if she seized it? "The real danger," he declares, "lies in quite another direction. One of the first steps that Germany would take, if her war party succeeded in embroiling her with England or France, would, it is generally acknowledged, be to seize Holland and Belgium. If she succeeded in retaining Holland, Java would fall into her hands, and thereafter there would be no peace for Australia and her unoccupied Northern Territory. When she seized it (and she would have no difficulty in manufacturing a pretext for doing so), she could fill it with Javanese, who would soon flood it with population, and begin to grope their way southward." The author's views on the non-existence of a Japanese peril to Australia are not shared by many distinguished students of world politics, but, be the menace German or Japanese, the moral that we should fill our land and prepare to defend ourselves is indicated with equal clearness. (Kegan Paul.)

IN THE HIMALAYA.

"In Kulu and Lahoul" Lieut.-Colonel the Hon. C. G. Bruce relates his experiences in a little-known corner of India. Kulu and Lahoul are the names of two districts in the Himalaya, lying between Kashmir and Thibet. The mountains in the neighbourhood do not rise to the height of an Everest or an Austin Godwin, but there are countless snow-clad peaks of twenty thousand feet or so, and the whole district is a veritable paradise for mountaineers. The author's object was to climb, and he brought with him a Swiss guide, whose assistance proved invaluable. Together they scaled some notable heights, and Lieut.-Colonel Bruce describes these exploits in a graphic fashion. To one who is not a mountaineer this part of the book may seem a little tedious, but he will find plenty to interest him in the accounts of native life and customs. High up on wind-swept passes the author would meet long trains of sheep and goats, each with its load. Those going north would be carrying little sacks of grain for consumption in Thibet, while those coming south bore immense rolls of wool or bags of Thibetan salt and borax. Every year there is immense migration. The flocks are driven up to the lofty grazing grounds, whence the snow has melted, and as winter approaches they are driven back again to the valleys. Through Kulu alone some two hundred thousand pass in this way. Thibetan influence is very marked in the social life of the people. The villages are full of monasteries and lamas, but the Buddhism the latter profess is of a debased kind. They marry, and do not eschew strong waters. Tea, however, is the principal drink, the famous brick-tea of Thibet. The author found that it was a most overrated stuff. "It is churned up in a special utensil with ghee (rancid butter) and other savouries, and comes out a thick and smelly soup rather than tea." A delightful chapter on "A Lady's Point of view" is contributed by Mrs. Bruce, who had to stay behind when the more strenuous climbs were afoot, and was thus able to get into closer touch with the people, particularly the feminine portion thereof. (Edward Arnold.)

Dr. Ernest F. Neve has been connected with medical missions in Kashmir for more than a quarter of a century, and is therefore to be regarded as an authority on the country. "Beyond the Pir Panjal" is a most interesting book, which describes Kashmir from every point of view. The author writes of its history, its people, its religions, its industries, its striking contrast of frowning peaks and blossoming valleys. He has a good deal to say about the progress of the missions, and gives us an excellent picture of the active life which the medical missionary leads. The book is illustrated with a number of remarkable photographs. (Morgan and Scott.)

SOME NEW NOVELS.

Writers by the score have chosen the theme of a crisis in a man's life producing a spiritual renascence. Usually it has the effect of changing him from an unbeliever into an earnest and sincere Christian, but in "Time and Thomas Waring" Mr. Morley Roberts prefers to bring the converse to pass. Thomas Waring is a journalist of some distinction, and a conforming Christian in faith if not in works. Indeed, he is not a shining example of consistency. He has turned his son out of the house for an irregularity of which he has been guilty for years, and has bullied his daughter because she, too, wishes to defy convention and follow the dictates of her own heart. Then he has to undergo a serious operation, and emerges from the anesthetic a changed man. Conventional morality now appears to him a very trifling matter, and the Christian creed strikes him as narrow and intolerant. He is in fact a "religious atheist," and ethically a far superior individual to the old Thomas Waring. Everyone remarks the improvement, and he, with his new and gentle outlook, is reconciled to his son, sends his daughter to her happiness with his blessing, settles his mistress in life, and then, when his trouble reappears, dies full of contentment. There is little action in the book, for Mr. Roberts is concerned rather to show us his protagonist's spiritual and mental processes, and the author has not discovered any great new truth. He has simply shown us that a man who professed Christianity in a formal way, but did not act in accordance with its teaching, became a far better person, though he had renounced mere theological dogma. Indeed, one might say that Thomas Waring was in fact, if not in name, much more of a Christian after his operation than before. (Nash: G. Robertson.)

Mr. Horace W. C. Newte is making quite a reputation for himself as the delineator of a common London type, the lower orders in that hierarchy of chorus girls, shop-girls, typewriters, and so forth, who fill the cheaper suburbs and lead dreary, monotonous lives, unless some fortunate accident lifts them out of the rut. Jane Alma Inkerman Gibbs, the heroine of "The Cuckoo Lamb," is one of the lucky ones. She owes her name (as she is careful to explain) to the fact that her father was a Crimea veteran, and with such a tradition to live up to we can hardly wonder that she prospers. She is by turns "assistant housekeeper" (a euphemism for "maid-of-all work") in a suburban emporium, where the young ladies live in. She becomes a shop girl, and finally develops into a successful author. We confess that we are most interested in her early experiences, for there Mr. Newte is seen at his best in describing her companions with their pleasures and sorrows, their vulgar pretensions, and their casual love affairs. Mr. Newte shows less insight than Mr. Wells in his portrayal of these types, and he is less kindly than Mr. Pett Ridge, but he nevertheless knows them well, and can draw them with an intimate and graphic pen. (Chatto and Windus.)

"The Home Breakers" is an anti-militant suffragist novel, whose author, the publishers tell us, is "a popular and well-known novelist, who desires to remain anonymous." The story is quite a readable one, and is free from that absurdity and unfairness which usually characterise books written for or against the cause. An Englishman returns to his native land after 11 years spent in governing an outpost of the Empire, and is shocked at the change which has come over social and political life during his absence. His disgust is increased when he learns that his sister is in gaol for participating in a "demonstration," and that his dearest friend has married a leader of the militant movement. He sees Elinor wearing herself out over what he considers to be utter nonsense, and he sees the Campions' house divided against itself for the same reason. Campion has the chance of a brilliant political career offered to him, but a condition precedent is that his wife must dissociate herself from militancy. This she will not do, and the pair, for all their mutual love, grow more and more estranged. In the end there is a reconciliation, while Gifford weds an ex-militant, who has seen the error of her ways. Poor Elinor, alone faithful to the cause, renounces love and wifehood in order to continue the battle. The author is a thorough believer in woman's franchise, but she (or he) pins her faith to Constitutional agitation. She has a poor opinion of the old-fashioned prejudice which denies the vote to women, and she fully appreciates the capacity and devotion and heroism of those who adopt militant tactics. But she feels that these are misguided, and that the good accomplished by them is outweighed by the evil. When the franchise is granted, as it assuredly will be, it will be due to the unostentatious but very practical work of the Constitutionalists rather than to the misdirected and hysterical outbreaks of the militants. (Hurst and Blackett; G. Robertson.)

In "The Lapse of Enoch Wentworth," Miss Isobel Gordon Curtis gives a new turn to the old idea of one man binding himself to the service of another. Wentworth, the journalist, and Merry, the actor, are playing poker together, and finally they agree upon an unusual stake, the future of their lives. The loser is to sign a document pledging himself to the winner in mind, body, and estate, and fortune decrees that Merry is the one to put himself in pawn. Subsequently he writes a play, and Wentworth, reminding the other of his bond, demands that it should be given to the world as his work. Merry's dreams of fame and hopes of love are shattered for the moment, but the experienced reader will guess that all will be well in the end. Wentworth realises that his insistence on his pound of flesh will spoil two lives, and magnanimously forgoes his "claim." The denouement is satisfactory to all concerned. There is nothing particularly distinguished, either in subject or in treatment, but the book will serve to occupy an idle hour. (Browne and Co.; G. Robertson.)

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

In London the important event of the last week in May has been the first production of Italo Montemezzi's opera, "L'Amore dei Tre Re," which "Love of Three Kings" had already made a stir on the Continent and in New York. The medieval plot, briefly put, centres round the guilty love of Princess Fiora for Avito during the absence of her husband, Manfredo, at the wars. Her blind father-in-law detects her, strangles her in a fury of rage, and then cunningly smears the dead woman's lips with poison, feeling sure that Avito will take a fatal kiss. The dying Avito confesses to the distracted husband, who thereupon ends his life in the same way. The avenger, groping his way in, learns of the mischief he has wrought only by stumbling over the bodies of the slain. The book is said to be well worked out, the music is refined, with a great deal of "atmosphere," but the London critics find that it lacks melodic interest and beauty. Mme. Edvina was the heroine. At the Comedy Theatre "Plaster Saints" (May 24), a new play by Israel Zangwill, has been pronounced dull. The central character is Dr. Vaughan (taken by Edward Sass, well-remembered on this side some 15 years ago), a clergyman of evil life, who defends himself in tedious, melodramatic speeches.

The Beethoven "Pianoforte Concerto No. 4, in G," which is to be played this afternoon by Mr. Leonard Borwick, in association with the Sydney Symphony Orchestra, is one of ten compositions dedicated to the Archduke Rudolph of Austria by the Bonn master, and was composed in 1805. Beethoven himself conducted the first performance in Vienna, when also the great composer introduced the "Symphony in C Minor," the "Pastoral Symphony," and the "Choral Symphony"—an occasion without parallel in the entire history of music. Viennese connoisseurs merely grumbled at the length of the programme! Similarly, when the London Philharmonic introduced the concerto in 1825, with Cipriani Potter, Beethoven's pupil, as soloist, the critic of the leading journal also complained of the length of the programme, and merely remarked of the new and beautiful work of art thus revealed to the world, "The 'Concerto' of Beethoven was well played by Mr. Potter, who shows an excellent feeling for music of this high class." Later the Concerto underwent various fortunes, and it took no hold upon the affections of the public till Mendelssohn caused it to be played in Paris during his visit to that city in 1832. The world is under a debt of gratitude to Mendelssohn, the reviver of so many other unjustly neglected compositions. He introduced this concerto at the Liepsic Gewandhaus' concerts four years later, when it was appreciated, and enthusiastically praised by Schumann.

Mr. Field Fisher, who has so successfully created for Australia the high comedy role of Dragotin in "Gipsy Love," belongs to an old Cambridgeshire family, which held Lees Hall, Cockington, for four centuries. The last tenant was his grandfather, a Field Fisher who was M.P. for the district and Deputy-Lieutenant for the county of Cambridgeshire. The historic failure of Overend, Gurney, and Co., ruined him, and on his death his eldest son was unable to keep up the country house, which is now a school for boys. The family migrated to Bedford Park, London, where the juvenile members joined a youthful amateur dramatic club at a time when it included Ellaline Terriss, Tom Terriss, Sybil Arundale, Muriel Beaumont (Mrs. Gerald Du Maurier), and several others who became distinguished as artists in later life. At this period of his schooldays young Field Fisher joined the Lyceum Company, and as a child sat on Ellen Terry's lap when she played Queen Henrietta Maria to Henry Irving's "Charles I." and later in life he joined a brother and two sisters in forming the Fisher Quartette in a musical entertainment—violin, piano, harp, singing, and acting. This lasted eight or nine years, and brought the family in much money, together with various appearances before Queen Victoria, King Edward, and, through the influence of their grandfather's friend, the Duke of Abercorn, various other royalties. Ultimately, Mr. Fisher remained for five years with the late Laurence Irving, with whom he twice visited America, and he was the Prince Arthur in Tree's London production of "King John." His first appearance in musical comedy was as the Prince in the original production of "The Rose and the Ring" (Prince of Wales' Theatre), and he played George Grossmith's part on tour for three years in "Peggy," followed by G. P. Huntley's part on tour in "Three Little Maids." Mr. George Edwardes then secured him for Brissard in "The Count of Luxembourg," and later for Dragotin in the same touring combination, from which he left for Australia under J. C. Williamson, Ltd.

The Australian Opera League is attracting such general financial support that the hon. secretary (Mr. G. De Cairos Rego) notifies that the membership list is now nearly full. Some important engagements have been made for the production, a month hence, of Alfred Hill's opera "Giovanni," and Fritz Hart's "Pierrette." Mr. Reginald Roberts, besides directing affairs, will sing the role of Pierrot. In Alfred Hill's new work Mr. Philip Newbury will make a welcome reappearance as Giovanni, with Miss Florence Young as Princess Violetta, Miss Muriel Barton as Gianetta, and Miss Dulcie Huxtable as Amina. The idea of this opera is to show how, in the pursuit of fame, a man may pass by the greater treasures of life, which, perhaps, lie close at hand. It is also somewhat in the nature of an allegory. Thus, the character of Gianetta represents motherhood, Violetta the lure of fame, Alberto the power of money, and Amina typifies love in its highest and purest sense. The story deals with the career as a sculptor of Giovanni, an ambitious village lad, who leaves his little sweetheart Amina in order to study in Florence under the patronage of the wealthy Count Alberto. The second act shows the hero five years later enamoured of the Princess Violetta, betrothed to Count Alberto. This aristocratic coquette persuades him to finish his statue of her for the annual competition, although Amina has written, imploring him to visit his ailing mother. In the last act he receives the news of his mother's death, and of Violetta's approaching marriage with the Count Alberto, simultaneously with the now empty congratulations of his fellow-students as prize-winner. He is about to commit suicide when Amina arrives at the studio. Her presence awakens in Giovanni the purer passion of his boyhood, and by her he is recalled to life and love.

Miss Kate Rooney, who has not been heard of this year, has been in America since last summer, when she at once accepted a series of engagements to sing at the Long Island Summer Homes with Raffaelo Diaz, a Spanish operatic tenor, who had toured with Tetrazzini. During the fall, Miss Rooney toured first the New England States, and then those of the Middle West, thus reaching New York for the winter season, during which she made appearances at the Aeolian and Carnegie Halls, and with the German Liederkrantz. Besides introducing Helen Brown's new songs at the National Arts Club, and at the Plaza Hotel, the Sydney contralto was the first to sing Carpenter's new setting of the "Gitanjali," or "Song Offerings," by Rabindranath Tagore, at the Waldorf Astoria, and press-cuttings to hand refer to many Irish Festival engagements, and to her election to the Rubinstein, Beethoven, and National Arts Clubs. Miss Rooney is now in England again with her husband, Mr. Kirkham, who will purchase a fine old Tudor house at Ipswich, dated 1570, and re-erect it at the San Francisco Exhibition in May next. Mr. Kirkham, who is an English expert on antique art, shipped another old Tudor mansion at Ipswich for New York's leading architect, Mr. Phelps Stokes, and re-erected it for him at Greenwich, Connecticut, so that the operation is familiar. Mr. Kirkham has in his New York art gallery an oak-panelled room taken from the house in which Cardinal Wolsey was born, so that his interests, as well as his wife's, are now on that side of the Atlantic. They will accordingly return in September, and Miss Rooney will meanwhile study Amneris, Delilah, Azucena, and Carmen in order to join Dr. Robyn's touring grand opera company under the Metropolitan Bureau. This will form an entirely new departure in her career.

THE CHURCHES.

Y.M.C.A. JUBILEE.

Considerable interest is being manifested in all the churches in the forthcoming jubilee of the Sydney Young Men's Christian Association. The great demonstration is to be held in the Sydney Town Hall. Sir Thomas Anderson Stuart will preside, and the occasional oration will be delivered by the Rev. J. D. Jones, of Bournemouth, the commissioner from the Congregational Union of England and Wales. Mr. Jones has been one of the principal speakers on behalf of the English National Council of the Young Men's Christian Associations at past British conferences.

Members of the association are also interested in the first world's conference of Y.M.C. Associations, which is to be held at Trinity College, Oxford, on July 14 to 20. Special reports of commissions will be presented by Denmark, Germany, United States, Sweden, Canada, France, and India. Mr. J. J. Virgo, late of the Sydney, and now of the London association, will probably represent Australia.

The world-wide aspect of Y.M.C.A. work is shown by a statement by Professor Inago Nitobe, of the Imperial University of Tokio, who says that the Japanese Y.M.C. associations are realising universal brotherhood and social responsibility of the individual, while its religious work uplifts the masses everywhere throughout the Empire.

English files record the death at the age of 82 of the Rev. Arthur Mursell, a distinguished Baptist preacher and writer; Sir T. F. Belsey, the chairman of the council of the Sunday School Union; and Philip Henry Pye Smith, M.D., F.R.S., a distinguished Congregationalist.

The general secretary of the Australian Board of Missions has recently returned from a visit to the west. The visit was undertaken with the object of increasing the interest in the work undertaken by the A.B.M. The diocese of Bunbury was first visited and a keen desire to help the A.B.M. was manifested in every parish. A visit was made to the new Bush Brotherhood and the diocese of Perth, where interest in missions is greater than ever.

An important factor in accounting for the increased interest is the new Forrest River Aboriginal Mission in the Kimberley district, where the natives are still very wild, and have from time to time given some trouble to the Government.

A brief visit was paid to Kalgoorlie, where Bishop Golding Bird has just commenced his arduous work. He had already undertaken several long journeys, and was planning to visit Norseman and Esperance, and hoped to get as far as Eucla before the end of the year.

The Bishop of New Guinea will arrive at Fremantle in the Orsova on July 7, and come overland to Sydney from Adelaide. The Bishop of North Queensland will pass through Sydney next week, en route to his diocese. The Rev. J. Fisher, a new worker for the New Guinea Mission, will arrive next week by the R.M.S. Mongolia.

The parishioners of Lawson's Creek (Mudgee) Church of England have decided to erect a new church, and a number of men have offered their labour towards the work. Recently the parishioners purchased a new organ.

In possession of Mr. G. H. Taylor, of Dubbo, is the banner used at the laying of the foundation-stone of St. James' Grammar School, Sydney, in 1838, and at St. Philip's, Church Hill, Sydney, in 1847. Both stones were "well and truly laid" by Bishop Broughton. Mr. Taylor's father, the late Geo. Taylor, was the founder and afterwards the head teacher in St. James' Grammar School. Though over 70 years old, the banner is well preserved.

The annual meeting of the Australian Board of Missions will be held in the Manchester Unity Hall on July 13. The Bishop of Newcastle will preside, and addresses will be delivered by the Bishop of New Guinea and Bishop Wilson, of Adelaide.

The Roman Catholic Archbishop, Dr. Kelly, yesterday attended the examinations held at St. Patrick's College, Manly. This afternoon he will pay an episcopal visitation to the nursing sisters at Lewisham. On Sunday, July 12, Dr. Kelly will open the new church at Kenthurst.

At St. Augustine's, Balmain East, last week, the Rev. Father Michael Rohan, P.P., celebrated his silver jubilee, and was entertained by the choir and the Children of Mary. Mr. H. P. Coleman presided, and addresses were delivered by the Rev. Fathers Moynagh, M'Donald, and O'Farrell. Father Rohan was presented with a silver rose bowl and an illuminated address.

Bishop O'Connor, of Armidale, on Sunday laid the foundation-stone of the new Catholic Presbytery at Narrabri, and £670 was collected.

Abbot Gasquet, the latest English Cardinal, was born in London in 1846, and was a close friend of Cardinal Manning. He received congratulations from all parts of the world on his elevation to the Sacred College.

The Rev. Fathers Magney and Whelan are conducting a mission for men at St. Benedict's Church, and large congregations are attending.

In the course of his introductory address before the United Free Church Assembly, the Moderator, Dr. Keith, of Glasgow, referred to the attitude of the Church to social problems. Surely, he remarked, amid cheering, it was not God's intention that the few should be at the top of the tree of life, sitting secure, and that the many should be struggling to get or keep a mere foothold on its lowest branches; and that men of the same race should be hopelessly divided into castes, estranged in sympathy and in a relation of mutual suspicion and distrust that deepened into positive hostility. He deplored the wastage upon strong drink, and he protested against the scandal and degradation of the liquor traffic, which hampered industry.

At a meeting of the committee of management of the Murrumburrah Presbyterian Church, held on Wednesday, it was decided to offer a stipend of £250 per annum and a manse.

Churches at home and in the States are anxious that emigrants should, in their new surroundings, keep in touch with the Church of their fathers. In Sydney most of the Churches have immigration agencies to welcome new arrivals, yet many of the people from the old country fail to join the Churches in Australia. It is the same in Canada. Ralph Connor says that in 1912 50,000 Presbyterians went to Canada, yet the membership of the Church only increased by 8000.

In Victoria the Presbyterian and Methodist Churches have agreed to unite in publishing a Sunday-school magazine for the use of the young people of both Churches.

The Australian Inland Mission is taking steps to establish a Presbyterian nursing home in Port Hedland, Western Australian.

A kindergarten class-room in connection with the Singleton Methodist Sunday School was erected by a working bee on Saturday last. Twenty-five workers were engaged from 8 a.m. till 11 p.m., an old building being first demolished. The new building measures 33ft by 16ft. Gas was installed, and the building painted. On Sunday the room was used by 37 children attending the class.

The Rev. W. G. Taylor's mission on the North Coast has been hampered by torrential rains, and on several occasions the motor car has been bogged. But the greatest enthusiasm has been manifested at the meetings, and the veteran evangelist has borne the hardships well.

At the Newtown Methodist Church last Sunday evening Maunder's cantata, "Penitence, Pardon, and Peace," was rendered by the church choir, assisted by friends. Mrs. C. J. Cousins sang the soprano solos, and Mr. Percy Herford the baritone. Mr. W. Pogson conducted, and Mr. Carl Green was the organist.

At the meeting on Monday, at the C.M.M. Board Room, of the Ministers' Association, the Rev. Dr. Brown will deliver an address on "The Centenary Clebrations in England."

The Rev. J. D. Jones, commissioner for the Congregational Union of England and Wales, will arrive in Sydney on Tuesday from New Zealand.

The Newtown Congregational Sunday School held its 58th anniversary last Sunday. There were record congregations all day, and at night the church was crowded, when the pastor, the Rev. J. J. Willings, was the preacher. As in previous years, a large quantity of toys and garments to be given to the Royal Alexandra Hospital for Children, Camperdown, were provided.

The Rev. W. H. Raynor, who has accepted the call to the Newtown Congregational Church, Hobart, will terminate his ministry at Dulwich Hill on July 12.

Dr. Sheldon, of Topeka, Kansas, a prominent social service leader, and author of several works on Christian sociology, notably "In His Steps," will visit Australia in August. The object of his visit is primarily to obtain first hand knowledge of the results of social and industrial legislation in these lands. After three or four weeks' stay in the Commonwealth he will proceed to New Zealand.

THE PLACE OF DRAGONS.

A MYSTERY.

BY WILLIAM LE QUEUX.

(ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.)

CHAPTER V.

IN WHICH THE SHADOW FALLS.

"A very charming portrait," Frayne remarked. "I see it was taken in London. We ought to have no great difficulty in discovering the original—eh, Treeton—if we find it necessary?"

I smiled to myself, for well I knew that the police would experience considerable difficulty in ascertaining the identity of the original of that picture.

"Are you quite sure, Mrs. Dean, that it was the same lady who came to visit Mr. Gregory?" I asked the landlady.

"Quite positive, sir. That funny little pendant she is wearing in the photograph she was wearing when she came to see the old gentleman—a funny little green stone thing—shaped like one of them heathen idols."

I knew to what she referred—the small green figure of Maat, the Goddess of Truth—an ancient amulet I had found, while prying about in the ruins of a temple on the left bank of the Nile, a few miles beyond Wady-Halfa—the gate of the Sudan. I knew that amulet well, knew the hieroglyphic inscription upon its back, for I had given it to her as a souvenir.

Then Lola—the mysterious Lola, whose memory had occupied my thoughts, both night and day, for many and many a month—had reappeared from nowhere, and had visited the eccentric Gregory.

In that room I stood, unconscious of what was going on about me; unconscious of that glittering litter of plate and jewels; of fifteenth century chalices and gem-encrusted cups; of sixteenth century silver, much of it ecclesiastical—probably from churches in France, Italy, and Spain—of those heavy nineteenth century ornaments, that wonderful array of diamonds and other precious stones, in ponderous early-Victorian settings, which lay upon the faded, threadbare carpet at my feet.

I was thinking only of the past—of that strange adventure of mine, which was now almost like some half-forgotten dream—and of Lola, the beautiful and the mysterious—whose photograph I now held in my nerveless fingers, just as the detective had given it to me.

At that moment a constable entered with a note for his inspector, who took and opened it.

"Ah!" he exclaimed, turning to Frayne. "Here's another surprise for us! I made inquiries this morning of the Sheffield police concerning old Mr. Gregory. Here's their reply. They've been up to Messrs. Gregory and Thorpe's works, but there is no Mr. Gregory. Mr. Vernon Gregory, senior partner in the firm, died while on a voyage to India nearly a year ago!"

"What?" shrieked Mrs. Dean, in scandalised tones. "Do you mean to say that that there old man, my lodger, wasn't Mr. Gregory?"

"He may have been a Mr. Gregory, but he certainly was not Mr. Vernon Gregory, the steel manufacturer," responded Treeton, calmly.

"Well, that beats everything!" she gasped. "Then that old man was a humbugging impostor—eh?"

"So it seems," Frayne replied.

"But it can't be true! I can't believe it! He was a real gentleman. See here what he had got put away in that old box of his. Them there Sheffield police is mistook, I'm sure they be. There'll be some good explanation of all this, I'll be bound, if 'tis looked for."

"I sincerely hope so," I remarked. "But at present I certainly don't see any."

Truth to tell, I was utterly staggered and confounded, the more so by that report from Sheffield. I confess I had all along believed old Gregory to be what he had represented himself as being to the people of Cromer.

Now I realised that I was face to face with a profound and amazing problem—one which those provincial police-officers, patient and well-meaning as they were, could never hope to solve.

Yes, old Vernon Gregory was an impostor. The reply from the Sheffield police proved that beyond a doubt. Therefore, it also followed that the man lying dead was certainly not what he had represented himself to be—nephew of the great steel magnate.

But who was he? That was the present question that baffled us.

The photograph I held in my hand bore the name, "Callard, Photographer, Shepherd's Bush-road." But I knew that whatever inquiries were made at that address the result would be negative. The mysterious Lola was an elusive little person, not at all likely to betray her identity to any photographer.

There were reasons for her secrecy—very strong reasons, I knew.

So I smiled when Frayne announced that he should send the picture up to London and put through an inquiry.

I picked up some pieces of the jewellery that were lying at my feet. In my hand I held a splendid golden coronet, in which were set great emeralds and rubies of enormous value. Even my inexpert eye could see that the workmanship was very ancient, and the stones but roughly cut and polished. I judged it to be a crown which had adorned the head of some famous Madonna in an Italian or Spanish church; a truly regal ornament.

Again stooping, I picked up a small heavy box of blackened repousse silver of genuine Italian Renaissance work, and, opening it, found it filled with rings of all kinds, both ancient and modern. There were signet rings, bearing coats of arms; ladies' gem rings, men's plain gold rings, and rings of various fancy devices.

One I picked out was distinctly curious. A man's flat gold ring, set with eight finely-coloured turquoises at equal intervals. It looked brighter and newer than the others, and, as I fingered it, a small portion of the outer edge opened, revealing a neatly enamelled inscription in French, "Thou art mine." On further examination I found that each of the spaces in which a turquoise was set opened, and in each was also a tender love passage, "I love you," "Faithful and true," and so on, executed probably a century ago.

Yes, each piece in that wonderful collection was unique—the treasure of one who was undoubtedly a connoisseur of gems and antiques. Indeed, in no national collection had I ever seen a display more remarkable than that flung out so unceremoniously upon the carpet around that mysterious flash-lamp.

While one of the detectives, at Frayne's order, began repacking the treasure, I went with the two inspectors to a sitting-room on the ground floor, where, with the door closed, we discussed the situation.

Outside, upon the path in front of the house, a knot of curious persons had gathered, among them Mr. Day and his subordinate officer who had made the tragic discovery.

"Well," exclaimed Frayne, slowly rubbing his chin, "it's a very curious case. What will you do now, Treeton?"

"Do?" asked the local officer. "Why, I've done all I can do. I've reported it to the Coroner, and I suppose they'll make the post-mortem to-day, and hold the inquest to-morrow."

"Yes, I know," said the other. "But we must find this old man, Gregory. He seems to have been pretty slick at getting away."

"Frightened, I suppose," said Treeton.

"Looks suspiciously like it," Treeton replied.

"Yes, but why did Craig go out disguised as the old man—that's the question?"

"Yes," I repeated. "That is indeed the question."

"And all that jewellery? The old man is not likely to leave that lot behind—unless he's guilty," said Frayne. "Again, that visit of the young lady. If we could only get track of her, she'd have something to tell us without a doubt."

"Of course," said Treeton. "Send the photograph to London, and find out who she is. What a bit of luck, wasn't it, that Mrs. Dean kept the picture she found in the waste-paper basket?"

I remained silent. Yes, if we could only discover the original of that photograph we should, no doubt, learn much that would be startling. But I felt assured that we should never find trace of her. The police could follow in her direction if they chose. I intended to proceed upon an entirely different path.

What I had learned in that brief hour had staggered me. I could scarcely realise that once again I was face to face with the mystery of Lola—the sweetest, strangest, most shadowy little person I had ever met in all my life. And yet she was so real, so enchanting, so delightful—such a merry, light-hearted little friend.

Lola!

I drew a long breath when I recalled that perfect oval face, with the wonderful blue eyes, the soft little hand—those lips that were made for kisses.

Even as I stood there in the plainly-furnished sitting-room of that seaside lodging-house, I remembered a strangely different scene. A fine, luxurious chamber, rich with heavy gilt furniture, and crimson damask, aglow under shaded electric lights.

I saw her upon her knees before me, her white hands grasping mine, her hair dishevelled upon her shoulders, pleading with me—pleading—ah. I remembered her wild, passionate words, her bitter tears—her terrible confession.

And this provincial detective, whose chief feats had been confined to cases of petty larceny, speed limit, and trivial offences, dealt with by the local Justices of the Peace, actually hoped to unravel a mystery which I instinctively felt to be fraught with a thousand difficulties.

Any swindler, providing he has made sufficient money by his tricks, has bought a place in the country, and has been agreeable to the Deputy-Lieutenant of the County, can become one of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace. Some such are now and then unmasked, and off to penal servitude have gone, men who have been the foremost to inflict fines and imprisonment on the poor for the most trivial offences—men who made the poaching of a rabbit a heinous crime.

I venture to assert that the past of many a J.P. does not bear investigation. But even when glaring injustices are exposed to the Home Secretary, he is often afraid to order an inquiry, for political reasons. It is always "Party" that must be first considered in this poor old England of ours to-day.

What does "Party" mean? Be it Liberal, Unionist, Conservative, Labour, anything, there should at least be honesty, fair dealing, plain speaking, and uprightness. But alas, this is an age of sham in England. Journalists, novelists, preachers, playwrights, are afraid to speak the truth frankly, though they know it, and feel it. It is "Party" always. Many a criminal has escaped conviction before our county benches because of "Party," and for the same reason many innocents have been condemned and suffered.

This case of Mr. Vernon Gregory was a provincial case. The amusing farce of local investigation, and local justice, would no doubt be duly played. The coroner always agrees with the evidence of his own family doctor, or the prominent local medico, and the twelve honest tradesmen forming the jury are almost invariably led by the coroner in the direction of the verdict.

Oh, the farce of it all. I hold no brief for France, Belgium, Germany, or any other Continental nation, for England is my native land. But I do feel that methods of inquiry on the Continent are just, though minutely searching, that there Justice is merciful though inexorable, that her scales weigh all evidence to the utmost gramme.

These reflections passed through my mind as I stood in that lodging-house room, while the two police officers discussed as to their further procedure in the amazing case with which they had been called upon to deal. I could not help such thoughts arising, for I was dubious, very dubious, as to the thoroughness of investigation that would be given to the affair by the local authorities. Slackness, undue delay, party or personal interests, any one of these things might imperil the inquiry and frustrate the ends of justice.

I knew we were confronted by one of the greatest criminal problems that had ever been offered for solution, calling for the most prompt, delicate, and minute methods of investigation, if it wasto be handled successfully. And as I contrasted the heavy, cumbrous, restricted conditions of English criminal procedure with the swift, precise, far-reaching methods in use across the Channel, I felt that something of the latter was needed here if the mystery of Craig's death was ever to be solved.

BRITISH GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP.

THE FINAL.

(BY ARTHUR MASON.)

LONDON, May 29.

The game ended at the 15th hole in the second round. Mr. Jenkins, of Troon, Scotland, was 3 up. His opponent, Mr. Hezlet, of Portrush, Ireland, having done no better than halve the hole, walked across the green and shook hands with Mr. Jenkins. The crowd set up a cheer. The game had been won, and there was a new amateur champion of Great Britain.

A little man, this W. Jenkins, of Troon; a determined, confident little man, but withal very cautious and very painstaking, almost always making his stroke after grave deliberation, and on the green especially, setting himself to his stroke only by grace of a whole ceremonial of preparation. There, on the green he would measure, mentally, his distance, measure it both from the hole and from his ball, and he would lift from the turf quite invisible obstacles that threatened him danger. Mr. Hezlet, on the contrary, is far from being a little man. He is in point of fact a giant, 23 years of age, and 16st in weight. An amiable giant, too, never worried over his game, and fighting along his stern chase quite happily and unconcerned.

Not that it was ever much of a stern chase. This final of the golf championship was, in truth, a great game, a dourly fought game, with the chances of it likely at any time to swing in either direction. It was played over 36 holes. At the end of the morning round, Mr. Jenkins was 3 up. At the turn, in the afternoon, he was only one up, and then it was anyone's game. A keen struggle, as a championship final should be, and keenly followed by a crowd of some 2000.

In itself, too, quite worth while, that following crowd. To me, at any rate, who never until now had followed a championship final, exceedingly well worth while. The Sandwich course, perhaps, helped towards that pleasant spectacular. It is a picturesque stretch of country, with the sea on one side of it, and itself a line of hills and sand dunes and rugged waste. The crowd had a varied idea of places of vantage. It would gather to see the drive, or it would stream out in the direction of the green. A fine sight indeed to see it mounted high upon a hill in the distance, cutting the sky, what time it waited for the stroke and the soaring ball. Best of all, perhaps, to see it gathered about the green, breathless in preparation for the putt. At that stage you got a fine impression of the seriousness of a championship final. All that had gone before had led up to this crucial moment. The preliminary drive, with the forward caddy ever so far away waving his little flag, and the megaphone man shouting his warnings to the crowd, and the iron shot landing as often as not on the green—these things were the preparation for the great moment of the putt. And the crowd knew them as such, and knew the play on the green to be the matter most in hand. So ensued the fine ritual of the approach to the hole—the running men who roped off intruders, the enthusiasts who held up warning hands for silence as the player addressed himself to his ball, the whispered word, if word at all, in that moment of suspense, and then, with 2000 people hypnotised into uncannily breathless concentration upon the man, the club, the ball, and the hole—the fateful stroke. There were many such moments on the greens at Sandwich on Saturday afternoon, moments when the crowd leaned forward so hushed and still and tense that the carolling of the larks high overhead was a noisy music in the ears, and the imminent stroke was all that mattered in the world, and the championship final rose into portentous seriousness. And a game that can induce such moments is without doubt a great game.

Mr. Jenkins deserved to win. There was not much in it, either way, and, if anything, the little Scots player had the best of the luck. Not all the luck, perhaps, and certainly no luck at all at the sixth hole in the afternoon round. It is a short hole—the maiden—and Mr. Jenkins played a beautiful tee shot on to the green about eight yards from it. Mr. Hezlet was trapped in a pot bunker. Cheerily, however, as is his wont, he faced the disaster. Cheerily he set himself to the ball, clipped it out, and watched it run up the bank. It went straight for the hole and toppled in—and from the astonished crowd a roar went up that might have been heard in the township three miles away. Mr. Hezlet won that hole—and no wonder. But, as against it, he missed more than one apparent certainty at a few feet of range, while on all such occasions the putting of Mr. Jenkins became extraordinarily accurate.

Indeed, it may be said, as it has often been said of even games, that the putting decided the match. Mr. Jenkins probably drives a slightly longer ball, but Mr. Hezlet is a master with the iron, and his approach putting is a delight. Mr. Jenkins is unquestionably a fine all-round player. His method is more finished than that of his opponent. Mr. Hezlet drives from an exceptionally high tee. He arrays his huge bulk in a square stance, and seems to fling himself right into the stroke. Mightily his ball goes soaring, and on appearances you would have given his opponent little chance. But the diminutive Mr. Jenkins swings his club, and smiting the ball, follows the stroke through elegantly. And when you look you see that his drive also has gone splendidly soaring—and as often as not a little further and a little straighter. Nevertheless, the game, as said, was won on the putting green, and a good game it was, and well worthy of championship honours.

SHAMROCK IV.

(BY CULWULLA.)

I.—THE YACHT.

Whilst in Paris last week an intimation from my good friend Sir Thomas Lipton that his new creation, Shamrock IV., would be launched on Tuesday, May 26, soon had me off across the Channel to attend this historic event as the Australian representative. On arrival in London I received a telegram from Sir Thomas, asking me down at once to Southampton as his guest on the Erin, his palatial steam yacht, which was then anchored some two miles out from the town quay. At the jetty I was delighted to renew acquaintance with Colonel Neill, Sir Thomas's right hand in all things aquatic and without any doubt one of the best known figures in British yachting. He at once took me off to the Erin in the pinnace, and I was warmly welcomed aboard by the genial Sir Thomas. What a gift this great sportsman has in making one feel at home! A few minutes in his company and the feeling is engendered that the yacht is not his, but yours. He informed me that the wanted me down to lunch particularly that day, in order to meet some notable Americans, viz., Thomas Fleming Day, the editor of the "Rudder," and the hero of those recent hair-raising trips across the Atlantic in boats hardly big enough safely to undertake the trip to Manly; also Mr. Cory, the New York correspondent of the Associated Press, and also a gentleman whose name I have for the moment forgotten, but who is the leading light in the American motor boat world. It was a privilege to meet these men, especially Day. For years he and I have been wanting to give one another the glad hand, perhaps because we've both been tarred with the same brush in our love for the deep sea and our respective exploits thereon.

Lunch finished, I was sent off with Colonel Neill to Southampton, where Sir Thomas's car soon covered the 15 miles to Gosport to the famous yard of Camper Nicholson, where the great ship which is to represent this country for the America Cup was ready for launching. Her designer, Mr. E. Nicholson, extended the heartiest greeting, and said he greatly appreciated the good wishes of Australia which I had that moment conveyed to him. In appearance he is of medium height, slim, fair, and slightly grey, and has a most charming and winning manner, and in a few minutes of conversation you quickly realise the strength of mind and ability behind those observant eyes. The first thing inspected was the Shamrock's huge hollow wooden mast, lying on the ground, some 110ft in length, 1ft in diameter. This enormous stick, so far as I could judge, is built of pieces of fine spruce in two pieces, and so skilfully glued together as to make it almost impossible to see the join. I see the press estimates the value of these sticks at about £600. A second reserve wooden mast was also in the shed, and I was informed a steel one was also ready in case the wooden ones went over the side during the trials.

We then came to the great ship herself—I felt greatly honoured in being the first Australian to see her, and one of the few men who have seen her at all. The greatest secrecy has been maintained during her construction—in fact, the shed has been under lock and key or closely patrolled by watchmen night and day. I can hardly describe my sensation standing under that great hull—75ft on the water line, 110ft overall, 23ft beam, 13ft 9in draught, and 10ft centreboard, her topsides of green, a strip on the water line of white, and bottom of black varnish. The first impression to any layman would be of a champagne bottle cut in two from the neck to the bottom, with a huge lump of lead suspended underneath. The tumble home or rounded sides form a striking feature. The fall-in to the deck seems about 7 inches, as compared with the extreme beam just above the waterline. The great leaden keel looks very bulky, but, of course, is sharpened off like a razor at its fore end. The greatest beam seems just fore of the midship section, and she thus tapers away forward not to the long overhang of previous creations, but to a short blunt overhang something akin to the half-raters of Linton Hope seen in Australia some years back—from end on it gives her a peculiar appearance, but at the same time one of great power. From the mast aft she gradually tapers away to a cut-off square tuck of 9ft across. The only boat in Sydney that would, on a small scale, convey some idea of the bow and stern is Mr. T. Marshall's Nanoya. A peculiar effect is again given to the tumble home by the chain plates in the form of two large angle irons sticking out from the sides some feet, in order to give extra spread for the shrouds. These have been a feature in some of Mr. Nicholson's recent famous creations, more particularly the record-breaker 15-metre Sotria. They, like all the metals in the yacht, are of a specially prepared metal, if not lighter than aluminium and giving great strength. Inside she is open from stem to stern, with but one partition, forming a small after cabin.

"Everything for speed," is the maxim. The construction, accordingly, is the lightest possible. The hull is really diagonal like Logan's yachts in Sydney—of three skins of mahogany; the deck of five layers of thin wood covered with canvas. Inside I counted some 12 metal pillars on each side, or struts, from the deck to the floor; and every fourth frame went right around the sides, deck, and keel. Headroom from floor to deck about 10 feet, from floor to top of keel about 4 feet. The position of the centreboard casing strikes one, being at the after end of the main cabin, adjoining the after cabin partition, and is about 9 feet in length. No one outside the designer knows her exact sail area, but with a mast and topmast, not a Marconi I am informed, but something like it, of a total height of some 160 feet, she will have a spread of quite 9000 square feet. Extra interest is evoked by the rumour of her having but one headsail.

Mr. Nicholson has, without any doubt, turned out a wonderful looking fighting ship. Every line of her speaks business, and there's plenty for the Americans to digest when they see her off Sandy Hook in September next. She looks to me like a good light-weather boat, but at the same time one that will stand up to it when the white crests are about—that is, of course, if that great stick can be kept in her.

II.—THE LAUNCH.

"Not a hitch throughout the proceedings," so said the press over here—and it was quite correct. Everything was thought of, and everything was done well—even to the refreshments and cigarettes, with Shamrock's racing flag on them, served on the special train put on by the ever-thoughtful Sir Thomas to carry his invited guests from London to Portsmouth. The passing of this train through the lovely country, decorated as she was with flags and emblems, evoked much enthusiasm. On arrival, some 300 guests were carried by special steamers across to the yard, during which time they were fully occupied in appreciating the picture disclosed before them. Being Queen's Birthday, all warships and other craft were covered in bunting—none looking so proud and majestic as Nelson's glorious old battleship Victory, anchored right off the shed from which Shamrock would soon appear for the first time to the gaze of the awaiting thousands assembled in and around the foreshores and on the hundreds of craft in the offing.

Gosport was en fete, and no wonder, as they were all celebrating the first cup challenger to be built there. At midday, just as the Victory was thundering out a Royal Salute, the Countess of Shaftesbury dashed the bottle of wine against Shamrock's side, and amidst deafening cheers England's hope quiet and dignified slid her way out into the bay. Mr. Nicholson was warmly congratulated by all present on the successful launching, and seemed like a school boy on his holidays, now the anxiety and worry attending such a launch was off his shoulders. However, his duties were not finished, as he had to act as chairman at the banquet after the launch. This he did in a most able manner. The company present was a most distinguished one, including the Countess of Shaftesbury, the Marquis of Ailsa (owner of the 40-tonner Bloodhound), Sir John Lawrence, Sir Bourchier Wrey, Sir John Rolleston, Sir Harry North, Lady Henry, Mr. W. P. Burton, who will take charge of Shamrock, the most brilliant Corinthian and tiller hand in the world—he gave me the heartiest greetings—Mr. and Mrs. Marconi. Colonel Crawford (vice-commodore of the Royal Ulster Yacht Club, which club Shamrock IV. will represent. Again, at this function, Sir Thomas Lipton paid Australia a great compliment by placing my wife and self in seats of honour and bestowing on me the proposing of the toast of the Royal Ulster Yacht Club. This I did with every pleasure, and took the opportunity of extending to Sir Thomas, Mr. Nicholson, and Mr. Burton Australia's best wishes and sincere wish that they would bring the Cup back to rest on the sideboard of the Royal Ulster Yacht Club. After speeches from Mr. Burton, Colonel Crawford, Marquis of Ailsa, Sir John Laurence, and one of the wittiest and cleverest speeches by Sir Thomas, the whole company went aboard the Erin for afternoon tea. A special train back to London brought to a close one of the most successful and eventful days in the history of the world's yachting.

THE HOTEL PROBLEM.

BEER AND IDEAL HOUSES.

(BY CIVIS.)

III.

German beer is practically a temperance drink. Its alcoholic content is about 4½ per cent., and this content is probably smaller than some so-called "temperance" drinks which are indulged in by teetotallers and recommended by reformers. Probably the ordinary ginger-beer is of a higher alcoholic strength than German beer. The Germans are a sober nation, and the reason is that they are too sensible to drink beverages which will make them drunk. The nation which will survive in the present competitive age must be sober. The Emperor William has said so, and he is right. It is not that the Germans do not consume quantities of beer; they do—large quantities. The output of beer from Munich is enormous. It is said that if the daily beer product of Munich were spilled it would make a river which would have to appear on the maps of Europe. The average consumption of beer in Munich for man, woman, and child is five quarts. Yet I saw no drunkenness in that city, nor anywhere else in Germany, save in quarters where spirits are drunk to excess—say, in seaport towns, where the drinkers have the good old British idea that beverages are no good unless you get "forrader" on them, in other words get drunk.

This light beer has conquered Europe. France and Italy are drinking and making a similar beverage. You will find excellent breweries near Naples. And, thank heaven, Australia is following suit. The three great brewing firms of Sydney make a bottled beer of low alcoholic content which is pleasant, wholesome, and harmless. Here it may be remarked how foolish it is for the temperance party to declaim against all alcoholic beverages indiscriminately. Whisky is a beverage necessary in certain circumstances, but if abused it is a curse. But light beers and native wines of good quality, well diluted with mineral or plain waters, are innocuous when taken with meals; and those who desire a nation to be temperate should recommend the use of them. The State should forbid the manufacture and sale of beers of a high alcoholic content. Beer that could be used without drunkenness would be the very thing for a climate like ours, especially if drawn through the cooling ice taps. Temperance advocates should make some inquiry on this head. It will pay them.

Not only has German beer conquered Europe, but Japan has adopted it as the national beverage, and it has ousted the mildly-alcoholic "sake," a rice spirit which was formerly in use in Japan. When the Japanese were seeking the best in the world to copy they took as their models the German breweries. London is becoming converted, and in most restaurants in London German beer is a popular drink.

One thing the teetotallers have not been able to do, and that is, invent a pleasant, non-alcoholic substitute for alcoholic beverages. The next best thing, therefore, for them to do is to recommend the use of a beverage of low alcoholic content. But the change of the beverages in popular use is not all that is necessary. We need to humanise the conduct of our liquor trade. To-day one goes into a restaurant in Sydney. Some have wine licenses, and can sell you your own Australian sunshine and soil bottled into a delectable mixture. But they cannot have beer licenses. They must send out for the beer the customer uses. A rational man unaccustomed to the Gilbertian absurdity of the situation wonders what sort of people we are that we have so abandoned common-sense as to restrict our liberty in this way. Take a curious instance of inexplicable crassness in the law. You cannot buy oysters in the average hotel, because the hotelkeeper is no longer a victualler. You cannot buy stout in an oyster shop, because the oysterman cannot for love or money get a license to sell anything but wine. He cannot sell you a glass of sherry or a gin and vermouth before lunch. He cannot sell you a glass of port after lunch. The oyster and the stout are regarded in the public mind as co-essential. Yet the law does not allow the oysterman to sell stout to his customer, and the same ridiculous law has driven the victualler out of the victualling into the beverage trade. Unless you can find an oysterman in business near a hotel you cannot get stout to drink with your oysters. It is too absurdly like Gilbert's Bab Ballad of the two shipwrecked British sailors on a desert island, who had never been introduced, and who, therefore, not knowing who their respective grandfathers were, could not speak to each other, and who could not exchange the products of the separate ends of the island, though they hated their own products, and each longed for the products the other man possessed on his half of the soil.

A great step forward would be to grant a full victualler's license to the open-air kiosks in our parks, and to compel them to "draw" bass beer, at any rate in the summer months, for their customers. The authorities which prevent the increase of such kiosks in all our open spaces and seaside resorts should be removed, or educated by travel and common-sense. The tables should be put out under the shade trees, and the food served there. The brewers should be encouraged to brew light beer, the hotelkeepers to sell food over the counter, and not give free counter lunches to tempt the man in the street who thinks a "snack" will help him to carry his liquor better.

Moreover, there should be an end of the "stand up and drink at the counter" business. There are many admirable examples of the cafe style in Sydney. There the customer can sit at a table and play a game of dominoes while he sips his beverage. He can get tea or coffee at these. It is true there is no music. He could not take his wife into them. There is an unwritten law here that a woman who wants to drink in a hotel must be declassee. In many hotels the proprietor says flatly that he "won't serve women." Thus the restraining effect of a wife's company on her husband is not applicable here.

Broadly then, every restaurant keeper should have a full victualler's license. The true function of the victualler should be restored. He should be compelled to sell food as well as drink. There is a tradition of the law that he must provide a certain amount of bed accommodation, and this would connote "bed and board." But the majority of the modern hotelkeepers depend solely for their livelihood on the drink traffic. While Australian wine drinking should be encouraged, the wine shops, with their new and drunkening wines, drunk behind screens, in places which are sometimes merely "stalls" for immorality, should be abolished. I venture the assertion that if every hotelkeeper could have a street cafe, and was compelled to do away with the accursed thing the "bar parlour" in which women drink, half the cruelty and harm which follows a bad licensing system would disappear.

And, lastly, the hotelkeeper should not be hounded or abused. He is the victim of a stupid system created by stupid Parliaments, and perpetuated by statesmen who accept the system bequeathed to them without inquiry. The hotelkeeper should be encouraged to raise his own status, and that of his class. His calling should be accepted as it was before the stupid laws made him what he often is. Every hotelkeeper would doubtless like to run a Hotel Australia. Most of them would prefer to be licensed victuallers in the fullest sense of the term, and to regain the status of the innkeepers of the time of Dickens. The remedy, therefore, is in the encouragement of the people to seize their natural advantages, dine in the open in their mild and genial climate, drink wines and beers suitable to that climate, and so arrange the surroundings that men could take their wives, daughters, and sons into every hostelry and procure therein wholesome food, rational drink, music, light, life, and entertainment. Thus, while rational drinking will be encouraged in connection with eating and enjoyment, irrational drinking and drunkenness will disappear, and the nation become more sober, and, by consequence, attain a higher efficiency.

All the most likeable people have clear skins, and look healthy and bright. So can you, if you will keep your liver and digestion fit, by a Cockle's Pill now and then.—Advt.

THE JUNE REVIEWS.

THE MEXICAN TROUBLE.

Writing in the "Fortnightly" on the situation in Mexico, Mr. J. M. Kennedy says that, even if the Monroe doctrine be stretched to its widest possible interpretation, the action of the United States in supporting the Mexican rebels and in bringing pressure to bear upon the recognised Government of the country cannot possibly be justified. Since neither law nor a policy of opportunism can explain the attitude of the United States Government, he says, we are driven for an explanation to the attacks of American newspapers on the British and other European interests which have obtained economic concessions in Mexico. To mention oil is to come to the most delicate aspect of the whole question. There are about 150 oil companies in Mexico, of which 100 are American and 20 English. One American company (the Standard Oil Trust) and one English company (the Mexican Eagle) control between them, it is said, 75 per cent. of the total Mexican oil output. Mexican railway stock is, however, largely owned in England, and Mexican banking stock in England and France. England is still the predominant power, politically and economically, in Mexico, and Mr. Kennedy's conclusion is that the American commercial and financial interests are endeavouring by unfair means to oust the long-established English interests. He considers that the British Government has neglected many important aspects of the situation.

THE END OF WELTPOLITIK.

Mr. Robert Crozier Long writes in the "Fortnightly" on the reversal of front which is now taking place in Germany's foreign activities. The notion of concentration at home, he says, has supplanted the expansion ambition of the last 20 years. Germany must either extinguish at once the dreaded Franco-Russian superiority, taking her chance with her allies, before it goes too far, or she must take the risk of losing Austria after the Emperor Francis Joseph's death, and prepare to face later perils by a comprehensive system of fortification at home. Either war—or concentration. It is because Germany has made the second choice that the policy of overseas expansion at the expense of other countries has been abandoned, and the era of "Weltpolitik," properly so called, wound up. With most Germans, "Weltpolitik" is a phrase which has been on the tongue, but not in the consciousness. The policy of concentrating resources, it is added, must inevitably express itself in bigger battalions; and close observers of European tendencies feel no doubt that the competition in armaments will go very much further—that it can be stopped only by real national exhaustion, which is still far off.

UNKNOWN ITALY.

In an article by "Politicus," a well-known contributor to the "Fortnightly," we get some insight into "unknown Italy," such as no guide books and no travel tours afford us. He does not deal with picturesque Italy, historical and artistic Italy, but with economic Italy, and we perceive that a modern country has arisen, and a new race been evolved which may prove not unworthy of the great traditions of its ancestors. When we consider that only one-third of the soil of Italy is able to produce food for man or beast, the remaining two-thirds being waste land, the progress of the country and its people in modern times has been phenomenal. Italy has no coal to speak of, but she has waterfalls, and she utilises electricity, and in many ways is making science do for her what nature has failed to do. When it is remembered that Italy, with her 313 people to the square mile, is one of the most densely-populated countries in the world, it is not to be wondered at that many of the people emigrate, but they mostly return with their savings. The money deposited in the Italian institutions from popular savings amounts to nearly £300,000,000. This race of hard-working, thrifty Italians, the writer considers, is bound to people many of the empty spaces of the earth.

IS COURTESY DECLINING?

An article headed "In Pursuit of Courtesy," by Evelyn March-Phillipps, appears in the "Nineteenth Century." It provides some food for thought. Boys and girls, we are told, used to be very carefully trained in politeness. Now parents seem to vie with one another to make their children as selfish as possible. They must not sit through a sermon lest they should find it tedious; lessons must not be irksome or make any demand upon their endurance. The habits of gratifying every impulse, the shrinkage from all dull and tiresome obligations, the satisfying the craving for constant amusement inevitably result in a want of self-control and self-restraint. The thought of self deadens thought for others, and courtesy dies. Old traditions go to the wall, and the doctrine of noblesse oblige is not always strong enough to escape contamination.

THE CENTENARY OF LORD'S.

Every Australian has heard of Lord's Cricketers particularly will read with interest an article in the "Fortnightly Review," by Sir Home Gordon, dealing with the centenary of the occupation of the famous playing space at St. John's Wood. And Lord's means the Marylebone Cricket Club. To imagine this club away from Lord's is like thinking of the Bodleian Library removed from Oxford. The actual foundation of the M.C.C. in 1787 was duly commemorated on its centenary, and the fact that Thomas Lord made the present, the third Lord's Cricket Ground, was not perhaps too well known until it was announced for retrospective celebration this season. Sir Home Gordon makes the centenary the occasion for same interesting reminiscences. Modern Lord's, like modern cricket, he remarks, dates its new birth from that momentous day in May, 1878, when the Australians beat M.C.C. and Ground in one day. The Australians revolutionised the game, teaching the English players, among other things, to modify the placing of the field for the idiosyncrasies not only of bowlers but of batsmen. Not the least interesting part of the article is the compilation of a side, made up of the best eleven he has ever seen, past and present. Here it is:—Dr. W. G. Grace, W. L. Murdoch, Arthur Shrewsbury, K. S. Ranjitsinhji, Victor Trumper, A. G. Steel, George Lohmann, J. McC. Blackman, W. Lockwood, Alfred Shaw, and F. R. Spofforth; reserves, Hobbs, G. L. Jessop, A. E. Stoddart, Hugh Trumble, and H. F. Boyle. Many Australians will think the omission of M. A. Noble destroys the value of this side.

A NATIONAL MEDICAL SERVICE.

Dr. William A. Brend, lecturer on Forensic Medicine at the Charing Cross Hospital, makes a plea in the "Nineteenth Century" for the establishment of a national medical and dental service. In this connection he advocates the appointment of a Minister of Health, which would involve uniting some departments and co-ordinating others. The Local Government Board being the nearest approach to a State medical office, he thinks it desirable that it should become the central authority. As to the qualifications the Minister at the head of the department should possess, Dr. Brend regards it as important that he should be a medical man, just as the Attorney-General should be a lawyer. In view of the establishment of a Health Department in this State, there is much to interest us in this article. On broader lines, we notice, too, a statement in reference to conditions in England which applies with equal force to us: "There has been a noticeable failure to act on recommendations of Royal Commissions."

THE USE OF ALCOHOL.

The Rev. H. R. Gamble evidently believes in the use of alcohol, for in the "Nineteenth Century" we find him, under the heading of "The Tyranny of Alcohol," combating the arguments of Sir Harry Johnston against alcohol, as set forth in an article in the April number of the same review. Sir Harry stated that he was "born to be a teetotaller," and that "any departure from this rule brought about ill-health." Mr. Gamble sarcastically remarks: "Apparently he regards this misfortune or peculiarity as entitling him to speak with authority on the subject of alcohol, just as if 'having no ear,' or being 'colour blind' were the primary qualification for critics of music or painting." He does not think the remedy for drunkenness lies in compulsory total abstinence.

THE MIND OF THE ANIMAL.

(BY S. J. H.)

One of the most joyous sights in the world is the outrush of children from the schoolhouse when the hour of deliverance strikes. But a spectacle that comes a good second is a troop of cart horses cantering off, free of rein or bridle, masterless for the nonce, for their week-end holiday. Such a troop I saw to-day; "the prancings of the mighty ones" made a thunder in the air as they dashed along, lifting their forefeet with fine action for which in the dray shafts they could have no scope, throwing up their heels, and stopping only when a broad stretch of bright green grass made rolling available. Surely they were aware that Monday is a gazetted holiday. Behind, more sedately, came the older horses, their age betrayed by the leisurely gait and the pendulous underlip. A stab of heartache came with the thought of those poor wornout animals whose fate has been causing so much scandal in the home papers of late. What becomes of animals in Australia when they are past work? We may congratulate ourselves that we are not guilty of such iniquitous traffic in worn-out horses as goes on between England and Belgium, uninfluenced as far as one can see by the righteous indignation of public opinion. But why should not some spacious reserve, some home of rest in the National Park or the Blue Mountains, in this roomy land of ours, be set apart in which these faithful toilers might end their lives with a merciful sudden shot from the ranger when their teeth are worn out and their digestive powers unequal to their task?

One hears it said occasionally that animals do not mind a blow now and then, because they have no memory or reasoning powers, and much cruelty exists where the statement that "animals have no souls" is generally accepted. Some of the loveliest and most interesting countries in the world are made hateful to the traveller by reason of the dreadful sights that have been scorched into the memory as by a searing iron.

But this theory of the mindlessness or soullessness of the so-called lower creation is continually being shaken by stories of animal intelligence, and the question, "Have animals minds?" would seem by no means an empty or unanswerable one if recent investigations in Germany are as soundly established as they appear to be. That the English Society for Psychical Research, in which Sir Oliver Lodge and many other leading scientists are interested, thought it worth while to send investigators to inquire into the facts with regard to the thinking horses of Elberfeld, is a proof that the society attaches great importance to Herr Krall's experiments. Many accounts of his horses have appeared in various periodicals. It is claimed by Herr Krall that his horses have learnt to express and spell out their thoughts and wishes by raps of the hoof, so many raps for each letter. For instance, SN will represent Essen, to eat; gn, gehen, to go; each word being spelt phonetically, and as many vowels left out as possible. If this were all, one could easily class such achievements with ordinary circus tricks, but when it comes to solving abstruse mathematical problems, as it is asserted that these horses can do, they come into quite a different category.

But the achievements of the Wonder Dog of Mannheim are still more amazing. An account of him is given, with two portraits, in the "Graphic," of May 23. Rolf certainly looks remarkably intelligent; he is a Bellington terrier, and was three years old when his mistress began her instruction. We are not told how long his studies have been carried on. He has a mournful, or, perhaps, one should rather say, wistful expression. Perhaps even in the happiest dog's eyes wistfulness is more common than any other look. It is a remarkable thing, by the by, that the dog is the only animal, unless one can include the monkey, that can make any play with the frontal muscles and those of the upper eyelid. His mistress began by teaching him letters by the same method as that of Herr Krall, though at the time she had not heard of his experiments. A story is told of a dog whose mistress was teaching her little girl to read, and to urge her on, said, "Why, doggie could learn quicker than you can," and turning to the animal, added, "Couldn't you, doggie?" And the dog nodded. Whether this dog was identical with Rolf, I do not know, but it is probable. He can describe pictures shown him, in his own words. If shown a picture of a pig, he will say that it is "a fat pig"; if a bird, "a bird with a blue tail"; and that this is not merely an automatic repetition of something already taught him, can be believed, if one can accept the following, which certainly takes a little swallowing: In December of last year several scientists, including medical men, brain specialists, and others, examined Rolf in the absence of his mistress, whom he calls "mother." He showed great unwillingness to answer questions put to him, and not a little temper. In the evening he was asked why he had been so cross. On which he rapped out the words, "Thinking of mother all the time."

A letter is also given, which he dictated, to be sent to Herr Krall in response to a letter with a gift of a picture book; this took three-quarters of an hour to dictate, and required over eight hundred raps. In it he says he was amused by the picture-book, and must show it to Daisy, the cat; one of the pictures represented a school for animals, some of them displaying unwillingness to learn. A pungent criticism of the picture is given in the words, "Animals like learning; bookmaker lies." Like the Elberfeld horses, Rolf spells phonetically; but he seems to have sufficient command of language to express his wishes and ideas quite clearly, as when after the examination already referred to, he says, "Seen pictures, and said what they were; enough gentlemen; want to be allowed to go." Rolf is not being trained for exhibition purposes; his mistress has simply set herself in a truly scientific spirit to inquire more closely than has ever been done before into the real inwardness of the animal mind; and it would appear that already she has reaped a rich reward.

It will be interesting if the psychological section of the British Association has anything to tell us of this new departure in animal psychology. No doubt there have been countless stories of animal intelligence, and these experiments are only testing it in a new direction. There are few who have had to do with horses and dogs who have not some interesting story to tell. Rider Haggard even maintains that a dog can come back from the dead. He relates that he saw the ghost of his dog at the point on a railway viaduct where it had been cut down by a train; its mangled body lying at the very time at the bottom of the viaduct. Who has not seen some such sight as a conscience-stricken dog, caught in some escapade, fleeing at the voice of his unseen master? Or a horse coaxing for bread or apples? Or a young pup, taught to guard a hat or a handkerchief in a few days by merely being pinched gently on the ear whenever he looked away from the object he was set to guard? Only a few weeks ago a page of one of the illustrated papers was devoted to dog heroes who had saved lives, not only of those they knew and loved, but, as the St. Bernards do at the Mountain Hospice, of strangers. But if dogs have the qualities and gifts that, when speaking of human beings, we call spiritual, those great qualities of faith, hope, and love which are set before men as the most precious and enduring, and yet which all must recognise as in a signal degree the qualities of a noble horse or dog, surely it is a comparatively small matter to believe that they may have mental faculties of a high order too. To lump these all together and call them instinct is merely to beg the question. An intensely interesting field of study seems to be opened by the stories of the Elberfeld horses and Rolf of Mannheim, and it is a matter for congratulation that a society for the study of animal psychology should have been formed in Germany, an example that might well be followed in other countries. At all events, let us keep our eyes and ears open, as well as our sympathies. All up and down the country there must be many a shepherd and teamster who can tell us much of their dumb friends, that is worth recording. Every instance we come across of mental power, not only in dogs and horses, but in birds, and even such humble creatures as lizards and frogs, should be carefully noted and the record kept. The love, for instance, that all reptiles have for music is worth studying, and who knows that we may not come across instances of cleverness quite as great in its way as that of Rolf, and as amusing as that of the parrot in "Punch," who, being taught to speak by reiteration of the word "Hallo," sharply replied at last "Number engaged," and went on in a pre-occupied manner pecking at a peanut!

Sore Throat.

"You may not look upon it seriously, but a sore throat indicates weakness in the bronchial tubes. If neglected it will soon develop into some chronic complaint. People who are troubled this way are most susceptible to influenza, contract pneumonia readily, and fall easy victims to consumption.

To remove this irritation, soothe and heal the inflamed tubes, there is nothing equal to

CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY

It gives tone to the weakened tissues of the throat, strengthens the bronchial tubes, and at the same time builds up the system. When the throat is healthy influenza or consumption germs cannot obtain a foothold. Above all things never neglect a child's throat for it may mean years of suffering for it in after life." Yours for Health — Granny Chamberlain.

LAND TAX APPEAL.

McDONALD v DEPUTY FEDERAL LAND TAX COMMISSIONER.

Mr. Shand, K.C., and Mr. Pike, instructed by the Crown Solicitor, for the Deputy Commissioner, and Mr. Campbell and Mr. Harper, instructed by Messrs. Minter, Simpson, and Co., for the appellant.

The appeal by John McDonald against the assessment of the Federal Land Tax Commissioner on the Moree properties and Castlereagh House (corner of Castlereagh-street and Hunter-street) was continued.

W. M. Walker, of Walker Bros., concluded his evidence, and James Gregg, of Richardson, Wrench, and Co., also gave evidence on the question of the unimproved value of Castlereagh House.

The appellant's case was then closed, subject to certain formal questions to be asked as to certain offers received for the pastoral properties.

Respondent's case was opened by the calling of William Wiley, City Council valuer, who gave evidence touching the valuation of the city property. Witness stated that he valued the block for the Deputy Commissioner at £19,500 in 1910. It transpired that in 1911 the same block was valued at £22,500.

In reply to Mr. Campbell, witness stated that he was authorised to make the valuation in 1910. The unimproved value in 1911 was based on the sales of neighbouring properties.

Mr. Campbell asked for an instance which could increase the value from £16,500 in 1908 to £22,500 in 1910.

Witness said he could not give a specific instance, but properties near by, not to be compared with Castlereagh House, sold for £160 a foot. He considered the revaluation justified by reason of the use the purchasers of adjoining blocks had made of them.

The case stands part heard.

MONEY-SAVING COUGH MIXTURE.

SPLENDID HOME-MADE REMEDY.

10/ SAVED ON EVERY PINT.

The cheapest and most effective remedy for all kinds of cough, colds, throat, and chest complaints, is made in your own home. It takes very little of your time, is no trouble to make, and every pint means an actual saving of at least 10/ for yourself.

The reason is quite simple. All cough mixtures contain a small proportion of concentrated medicinal ingredients, and a large percentage of water and sweetening. If you buy the medicinal ingredients only, adding the water and sweetening yourself, you save all the money you would otherwise pay for water, bottles, corks, wrappers, and mixing.

Most chemists now sell the medicinal ingredients under the name of Hean's Essence. Each bottle gives easy direction for making a pint of finest family cough remedy. Buy a bottle from your chemist, take home, and make up as directed on label. Pour into a large bottle, on which paste the label you will find in Hean's Essence packet.

The first sip of this mixture gives you immediate relief. It clears the nasal passages instantly; loosens the phlegm; eases the throat and bronchial tubes in a way that will surprise you. Sip each dose slowly, giving the mixture a chance to lubricate the throat thoroughly. If your cold is very bad, take a few doses at intervals of half an hour. For sore or inflamed throat use Hean's Essence as a gargle. Prompt relief is certain.

There is no poison or harmful drug of any kind in this Home-made Hean's Essence remedy. That is why it is so thoroughly safe for all members of your family. Even your wee baby will benfit by having a few drops in case of a cold. It is invaluable for children. When used promptly it will prevent whooping cough or croup, and if it should not be used in time to prevent those dreaded complaints, there is nothing that will ease them so quickly.

Hean's Essence is sold by most chemists, Anthony Hordern and Sons', Pattinson's, Lassetters', M'Ilrath's, W.H. Soul and Co., Ltd., or post free, on receipt of price, 2/, from G. W. Hean, Chemist, 178 Castlereagh-street, Sydney. Note how my name is spelt—H.E.A.N.—Advt. 5.

BEAUTY (?) CREAMS

Mme. Rubinstein divulges a Trade Secret

Do you know why the directions for the use of face creams invariably tell you to "rub it in thoroughly"!

Shall I tell you and betray a trade secret?

Because if you are to derive any benefit at all from them, it can be only through this very rubbing or massage.

In the words of Hamlet: "Aye, there's the rub."

But it is not so with Valaze. There is no rubbing wanted when Valaze is used.

It is Valaze alone which clears the complexion, the worst, the muddiest complexion—not the rubbing.

It is in virtue of its own wonderful properties, and unaided by the massage subterfuge, that Valaze sinks down to the deeper layers of the skin, and revives, exhilarates, and beautifies it.

This explains why no skin blemish, no wrinkle, no crowsfeet, no pimple, no skin impurity exists on the face which in due time is treated with Valaze. This explains why the skin that is taken care of with Valaze is able to bear the brunt of all weather conditions, and remain ruddy, supple and refined withal. This explains why, when Valaze is used, redness, roughness, coarseness, sallowness, quickly change to the pink and white tints of a perfect complexion.

Moreover, the sun-parched, sun-scorched, sunburnt, tanned and freckled skin on both hands and face recovers its erstwhile whiteness, clearness and transparency beneath the beneficient influence of Valaze.

The beauty bringer, Valaze, as I have told you on previous occasions, hails from the distant Carpathian Mountains, and the daily use of a very small quantity is sufficient to stimulate and beautify impaired tissues.

You will agree with me that if Valaze could not prove my every claim; if it could not revitalise the tissues of your skin; if it could not give you a smooth, clear, and flawless skin, as I say it can; if it did not ensure a beautiful, enviable, perfect complexion, as I say it does, the circumstance would spell ruin to my business interests. But my flourishing establishments on three continents, and the many thousands of fair faces you meet wherever the charm of good complexion is valued, are eloquent and conclusive testimony.

You will readily see how economical Valaze really is when I tell you that the 6/6 jar lasts about five months. I supply it in 3/6 and 6/6 jars; postage, 6d.

Because Valaze does not pose as a cure-all, I supply the following exclusive preparations, which are as invaluable in their particular sphere of usefulness as Valaze is in its own.

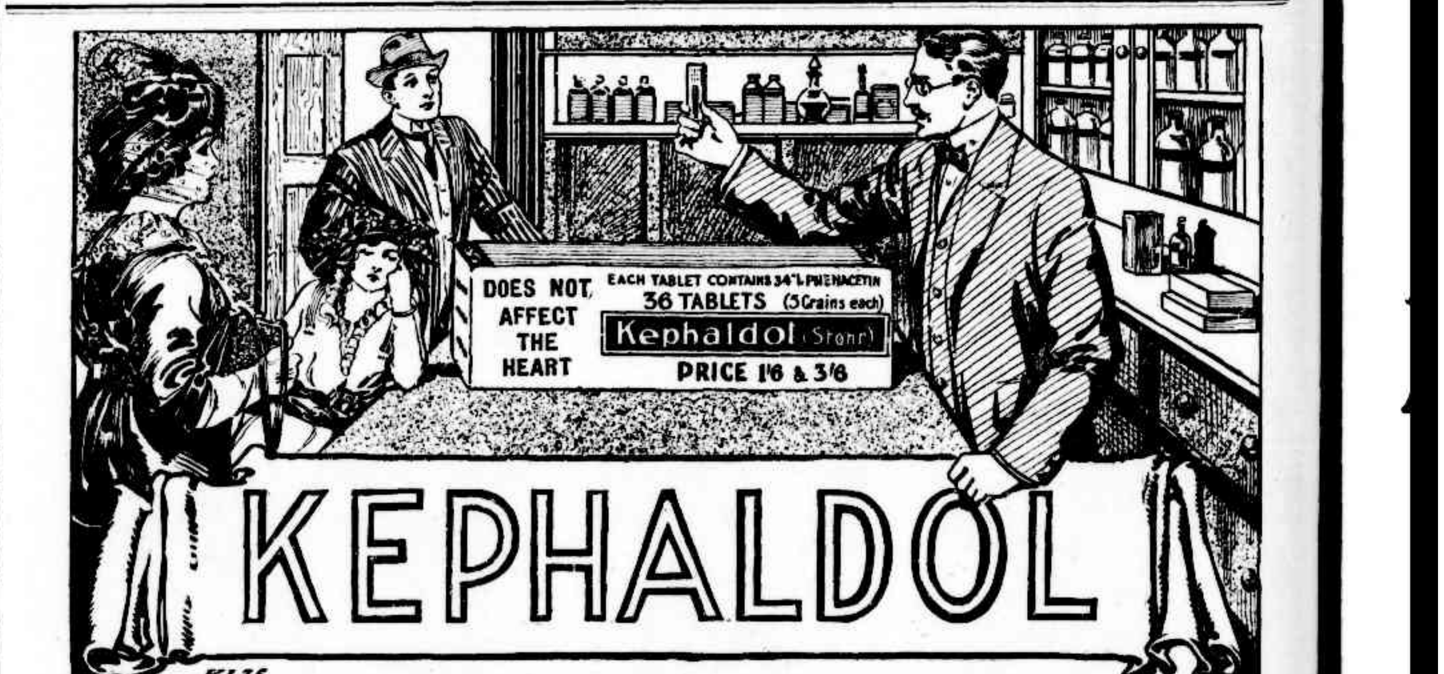
Novena Poudre, a "fat" powder for dry skins. This powder is the only preparation of its kind that is a skin food as well. Valaze Herbal Powder for normal, greasy and overmoist skins. Each in three tints. 2/-, 3/-, and 5/- a box; postage, 3d. Valaze Complexion Soap, made of rare herbs and almonds: pure, wholesome, economical, lasts several months. 2/2 a cake, posted. Valaze Blackhead and Open Pore banishes every trace of these disfigurements, and is an unfailing speciality for coarse and greasy skins. It closes unduly open pores and refines the skin's texture. Price, 2/10, posted. Valaze Liquidine dispels undue redness of the nose and face, and prevents blackheads and pimples by acting directly on the pores and freeing them of waste matter, grease and dirt which clog them, so that the breathing of the skin remains unimpeded and circulation is improved. Valaze Liquidine prevents also the skin being shiny and overmoist. Price 5/- and 8/6 a bottle; postage, 6d. Valaze Lip Lustre, for dull, blanched lips. Biting and wetting will not displace the colouring it imparts. Price, 2/-; speciale, 3/-. Valaze Snow Lotion (a Viennese Liquid Powder) is a preparation of rare distinction, which refreshes, cools and whitens the skin. 3/6 a bottle; postage, 6d.

Novena Sunproof Creme has proved itself indispensable as a preparation which prevents all sun-discolouration of the skin, as freckles, tan, and sunburn, by its peculiar "sun-expelling" properties. 3/10, posted. Novena Cerate is a most effective and natural skin cleanser. The continued use of Novena Cerate in the Nursery will ensure perfect skin health during childhood. 3/10, posted. Valaze Water Softening Pastilles improve hard water to such an extent as to render it superior to rain water. They soften the water and increase its cleansing powers. Price, 5/- for six tubes, or 1/- per tube.

At Mme. Rubinstein's Valaze Institute, new methods have been introduced for the treatment of puffiness under the eyes, of enlarged or distended pores, greasiness, coarseness, and blotchiness of the skin. A course of Electric Massage, which is practised at the Valaze Massage Institute, will work wonders, and what is more, the good effects are lasting. By this treatment you can become rid of wrinkles, lines, crowsfeet, weariness, and that tired look, and the skin becomes revitalised, strengthened, purified and beautified. All obstacles to complexion beauty are removed.

If you write for an appointment Mme. Rubinstein will be pleased to see you, but if you are unable to call on her, or prefer to treat yourself at home, she will send you, if 3d. is sent for postage, her book, "Beauty in the Making," in which will be found a remedy for every complexion trouble, and indispensable information on the scientific and modern treatment of the face and hair.

Address your orders and applications for appointments as follows: Helena Rubinstein Prop. Ltd., Dept. D., 274 Collins Street, Melbourne; 158 Pitt Street, Sydney. Also Strand Arcade, Queen Street, Auckland, N.Z.



"I wan't you to fully understand me. I would prefer to sell my own preparation, but I know it doesn't compare in efficiency with KEPHALDOL, and as I want you to get quick results, to be honest, I must advise you to use Kephaldol."

Britannia Road, Burwood,
Messrs. Kephaldol Co., March 8, 1914.

Dear Sir,—I received the tube of KEPHALDOL, and I have gained great relief from its use. As I have suffered from violent headaches for years, I have tried all kinds of remedies, but without success. I have only used half the tube of Kephaldol tablets and have obtained more relief from them than from all other remedies combined that I have used, and I can highly recommend Kephaldol to anyone suffering from headache, neuralgia pains. If these few lines may be of any benefit to you in inducing others who may suffer as I did to accept your remedy, you are at liberty to publish them. I remain, yours faithfully, MISS OLIVE KERR.

Kephaldol Co., Sydney. March 9th, 1914.

Dear Sirs,—I havd been a great sufferer from Rheumatism during the whole of the last 20 years. In fact, it had become chronic. I have taken pills, patent medicines, and used liniments, electric battery, turkish baths, and so forth, and have been under the treatment of seven (7) different doctors, and, in fact, tried everything anyone would advise me to use. It is quite within the figure if I say that I spent more than £150 without any relief, until recently a friend advised me to use Kephaldol tablets, and I am pleased to say that I now consider myself thoroughly cured, and the Rheumatism is a thing of the past. Kephaldol was the only thing that gave me the least relief amongst the various remedies I tried over the entire 20 years. You may use this letter for the benefit of any sufferer. I am, yours very gratefully, W. BURDON.

In KEPHALDOL there is a sure, safe and prompt remedy to hand for HEADACHES, NEURALGIA, RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO, NEURITIS SCIATICA, NERVE PAINS generally, and painful menstruation.

KEPHALDOL has received the highest commendation from the medical profession because of its direct strengthening action upon the nerves without injury to the heart, and its lasting regulative and curative effect upon the whole system. Doctors prescribe Kephaldol and testify to its wonderful results. If you suffer any kind of nerve pain, take this valuable, natural remedy in preference to ordinary tonics, and, above all, in preference to dangerous drugs. It costs little to try this new nerve remedy. It acts quickly!

LAW REPORT.

BANCO COURT.

ACTION ON A CONTRACT.

Brodribb v Rigby.

Mr. A. Thomson and Mr. Pitt, instructed by Messrs. Allen, Allen, and Hemsley, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Windeyer, instructed by Messrs. Fulton and Lowe (agents for Mr. F. B. Kenny, of Bathurst), for the defendant. This was an action brought by Edward Hebden Brodribb, auctioneer, against Arnold Rigby, contractor, to recover balance of account alleged to be due for work done on behalf of defendant under an agreement dated April, 1913. The case on both sides has already appeared.

The jury returned a verdict for plaintiff for £188 12s 7d, after allowing certain deductions, which were specified in their finding.

NO. 1 JURY COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Pring and a jury of 4.)

VERDICT BY CONSENT.

Shannon v Smith.

Mr. Ralston, K.C., and Mr. Norris, instructed by Messrs. Barry and Norris, appeared for plaintiff, Alban Shannon; and Dr. Brissenden, instructed by Messrs. Fisher and Macansh, for defendant, Cluadius Smith. The action was one to recover £174, for money alleged to have been advanced to defendant by plaintiff, and, by consent, a verdict was entered for plaintiff in the sum of £105.

NO. 2 JURY COURT.

£50,000 LIBEL SUIT.

Co-operative Assurance Company v The "Sun" Newspaper, Ltd., and Jobson.

The case was concluded in which the Co-operative Assurance Company, Ltd., sued the "Sun" Newspaper, Ltd., and Alexander Jobson, for £50,000 damages for libel, alleged to be contained in an article written by the defendant Jobson, which appeared in the financial columns of the "Sun" on May 4. The defendants pleaded not guilty.

Mr. Blacket, K.C., Mr. D. S. Edwards, and Mr. Clive Teece (instructed by Messrs. Vindin and Littlejohn) appeared for the plaintiffs; and Mr. Kelynack and Mr. E. M. Mitchell (instructed by Messrs. Minter, Simpson, and Co.), for the defendants.

Mr. Kelynack addressed the jury, arguing that the article in question was fair comment on a matter of public interest, and that, in view of the prospectus issued, offering 215,000 shares, the defendants were entitled to give the public an explanation of the company's balance-sheet. If the plaintiff company had told the public in their prospectus that they were not likely to make money for the time being, and that there was some leeway to be made up, there would have been no need for the defendants' criticism.

The jury returned a verdict for the defendants.

IN EQUITY.

(Before the Chief Judge, Mr. Justice Simpson.)

SUIT FOR AN INJUNCTION.

Spillane and another v Cupit.

Mr. R. K. Manning, instructed by Messrs. Makinson, Plunkett, and d'Apice, appeared on behalf of the plaintiffs, Daniel Spillane and Flora Helena Mann, trustees of the estate of Esmey Farrell, deceased, of the business known as Petty's Hotel; and Mr. R. H. L. Innes, instructed by Messrs. Minter, Simpson, and Company, for the defendant, Charles W. Cupit.

By consent, the interim injunction, which his Honor, Mr. Justice Harvey, granted on the 1st inst, restraining the defendant from withdrawing the sum of £80 6s 7d from the head office of the Bank of New South Wales, or from in any way dealing with the said money, was continued till the first motion day after the vacation.

ESTATE OF THE LATE E. W. KING.

King and another v King and others.

Mr. Maughan appeared for the plaintiffs, Winton Hunt King and William Hubert Kidd, trustees of the will of the late Edward William King, whose estate was valued at about £86,000; Mr. Harriott, for the defendants, Edith Emily Nicholson and Victoria Linda Deakins; and Mr. Davidson for six other defendants, the whole of counsel being instructed by Mr. B. A. M'Bride, agent for Mr. T. D. Ryan, of Bingara.

The will of the testator was before the Court recently on an originating summons, instituted by the plaintiffs, for the determination of the Court of numerous questions. After the questions had been decided, Grace Elizabeth King, widow of the testator, decided to make certain surrenders of her interests in the estate. The trustees were advised that they could not assent to her proposal till the Court had decided the following questions: Did the words "surviving daughters" in the will mean such daughters of testator as have survived him or such as may survive his widow when used with reference to (a) the legacies of £5000, and (b) the shares in the proceeds of the sale of Eulowrie Station, etc; will plaintiffs be justified, with the consent of the widow, in paying over to each daughter of the testator now living and over 21 a one-seventh share of the proceeds of the sale of Eulowrie?

WILL OF LATE PATRICK O'BRIEN.

COURT ASKED FOR DIRECTIONS.

This was an originating summons instituted by Johanna O'Brien (wife of William O'Brien, farmer, of Canterbury, Unanderra), and William Charles Joseph O'Brien, for the determination of certain questions with respect to the will of Patrick O'Brien, deceased, farmer, of Canterbury, Unanderra.

Mr. Davidson, instructed by Mr. B. A. M'Bride, agent for Mr. A. A. Lysaght, of Wollongong, appeared for the plaintiffs; Mr. H. S. Nicholas, instructed by Messrs. A. J. Taylor and Greenwell, agents for Messrs. Owen and Ewing, of Wollongong, for the defendant, Patrick O'Brien; and Mr. Greenwell, of Messrs. A. J. Taylor and Greenwell, for the defendant, Vincent Patrick O'Brien.

Plaintiffs, of whom Johanna O'Brien claimed to be executrix, trustee, and a beneficiary under the will of the testator, asked for the determination of the following question: Whether under the true construction of the will, and in the events that had happened, the words "died without lawful issue" in the devise in the will of a farm of 88 acres at Spring Hill, 8½ acres of land, part of the Berkeley Estate, and two farms of about 50 acres each at West Dapto, known as Brisbane Grove, to the defendant Patrick O'Brien for life, with remainders, meant "dying without having had lawful issue," or "dying without lawful issue living at the time of his death," and for the following orders: That the plaintiff, William Charles Joseph O'Brien, or some other person, be appointed to represent all the future children of the plaintiff, Johanna O'Brien; that Vincent Patrick O'Brien be appointed to represent all the children of the defendant, Patrick O'Brien; and that so much of the real estate as consisted of the lands in question be administered under the direction of the Court.

The matter was allowed to stand over till after the vacation to enable the parties to confer with a view to a settlement.

(Before Mr. Justice Harvey.)

CLAIM BY THE CITY COUNCIL.

Judgment was delivered in the suit brought by the Municipal Council of Sydney against the Bank of Australasia, Sydney University, and the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, and by amendment, George Whitfeld, acting under-secretary of the Attorney-General's Department, as nominal defendant on behalf of the State Government, in which the plaintiff council asked for a declaration that the defendants were liable to pay certain annual payments under the Moore-street Improvement Act.

Mr. Knox, K.C., Mr. Lingen, and Mr. Davidson, instructed by Mr. P. S. Dawson (city solicitor), appeared for the plaintiffs; Mr. Leverrier, K.C., and Mr. Maughan, instructed by Messrs. Norton, Smith, and Co., for the Bank of Australasia; Mr. Langer Owen, K.C., and Mr. H. N. MacLaurin, instructed by Mr. Robert Smith, for the Sydney University; Mr. R. K. Manning and Mr. Parker, instructed by Messrs. Pigott and Stinson, for the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York; and Mr. S. A. Thompson, instructed by the Crown Solicitor, for the State Government.

The suit arose out of resumption of the block of land fronting the General Post Office in Martin-place, by the State Minister for Works under the General Post Office Approaches Act of 1889, which block at the time was owned by various persons, who were liable for city rates. Later on the Moore-street Improvement Act was passed, and subsequently the Minister for Lands transferred certain blocks of land to the three first-named defendants. The City Council claimed that under the Moore-street Improvement Act the defendants were required to pay £5329 as their share of the aggregate amount of contribution for the improvement of Moore-street, by annual payments of £217 9s 4d, extending over 100 years at 4 per cent. from June 1, 1892. The defendants contended that they were not liable for the payments, as when the transfers took place the land belonged to the Crown, and was not taxable.

His Honor said that in the year 1890, at the date of the Moore-street Improvement Act, the Crown was the owner of the land in Martin-place fronting the General Post Office. At that date, and for two or three years after, there were no buildings on the land, which was now the property of the University of Sydney, the Bank of Australasia, and the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, subject to a reservation of a right of possession in the Crown from the General Post Office, which was vested in the Crown on behalf of the Commonwealth, and to a reservation of the Tank Stream, vested in the Crown on behalf of the State of New South Wales. The City Council had claimed against the three defendants their respective contributions of the amount assessed in the Moore-street Improvement Act in respect of that land since the dates on which they respectively acquired their portions of the land. The City Council agreed to release both the Commonwealth and State from any portion of the contributions, and not to charge the defendants with any portion of the amount for which the State and Commonwealth were liable. On those terms the nominal defendant was, with the consent of all parties, dismissed from the suit, and it was proceeded with in the absence of the State and Commonwealth Governments as parties. The facts were not in dispute. The land in question was included as lot 38 in the assessment book deposited under section 6 of the Act, and the Crown was shown as the owners in that assessment and in the list of owners deposited under section 4. The amount assessed upon the land in question was £5329, payable at the rate of £217 9s 4d per annum, including interest, for 100 years. Two questions had been argued before him—the first, whether the land was liable to be assessed for the special betterment contribution? Secondly, assuming it was, over what period, if any, could arrears be recovered? The liability of the land to be assessed for the betterment contribution was based on the contention that the expression "owners of property situated within the said improvement area," in sections 5 and 6 included the Crown.

After citing certain cases, his Honor said the Court had to determine the meaning of the general expression "owners of property within the improved area," for there seemed to be no grounds for cutting down that expression to "owners of rateable property." Seeing that the Crown would be included in the list of owners required by section 4, assuming Crown buildings were included in the list of owners included in the area—and as a matter of fact the General Post Office was included—it appeared to him that he must hold that the expression "owners of property" whenever used in the Act included the Crown. The Legislature was contemplating the Act as applying to Crown property when using the expression "owners of property liable to the city rate," and his Honor thought he ought to hold that it also included the Crown when it used the somewhat more general expression "owners of property." There was nothing in the character of the legislation or the nature of the Crown's ownership to point the other way. He, therefore, held that the lands were liable to be assessed for the betterment contribution.

It had been contended by Mr. Manning that the whole claim for contributions was barred, both for the future as well as the past, because of the failure of the City Council to recover any of the instalments of the contributions for a period of over 20 years—in fact, nothing had ever been received by the council for the lands since the passing of the Act in 1890. His Honor was of opinion that the council was entitled to recover from the defendants their respective contributions to the amount assessed on the lands, since they respectively became owners of their several holdings. Mr. Knox did not press for more than that. There must be a reference to the Master to determine the respective sums in case the parties differed. The defendants must pay the costs of the suit, including the costs of the nominal defendant.

INTEREST IN STATION PROPERTIES.

Adey v Fisher and others.

The hearing was continued of the suit, in which Maude Elizabeth Adey prayed, among other things, that the defendants, James Hamilton Fisher and George Groom Fisher, trustees of a certain settlement, be ordered to deliver up a certain release executed by her to be cancelled.

REID v REID.

Arthur James Reid petitioned for the dissolution of his marriage with Edith Elizabeth Reid (formerly Penrose) on the ground of desertion. The parties were married at Perth, in June, 1904, and separated in 1909.

Mr. Rogers, instructed by Messrs. Webster and Maclean, appeared for the petitioner; and Mr. R. W. Fraser represented the respondent, who contested the suit.

His Honor held that the respondent had not justified her refusal to return to her husband, and granted a decree nisi, returnable in six months.

INDUSTRIAL COURT.

(Before Mr. Deputy-Justice Scholes.)

BOARD REPRESENTATIVE.

Mr. T. Miller, secretary of the United Storemen's Union, handed in a communication from Mr. Smith, secretary of the Interstate Steamship Owners' Association, nominating Mr. B. N. Black, of the Adelaide Steamship Company, as the employers' representative on the Transport Group, No. 21 Board.

His Honor recommended the nomination.

NEWSPAPER EMPLOYEES.

The application by the Sydney Daily Newspapers Employers' Association for the constitution of an industrial board for such workers as are employed in the production of the daily and other newspapers printed and published by the applicants, and for the variation of certain existing awards relating to the employment of such workers, was called on.

There was also a matter of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, applicants, and the Sydney Daily Newspaper Association and others, respondents, in which the applicants sought a transposition, division, combination, rearrangement or re-grouping of the industries or callings mentioned in schedule 1 of the Industrial Arbitration Act of 1912, and a further order amending the constitution of the Iron and Shipbuilding Trades Group, No. 1 Board.

Both matters were adjourned till the 8th inst.

A PRELIMINARY OBJECTION.

The Metropolitan Board of Water Supply and Sewerage employees sought a variation of the award of the Government Employees' Group (Water and Sewerage Board), No. 1 Board. Mr. Croft appeared for the applicants; and Mr. Curlewis (instructed by Mr. Williams) for the Water and Sewerage Board.

At the outset, Mr. Curlewis took the objection that the leave to appeal should be rescinded because it was obtained by misrepresentation. The affidavit on which leave was obtained, he said, stated that the board had not appealed against the award, and concealed the fact that the board's attention was not drawn to the effect of the award till the time for appealing had lapsed; further, that the affidavit alleged that the increased rates had been paid since the award, whereas, in effect, the first payment was not made till after the time for appealing had elapsed. He quoted the cases of Baudains v Liquidators of the Jersey Banking Company, 13 A.R., 832, and Bulkeley v Scutz, L.R., 3 P.C., 196.

The matter was argued at great length, and in giving judgment on the point, his Honor said that Mr. Curlewis made the application on the ground that the leave was granted on an affidavit that was either suppressio veri or suggestio falsi. He said it was fraudulent as understood for the purpose of the application, in that it suggested, first of all, that the Water and Sewerage Board, after the award had been published, paid to the employees affected the rates awarded and had so paid them up till April 22. It was said that that was a false statement, in that it suggested that the Water and Sewerage Board acquiesced in the claim by such a payment for such a long time, without stating that the board might have paid those rates without knowledge of the fact that a mistake had been made. On July 1 the secretary of the applicant union made a claim for increased payment, and Mr. Holmes, secretary of the W. and S. Board, and a member of the wages board, in his affidavit said that the claim came as a surprise to him, and was brought to their attention with something of a shock; yet, in August, a month after this, having got notice of the alleged mistake in the award, they paid the wages due without calling attention to the fact that a mistake was being made by the secretary of the claimant union. He thought, when the facts had been elucidated, that the statement was not false. The point was also taken that the affidavit was false in its statement that no appeal was lodged by the board against the award, because the attention of the board was not called to the facts by the union till after the time for the appeal had lapsed. He found, on looking at the award, that if a mistake had been made, anyone reading the award would have discovered it, because it was plain that the people for whom the extra rate was claimed were entitled to it so long as the award stood. Under these circumstances, he said, that the Court was not misled. At the same time, though he was only a deputy for Mr. Justice Heydon, and that only for a short time, he believed that Mr. Justice Heydon would approve of the statement that any party making an ex parte application for leave to appeal upon an affidavit that was suppressio veri or suggestio falsi would do so at the risk of having the leave to appeal rescinded. The case would go on.

The hearing was adjourned till Monday.

(Before Mr. G. C. Addison, Chief Industrial Magistrate.)

UNION DUES.

Joseph J. Grainger, secretary of the Australasian Meat Industry Employees' Union, proceeded against J. B. Franklin for the recovery of £7 13s 9d, alleged to be due to the union. The amount was made up as follows:—Half-yearly subscription, 13s; 11 weeks' levy, £1 15s 9d; fines, 5s on March 17, and £5 on March 24.

Complainant prosecuted in person, and Mr. Breckenridge, instructed by Messrs. Boyce and Magney, appeared for the defence.

Complainant stated in evidence that defendant refused to pay the levy. He was fined 5s for not attending a board meeting when summoned to do so. Defendant came to the meeting on the second occasion in response to a letter and was asked to give an account of himself for working in opposition to a resolution carried at a general meeting. Witness could not express the opinion of the men when they inflicted the fine of £5.

In defence Mr. Breckenridge submitted that the levy was illegally made, that the fine of 5s was unreasonable, as defendant should have been heard before it was inflicted, and that, in regard to the £5 fine, it was inflicted by a body called the board of control, which was not referred to at all in the rules. In that regard, defendant was summoned before some men who were not an official body.

An order was made against defendant for 13s, with costs.

In a similar proceeding against Percy W. Short, in which £2 6s was claimed—13s arrears, 13s for the half year to June 30, 1914, and £1 in fines—an order was made against defendant for £1 6s, with 6s costs.

L. H. Scott was also proceeded against by the same complainant for the recovery of £9 17s, made up of £2 11s 6d arrears, 13s subscription, and £1 7s 6d levy, and £5 5s fines. An order was made against defendant for £2 18s 6d, with 6s costs.

CRIMINAL COURT OF APPEAL.

(Before the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Pring, and Mr. Justice Gordon.)

APPEAL DISMISSED.

Rex v C. E. B. Eather.

Mr. George Martin and Mr. C. G. Addison, instructed by Mr. J. W. Abigail, appeared in support of the appeal; and Mr. Browning for the Crown in support of the conviction. The prisoner, Charles Edward Barwon Eather, was convicted, before Judge Hamilton, at Darlinghurst Quarter Sessions, of an assault on a girl under the age of 16 years, and was sentenced to 15 months' hard labour. The jury had, however, recommended him to mercy on account of prisoner's good character. He now appealed on the ground that there was no corroboration such as required by the 418th section (sub-section 2) of the Crimes Act.

Argument was heard on the 26th June, and the judgment of the Court was now delivered.

The Chief Justice said that the sole point arising in the case was whether there was such corroborative evidence of the child's statement as complied with the requirements of sub-section 2 of section 418 of the Crimes Act of 1900. That sub-section provided that the evidence would only be admissible if it corroborated in some material particulars the statement of the child. It must be material, it must corroborate the unsworn statement of the child, and it must be evidence implicating accused. He was of opinion that the evidence objected to complied with the requirements of the sub-section, and that the meaning of the expressions "material," "corroborative," and "implicating" could not depend in any way on the fact that the evidence of the child was not upon oath. The meaning of the expressions would be the same as if the charge itself was directly supported by sworn evidence. The difficulty arose from the precise terms employed by the Legislature in forbidding a conviction unless the testimony admitted by virtue of the section was corroborated by some other material evidence in support thereof. Taken with the other circumstances, the evidence was plainly admissible, and plainly tended to implicate accused. Then came the question, Was it "material," within the meaning of the sub-section? By "material," he understood the sub-section to mean evidence of material assistance to the jury to enable it to come to a conclusion on the question of the guilt or innocence. He thought the evidence could only be treated as corroborative, and was, therefore, admissible as assisting the jury to come to a conclusion as to the guilt or innocence of accused. For these reasons it seemed to him that the ruling of the Judge was right, and that the appeal must be dismissed and the conviction upheld.

Mr. Justice Pring said that the provision in the section enabling a child to make a statement, which was not on oath, was a very serious inroad upon the general rule of evidence; but the Legislature had provided a safeguard against any difficulty that might arise from taking evidence of that kind by imposing the restriction contained in sub-section 2, that no person should be convicted of a charge of this nature unless the child's evidence was corroborated by some material evidence in support thereof implicating accused. He did not think, apart from her statement, that the evidence would be sufficient if it merely raised a presumption of the guilt of the accused. He thought the Legislature, in passing subsection 2, intended that the statement of the child should be corroborated by other evidence of a material nature implicating accused, and he rested his decision on the ground that the evidence referred to was not evidence which in any way corroborated the statement of the child. He, therefore, thought that the evidence was inadmissible, and that the conviction should be quashed.

Mr. Justice Gordon said it had been argued that the Judge at the trial was wrong in directing the jury that certain facts brought before them were entitled to be considered as corroborative of the child's statement. He agreed with the Chief Justice that the evidence objected to was corroborative of the child's statement, and was, therefore, admissible to enable the jury to determine whether accused was guilty or not.

Appeal (by majority) dismissed, and conviction upheld.

QUARTER SESSIONS.

(Before Judge Docker and a jury.)

Mr. R. J. Browning, Crown Prosecutor.

POSTPONED.

David McCall and Henry Douglas, both young men, pleaded not guilty to a charge of having maliciously wounded Almed Sali, at Sydney, on June 13.

On the application of Mr. Parker, for Mr. E. R. Abigail, who appeared for the accused, the hearing was postponed generally. Mr. Parker said that he was not prepared with the defence.

CONVICTED OF SERIOUS OFFENCE.

John Dring, an elderly man, was convicted on a charge of having committed a serious offence at Ryde on May 28. He conducted his own defence.

Dring was sentenced to two years' imprisonment in Grafton Gaol. His Honor said that the prisoner had committed an offence for which he was liable to five years' penal servitude, and in imposing a lighter sentence he had taken his age into consideration.

INJURED PROPERTY.

William Schemann, 26, for maliciously injuring property, owned by John Delaney, doing damage to the extent of £12, to which charge he had pleaded guilty, was sentenced to three months' hard labour in the Long Bay Penitentiary. His Honor said that if the prisoner paid £12 compensation to the prosecutor within a month he would recommend his release on license at the end of a month.

ASSAULT AND ROBBERY.

James Galvin, 34, who had pleaded guilty to a charge of assaulting John Callanan, at Sydney, on May 29, and robbing him of a watch and chain, was ordered to be imprisoned in Goulburn Gaol for 12 months, with hard labour.

The prisoner attributed his downfall to drink, which his Honor said was an argument in favour of not drinking, "for drink leads you into crime," added the Judge.

BREAKING AND ENTERING.

John Henry Turner, 23, who admitted breaking and entering the dwelling-house of Owen Hughes, at Ingleburn, on May 28, and stealing a walking-stick, a purse, a quantity of tools, and some postage stamps, was sentenced to be imprisoned with hard labour in Goulburn Gaol for three months.

His Honor said that it was not an ordinary case of breaking and entering, for the prisoner had but taken temporary possession of a week-end residence, and to aid his respectability he used a walking stick which was there. The other goods were found in the house apparently ready for removal.

The Crown Prosecutor asked his Honor if the prisoner could be treated as a first offender, providing the Prisoners' Aid Society or some of Turner's friends obtained a situation for him.

His Honor said that if the prisoner obtained employment he would make a recommendation for his release as a first offender.

ASSAULTED A CONSTABLE.

Ernest Swift, 34, who had pleaded guilty to charges of assaulting Constable Angus McKnight, at Sydney, on June 20, and of assaulting the constable with intent to prevent the lawful apprehension of another man on suspicion of being concerned in breaking and entering a dwelling house, on the same occasion, was sentenced to two years' hard labour in Parramatta Gaol, the terms to be concurrent.

BIGAMIST SENTENCED.

Robert Archibald Byrne, 23, who had pleaded guilty to a charge of bigamy, was sentenced to two years' hard labour in Goulburn Gaol.

SOLD TIME-PAYMENT FURNITURE.

William Alfred Connor, 30, who had pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing a quantity of furniture and bedding, the property of George Goldsmid, at Hunter's Hill, on May 9, was called up for sentence.

Mr. W. M. McMahon, who appeared for the prisoner, said that Connor had sold some furniture which he was purchasing on the time-payment system. He had obtained £10 by this means, but as the whole of the furniture had been recovered, and the police had £8 belonging to the prisoner, he asked his Honor to allow Connor out as a first offender on paying the balance.

According to police evidence, the prisoner had sold the furniture so as to obtain funds to allow him and his brother's wife to go to the country, where they had obtained a position as brother and sister.

When the prisoner's brother was called, he stated that what was said about his wife was true, and gave his Honor a written statement, which, after perusal, was handed to Mr. McMahon, who said that it had opened up a new aspect of the case, with which he was unfamiliar.

Under the circumstances, his Honor said that he would defer sentencing for a week.

STOLE AN OVERCOAT.

Edward Colwell, 33, admitted stealing an overcoat, belonging to David Jones, Ltd., at Sydney, on June 1, and was sentenced to be imprisoned with hard labour in Parramatta Gaol for two years.

THEFT OF CLOTHING.

Francis Carl Williams, 27, was sentenced to 12 months' hard labour in Goulburn Gaol, he having pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing a coat, two vests, one pair of trousers, and a shirt, the property of Percy Herd Stacy, at Sydney on May 19.

FOUND WITH REVOLVER AT NIGHT.

Alfred Gordon, 23, who pleaded guilty to a charge of having, at Ashfield, on June 9, been found at night armed with a revolver, with intent to enter a building and commit a felony, was sentenced to 12 months' hard labour in Goulburn Gaol.

YOUTHS SENTENCED.

Leslie James M'Kay, 17, and John Alfred Lawler, 16, who had pleaded guilty to nine charges of breaking and entering and stealing from dwellings at Belmore, Chatswood, Campsie, Homebush, Kogarah, Turramurra, and Rockdale, were sentenced to two years' hard labour on each of three charges (concurrent), and to two years' hard labour on each of the other six charges (also concurrent), the latter sentence to commence at the expiration of the other one. Mr. J. W. Abigail appeared for M'Kay.

FOUR YEARS' HARD LABOUR.

Jean Louis Lantham, 24, pleaded guilty to three charges of stealing motor cycles belonging to his Majesty the King, to Bennett and Wood, Ltd., and to Samuel Francis Morris, of Tamworth, respectively, and was sentenced to two years' hard labour on each of the charges, the terms to be cumulative, on the first two counts.

STEALING IN DWELLING.

Jose Keliero, 40, was sentenced to two years' hard labour in Bathurst Gaol, he having pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing from the dwelling of James Giblett, at Sydney, on February 27, a quantity of jewellery and other articles.

What a marvellous, surprising, gladdening experience it is. Scarcely believable to those who have never tried it. Just the saving up of those little coins which unfortunately we know we spend too readily—which is being done by hundreds of our clients every day—and those small, slippery coins are buying them a grand Home Site allotment—
READY FOR A HOME OF THEIR OWN!
READY FOR A HOME OF THEIR OWN!
READY FOR A HOME OF THEIR OWN!
One hard-working, steady man we know—who started with us a few years ago, paying off a little lot 45ft x 150ft—has paid off three other lots with the money he used to spend in "CIGS." and "SIPS." WE'VE GOT GREAT RESPECT FOR THAT MAN. Not because of the land he has acquired from us on RICKARD'S EASY TERMS, but because he has PROVED himself and WON THE FIGHT OVER HIS FORMER WEAKNESSES. It's grand!
YOU CAN DO IT EVERY DAY WITH PROFIT,
YOU CAN DO IT EVERY DAY WITH PROFIT,
too. We want to see (we can help you to do it) EVERY MAN T OOWN HIS OWN HOME, and RICKARD'S EASY TERMS are the safest, surest, and most profitable way to realise it.
We've got the largest Estate—the finest variety of properties in the best suburbs—the keenest values—easily acquired on the EASIEST TERMS IN THE WORLD—and a LONG WAY CHEAPER THAN BY PAYING CASH.

THE QUICKEST WAY TO ACCUMULATE MONEY
IS TO INVEST IN A HOME
AT ROSEBERY,
AT ROSEBERY,
AT ROSEBERY.
"The Model and Industrial Suburb."

The Married Man with a Wife and family dependent on him needs no telling that it's mighty hard these Times of High Rents and increasing burdens to put Money aside agin a Rainy Day. The Rent's greatly to blame, and it's the Rent that must be tackled first.

THIS CAN BE SUCCESSFULLY ACCOMPLISHED BY INVESTING IN A HOME OF YOUR OWN AT ROSEBERY.

Here you have ready for occupation as neat and attractive a Cottage as you could desire, requiring as Deposit the low sum of £50. This is the only initial outlay; it entitles you to undisputed occupancy. Thereafter, each week you pay 25/, which covers both Principal and Interest. These Terms apply to Cottages ranging from £685 up to £900, so you have the widest choice in both size and style.

BUT HERE'S THE PITH OF THE WHOLE PROPOSITION.

Instead of your weekly payment for Rent being a DEAD LOSS, it now represents CAPITAL INVESTED—Capital you can easily liquidate should you so desire, because every year sees your property becoming more valuable, and therefore sought after by Investors. There are no restrictions to prevent you from selling at any time.

So you see, buying a home at Rosebery IS the quickets way to accumulate money.
Take a run out to ROSEBERY this afternoon; visit our Office—which is open all day—and ask to be shown all the Homes now available. Make a point of it.

MONEY MAKES MONEY! RICKARD'S
MONEY MAKES MONEY! EASY TERMS,
MONEY MAKES MONEY! FOR FARM SITES!

"RIGHT YOU ARE—BUT WHERE IS IT?" say you. Do you know, there are many prosperous, independent Farmers to-day who once asked the same question? Yes; they were advised to give us a call, and RICKARD'S EASY TERMS DID THE REST! There's no fairy tale or witchery about it. Simply plain common sense, which showed those worthy men and women that a sovereign invested in land is worth four or five hundred per cent. more than a sovereign in the bank, with its paltry three per cent. Money kept in the bank at this rate never multiplied yet; but savings put into a Farm Site is going to make more money for you. Beauty of the proposition we hold out to you is that you only need a few pounds to own your own farm lands—because RICKARD'S EASY TERMS makes the whole thing so easy, equitable, and sure for you—that a nominal sum per month is all that is needed to keep up your payments (INCLUDING INTEREST AT ONLY FIVE PER CENT. PER ANNUM AT THAT), and to make the entire property absolutely your own freehold for your family and your family's children. Now—it's up to you to give us a call or write us now. Just mention what kind of land you want, whether for General Agriculture, Fruit, Market Gardening, Poultry, etc., and you'll get BY RETURN POST full particulars, with pleasure.

EASY TERMS; TORRENS TITLE FOR EVERY BLOCK.

Only £1 down, and 10/ monthly (including interest at 5 per cent. per annum) for every £25 worth purchased—WILL PUT YOU RIGHT ON THE ROAD TO SUCCESS.

With the wharfage rights that could, no doubt, be obtained from the Harbour Trust, the area could be increased to about 2¼ ACRES.

AN OLD TIME RACE MEETING.

(By A. H.)

In the early days, Wilberforce, a centre in the horse-breeding district, which had grown up about the Lower Hawkesbury Valley, had the distinction of being the best and most fashionable of the racecourses outside Sydney. The September meeting, followed by a great horse market, was attended by all the notables from Sydney, as well as from the surrounding country settlements. So great was the enthusiasm, and love of the sport amongst the pioneers, that great journeys were made from such distant spots as Bathurst and from the Fish River, where the enterprising Dr. Ramsay had established himself and his family, building a beautiful stone residence near the site of the Jenolan Caves. These journeys by the great folk were made in style, in spite of the wretched condition of the blazed trails, which were being converted into roads as quickly as might be by the Government. The Lees, the Lords, and the Ramsays left their Bathurst homes together, a procession of fine family coaches, with postillions, and a small military escort granted them by the Governor's council; for the roads were not only difficult to horses and to drivers, but also troubled by bushrangers.

The ladies of the family would on no account be left behind—they must make at least an annual visit to the capital, for their courtesy visit to Government House, also that there might be a reunion of old friends. September made a delightful month for the journey; then, too, they could take Wilberforce race meeting (by a light detour) on the way. But for women to travel, and make an appearance, they must have luggage, so each great coach was followed by a baggage cart. Wide crinolines, and taffetas ball gowns must not be crushed; the great crinoline hoops especially absolutely refusing to be in any way crowded. Husbands and brothers might fume, but they had to submit, and after all, no one would be delighted more than the men of the family at the appearance of the hoops on the racecourse, or in the ballroom, set off with the thousand and one delightful little frills which were the mode. How charming, too, were the faces beneath the queer coalscuttle bonnets, with their great rosette at each ear, and strings tied daintily beneath chins. The middle-aged matrons, and older women, gave a finishing touch in the little ruffled cap worn beneath the bonnet. All these things required room, however, and with bad roads and uncertain weather—still needs must—and the cavalcade started in fine holiday humour, with much gay tooting of horns, and the singing of hunting choruses.

From Sydney outwards numerous similar parties converged towards Wilberforce, the little settlement with its lovely background of mountain, and its foreground of river reaches, all green with springing maize. The roads from Parramatta to Windsor lay through virgin country, where the copper red young gum trees were whitening with clusters of early blossoms, and the wattles were already golden with their scented festoons. No wonder the way was gay with song and laughter, with impromptu coach races, as well as horse events. Sad to relate, the pioneers had, many of them, a very pretty taste in bulldogs, and the men of the party enlivened the evening halts with a contest between their favourites, the ladies being left, on such occasions, to their own entertainment. They did not find it dull, however, in meeting old friends again after long intervals, and comparing notes on the fashions, and the changes going on in the life around them, the women passed the evenings in lively fashion. The spirit of gaiety was abroad, that spirit bred of hardship and of enterprise, which has been replaced (or so says my diarist) by a poor make-believe, which he calls the spirit of luxury. Gayest of all the cavalcade was the sporting Governor's party, which reached Wilberforce on the fourth of the month, the day before the great race fixed for the 5th.

On this September day the great event was the Cup, with a prize, big for the times, of 300 guineas. Seventeen horses started—the picked horses of Australia. Seven out of the number had already greatly distinguished themselves, notably the first favourite, Discount, the property of O. Baldwin, ridden by a very fine young horseman, who had only just entered the ranks of professional riders, Harry Willis; and loud were the cheers as he brought the beautiful bay up to the start. Curiously, the second favourite, Birmingham, which had won several big events at Parramatta and Liverpool, was ridden by a brother, Tom Willis, who later on had a reputation as a trainer, as well as rider. Tom also received an ovation as he rode up on his great iron grey. The brothers shook hands, each being resolved to make the effort of his life. Another brother, Fred, was riding in the same event a young colt, Wilberforce, the property of Mr. Ben Richards. Wilberforce was a beautiful dark brown animal, very young, as was also his stripling rider, and the pair received favourable notice from the crowd during the short preliminary canter, before taking up the assigned position by the starter's box.

Wilberforce, however, had nothing of the record of either Birmingham, belonging to St. Ives, or of Discount, though the colt had shown fine form during some preliminary gallops. Backers were shy, as his temper was uncertain, though he came of fine pedigreed stock. The big field of 17 got away in excellent style, Discount and Birmingham keeping a slight lead from the rest of the field. Discount, leading Birmingham by about half a head, was followed by Pygmalion and a mare called Psyche, and close upon Psyche came Wilberforce, swinging along in fine, easy style, apparently enjoying his run, but not disposed to answer his young rider's urgent rein and spur. As the field swept round the turn at the half-mile post the colt seemed to become suddenly conscious of the fact that this was no careless gallop, but almost a life and death affair, for he lifted his head and settled down to a pace so tremendous that he was a length ahead of Discount almost before the rider of the latter realised the position. Then ensued a magnificent struggle between the three leading horses and their riders, while the crowd in the stand and paddocks shouted themselves hoarse. The rest of the field were left some lengths behind, as Discount closed up, regaining lost ground, and Birmingham pressed close, maintaining his position, but not gaining an inch. As the three entered the straight Wilberforce kept a lead of a head, while Discount to the right and Birmingham on the left seemed to tie. Never on any course has a more gallant struggle been seen. The pace up the straight has perhaps left an unbeaten record in Australian annals, and though the public had lost heavily, they cheered and cheered again as amidst a babel of voices an hurrahs, the brown colt gallantly carried its rider past the judge's box—a winner by a head; followed by Discount, and, half a head behind the latter, Birmingham.

The crowd, in spite of losses, grew enthusiastic, the three brothers were carried from the course, shoulder high, the winner receiving a tremendous ovation—a purse of sovereigns being almost immediately collected as a fitting recognition of the rider's effort, for it was a matter of common knowledge that the boy had backed Discount, his brother's mount, somewhat heavily, and that he had ridden to win and lose at the same time. Following the races came the sale at Windsor, when Wilberforce changed hands. He kept his record good for a year or two, being then sent to a well-known stud farm. Some of the finest records of the turf can be traced to admixture of his blood and spirit.

Australia has grown rich, and is on the way to become a great nation, from the heritage these fine pioneer people left her, and fine, indeed, will it be for her sons, if they have inherited also the generous spirit, the gaiety of heart, the honesty, and the courage of these sporting forbears.

THE WOOL TRADE.

NEW SEASON COMMENCES.

There is good inquiry for wool, but the volume of business passing is within very narrow dimensions. Most of the withdrawn lots from the last auctions have been dealt with, and available lines of locally-treated skin wools are being cleared at very firm values. Interest for the moment is centred in the sheep forward at the show and for the stud and flock sales. Next week comes the London July sales; and, as the offerings there are within moderate proportions, and the demand for consumptive purposes as strong as at any time during the last few months, the prospect is for a hardening instead of any weakening in values. According to cables, the new arrivals aggregated 286,000 bales, of which 144,000 bales were forwarded direct to manufacturers in the United Kingdom and overseas, leaving, inclusive of 5000 bales held over, a total of 146,500 bales, as compared with 171,000 bales for the corresponding series last year. As the proportion of merino and fine crossbred is small, a very keen demand is expected for such descriptions, at 2½ to 5 per cent. higher, while other sorts will show little, if any, change. Some indication of the position, as far as the trade in the United Kingdom is concerned, is given in the Yorkshire papers to hand by last mail. The "Observer" of May 25 remarking that, "although spinners admit that there is not the slightest prospect of relief until late in the year, and that before relief comes prices may go even higher than they are now, they are simply buying to cover their requirements from week to week, and are content to take the risk of future advances. Any expedient to make present stocks last out is welcome; fine counts are sought before thick, and, where customers have contracts for yarns out of either merino or fine crossbred, every effort is made to induce them to increase the proportion of particulars for the latter. Topmakers, of course, are in a strong position. The small amount of wool they have in hand or to come forward makes them indifferent sellers, and consequently prices keep thoroughly firm, even if they do not advance. Then, turning to the coarser grades, said: "The turnover in medium crossbred tops is considerably larger than in fine sorts, but it is nothing to speak of in comparison with the greater bulk of the stocks of medium crossbred wool on the market, and business is generally represented to be slow. Crossbred combers, although better off than their colleagues, who are wholly dependent on merinos, are by no means busy. Perhaps they would be if topmakers turned over to them all the wool in their possession, but a good deal is being held back on the chance of its ultimately making a better price in the raw state for America, whose wool hunger is still unappeased."

It would also seem, from a later report, that the American demand at the opening sales in London next week will be a reflex of the keen buying as experienced here on United States account. The "Observer," of May 28, saying:—"The best feature of the market just now is the American demand for wool, the persistence of which is a matter of no little wonderment, since the reports as to the state of trade in America are not particularly good, and it is generally understood not more than from 70 to 80 per cent. of the machinery in the woollen and worsted industries is fully employed. But it should not be forgotten that American imports were smaller than usual last year, and that there is going to be a considerable reduction in the size of this year's domestic clip. If, therefore, the present American demand can be explained as due to the sheer necessity of replenishing stocks, it ceases to be a paradox. Those who are benefiting by it are content to accept the fact without attempting to account for it, but consumers are not at all pleased to see so much good wool passing out of their reach. As far as can be discovered, not much has been done recently for America in tops and yarns, although there are some fair-sized contracts still to be completed, and it is believed that later on quite a decent trade may be developed in high-class Botany yarns.

At the opening sales, for the current Australian statistical wool year, in Melbourne on Wednesday last, America secured the bulk of the best lots, the largest proportion of the offerings being secured by the Continent, with Yorkshire prominent to a considerable extent. Six catalogues aggregated 6374 bales. A very fair proportion of the offerings came from Queensland. All the wools catalogued really were from the 1913-14 season, and will appear in the 1914-15 year's sales, amounting, however, to an infinitesimal percentage in the total in June next. The selection was a fairly attractive one, through the inclusion of the lines from Queensland in the offerings. A strong market ruled for good greasy merino, also scoured, which ruled 10 per cent., and in places 12½, above the April rates; medium greasy 5 to 7½ per cent. higher; wasty and inferior sorts showing no change. Good scoured were 7½ per cent. higher, while other sorts were dull, and in buyers' favour. Greasy sold to /16½, and scoured to /25½. Among the principal sales in the grease were:—Aramac, from Barcaldine, to /16¾ for 48 bales, and /16 for 132 bales, some 367 bales averaging /15¼. The necks made to /14¾, which is a halfpenny higher than the record recently obtained in Brisbane, broken to /13¼, and A pieces to /9¼. Weribone, from Surat, to /15¾ for 49 bales 1st combing, 49 bales /15¼, 85 bales /15, com to /14¼, necks to /12¾, broken to /12, 1st pieces /10¾. Corinda, which showed a fair amount of canary stain, made to /15¼ for 49 bales A, 1st A /14¼, AE /14, AA /13¾, 1st necks to /13¼, and broken to /12¼. Evora over Queensland, from Yalleroi, a nice handling wool of good quality and in good condition, made to /15.

The next sales, and last of the winter series of auctions, in the Sydney market, are arranged for July 28, 29, and 30. Preceding that fixture, however, is the next series in Brisbane, opening on July 21. About 23,000 to 25,000 bales are likely to be offered, catalogues for the series closing on July 17.

CONTINENT MAINSTAY OF MARKETS.

Messrs. Wenz and Co., summarising the Australasian season that closed on Tuesday last, say that in spite of a constant feeling of discomfort, caused by dear money, never-ending troubles in the Balkans, revolution in Mexico, financial complications in South America, all reacting upon the hitherto high state of prosperity throughout the world, wool not only maintained its already high level, but ended by rising, under the influence of its sound statistical position, and of machinery requirements. Whereas the price of tops was upheld by the reduced condition of stocks, that of raw wool should normally have been affected by the reserve shown by manufacturers, and have come down to a level, leaving a margin of profit. Instead of that, save for a slight reaction in December, it remained firm on a basis that was 5 per cent. higher than last season, and when, after a long period of stagnation, a revival of consumption did set in at the end of the year, there was a further rise of 5 to 10 per cent. in the first months of the new year. Last year's decrease of 310,000 bales in Australasia and 60,000 bales in the River Plate (equal to about 150,000 colonial bales) thus dominated all other considerations, first preventing a decline in the last quarter of 1913, and then causing a new advance. The new tariff in America, which favours the import of wool and manufactures of wool, contributed largely to the revival of trade in 1914. Winter set in rather late, but the cold was sharp and of sufficient duration to help to clear the stock of goods, notably hosiery. The Continent again was the mainstay of the oversea markets. England, frankly pessimistic, came into the arena too late to secure its normal quantity. America began to buy steadily from November onwards, securing 101,000 bales, against 37,000 bales in 1912-13.

NEGLECTING CROSSBRED CLASSING AND BREEDING.

With reference to New South Wales wools, they found the clip well grown and sound, but considerably coarser in fibre and rather faultier: there being a great deal of warp and very little fine weft wool. New England showed very little change from the previous season, but the wools from all other districts, especially the southern, were coarser, denser, and longer. Crossbred wools were more plentiful, but, say Messrs. Wenz, their classing and breeding seems to be neglected in New South Wales. Lambs were in larger supply, but very few of good length. The clip sold in Melbourne they found a good one, Riverina wools being well grown, but [illegible] than the previous year. Those from [illegible], Gippsland, and Tasmania were very [illegible] in every respect. The Queensland clip was distinguished by the absence of absolutely free wools. It was coarser and faultier than in the previous season. The wools shorn after the winter were particularly well conditioned. The South Australian clip on the whole was more sandy and drier than in 1912-13, and not so well grown.

PRODUCTION AND SIGNS OF CHANGE.

In the matter of production and effects of closer settlement, the French house says:—A fairly satisfactory season in nearly all the States caused an increase of about 150,000 to 175,000 bales, due chiefly to the heavier weight shorn per head, as the flocks of grown sheep could not yet show any increase. This figure only counterbalances this year's decrease in the River Plate (about 40,000 to 50,000 bales), and does not do away with last year's decrease of 310,000 bales in Australasia, which continues to affect the price of wool. The cutting up of large estates still goes on, and, judging by past experience, should serve to increase the number of sheep in the future, but it means that there will be more small mixed clips and less well-classed brands. The proportion of crossbred sheep is steadily rising.

PROGRESS OF LOCAL MARKETS.

Messrs. Wenz and Co. noted that the tendency to sell in the Australian markets was more pronounced this year than ever before, saying that the Sydney market showed the most increase, and Melbourne also sold considerably more wool than last year. Brisbane shows little progress, and Adelaide remains stationary. However desirable it may be to extend the season after the recess, it would be well if the brokers in Sydney realised that there is no use in trying to begin their regular roster before the middle of September, as even under favourable conditions supplies are too scanty at the beginning of the month. Between-season sales in Sydney and Brisbane continue to grow in importance, particularly in the latter market, and help to spread supplies in a manner very welcome to the trade. From May to August, 1913, 160,000 B/ were sold, so that one can no longer really speak of an off-season in Australia.

THE WOOL OUTLOOK.

In concluding their review, Messrs. Wenz and Co., speaking of the new season prospects, say:—Although insufficient supplies have forced prices up to an unquestionably high level, wool continues to occupy the front rank among textiles, for, though fashion may decree that not much wool is required for worsted dress goods, it enters very largely into woollens, hosiery, ulsters, and knitted goods, which are nowadays much used by both sexes in the domain of sport. The ground lost by worsteds is thus made up by woollen, etc., as is proved by the very high prices paid for inferior wools, noils, and wastes, of which the supply is actually very small. As wool can only be supplanted to a limited degree, its position can hardly be seriously shaken until there is a fairly large increase in production, which is not possible for the present, so that prices should be kept from falling. Since the beginning of the year trade has been more active, but not sufficiently so to enable manufacturers to raise their prices so as to leave a margin of profit. That, however, appears to be the only way out of the present abnormal situation, as relief from the wool end seems improbable. It is satisfactory to note that speculation continues to keep away from wool, so that exaggerations are happily avoided. The prospects for the coming season in Australia are good, ample rains have fallen, and a normal increase may be expected. News form the River Plate is not quite so satisfactory. Rain has been general, but in Uruguay there have been losses of sheep from disease, and in the Argentine a noticeable increase cannot be anticipated, although there is a tendency to leave agriculture and return to sheep.

BRADFORD TOPS.

According to our cable of yesterday's date, there is little business passing in the Bradford tops market, although there is a fair inquiry. Merinos and crossbreds are slow, and prices are unchanged. On the corresponding date last year there was a slightly better tone in the market. Merino quotations were unchanged, but business was restricted. The course of values compares as follows:—

WOOL SHIPMENTS.

Shipments from Sydney have been on a very light scale during the week, three vessels clearing the Sydney Customs for the United Kingdom and foreign ports with a total of only 419 bales, as compared with four vessels for the closing week of the 1912-13 season with 677 bales. During the season ended June 30 there was an increase in the shipments from Sydney of 80,402 bales, and a decrease from Newcastle of 1177 bales. SHEEP SHOW.

OFFICIAL OPENING DAY.

FUTURE OF THE MERINO.

BRITISH BREEDS INCREASING.

The 20th annual show of the New South Wales Sheepbreeders' Association, at the Royal Agricultural Society's Ground, was formally opened yesterday by the Governor (Sir Gerald Strickland).

The president (Sir Francis Suttor), in welcoming his Excellency, said:—

"When I addressed your Excellency on a similar occasion last year, I informed you that the number of sheep entered for competition then was greater than at any previous exhibition of this association. In these classes there were 345 merinos, 414 of the different British breeds, and 97 non-competitive sheep, making a total of 856 sheep on exhibition. At the show you are now opening, there are 270 merinos, 527 British and other breeds, competing in the various classes. To those may be added 126 non-competitive sheep on show, making a total of 923, a greater number than we have ever had before.

"Although it has been unfortunate that in some of our pastoral districts, the past season has not been very propitious, it is satisfactory to know that our staple product—wool—continues to be in great demand, with remunerative prices, and the value of stock is high, and in all probability likely to continue so.

"I thank your Excellency for the kind support and encouragement you have given the association."

Sir Gerald Strickland said he realised that the prosperity of New South Wales was due principally to the brains, determination, and integrity of those who started the sheep-breeding industry in the State. "The trials they went through in the early days of drought," he went on, "have been absent of late. The industry has been prosperous, and I hope that science, the starting of railways, the co-operation of financial institutions, and experience will make us, if not immune from droughts, certainly safe against a repetition of the trials of the past. (Applause.) Of course there is a decrease in the number of sheep as compared with the number before the great drought; but, perhaps, there were too many sheep in those days. (Laughter.) The industry is one of the greatest sources of the wealth and prosperity of this State. (Applause.) I have much pleasure in declaring the show open. (Applause.)

A pleasant change in the weather conditions made a great difference in the attendance, which was greater than for the corresponding day at last year's show. The champion and grand champion merinos were exhibited in the pens of honour in the centre of the pavilion, where they were inspected by throngs of interested visitors. A large proportion of those who attend the sheep show are either breeders of sheep or interested in some way in the industry. This is very evident by the way the various exhibits are subjected to handling for testing the wool qualities of those under inspection. The exhibition of sheep has a high educational value, and is taken advantage of by the students of the Technical College wool classes and by the University students taking the agricultural course. Professor Watt, accompanied by a number of these students, made a round of inspection during the day.

The pavilion devoted to British breeds came in for a large share of attention, visitors being able to view all the champions apart from the other sheep in the classes. The crossbred carcases from the Government experiment farms were valued for export yesterday, and the prices paid at auction were a little above the ordinary market rates.

THE LUNCHEON.

Sir Francis Suttor presided at the official luncheon. Among those present were the Governor, Sir Samuel McCaughey, Mr. Ashford (Minister for Agriculture), Mr. Trefle (Minister for Lands), Mr. Kelly (Assistant Minister for Home Affairs), the Speaker (Mr. Meagher), Colonel Wallack (State Commandant), Senator McDougall, H. M. Somer, D. Carson, L. Hordern, H. F. Marr, R. B. Wilkinson, E. S. Hall, P. Oakden, J. L. Row, Thos. Muirhead, James Kidd, and the Consuls for Norway, France, and Japan.

The toast of the Governor-General having been honoured, Sir Francis Suttor proposed "The Governor." He said that Sir Gerald Strickland had been associated with all our sports, and he was also taking an interest in the greater games by trying to develop the resources of the Commonwealth. (Applause.)

Sir Gerald Strickland, in responding, said that Sir Francis Suttor was also engaged in the greater sports. He was president of the Legislative Council, president of the Agricultural Show, and president of the Sheepbreeders' Association. "The lastnamed, I think, is the game he loves best. Sir Francis Suttor, in combining politics and the breeding of sheep is acting in accordance with the traditions of his forbears. (Applause.) He is filling those two offices, and helping in no small way to further the progress of the Commonwealth. (Applause.)

PASTORAL PRODUCTION.

Mr. Ashford, in proposing the "Sheepbreeders' Association of New South Wales," expressed the opinion that the Government exhibit was one of the features of the show. The Government was also endeavouring to deal in a satisfactory way with the blowfly pest, which had been responsible for so much damage, and accounted to a great extent for the decrease in the number of sheep. (Applause.) The Sheepbreeders' Association of New South Wales was established in 1894. In its first five years the association had a members' roll of little more than 100. The total number of members for the year 1913 was 240. During the first five years the total prize award was just over £500. Last year it was over £800. The total number of sheep in N.S.W. at the end of last year was 39,843,000, representing an increase of more than three-quarters of a million over the total for 1912. In connection with the general agrarian advance during the last seven years, it is somewhat disappointing to note that though it was well maintained in regard to sheep and wool during five out of the seven years, the 5½ million head added to the flocks during the five years disappeared during the one year 1912. This falling-off was attributed by the chief inspector of stock to heavy losses in ewes and lambs, drought in some districts, subdivision of large holdings, and to increased agriculture. During 1913 we have pulled up the best part of one million, and it was anticipated that greater attention to sheep would be given on small holdings.

THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

Sir Francis Suttor announced that the association had again elected him president. It was pleasing to know that, although the rain had affected the show attendance, it had materially benefited a great portion of the State. Referring to the entries, he said that many breeders did not show their sheep. But it was satisfactory to note that, although some of the older men could not be induced to exhibit, most of the younger men took a keen interest in the affairs of the association. "We cannot," he continued, "blame the men who are going in for these British breeds. It has been proved beyond doubt that the British breeds are the best type of sheep for particular areas. (Hear, hear.) But I think that a man who sticks to the merino will have a splendid time before him. (Applause.) The merinos are decreasing, and the British sheep increasing. In ten or fifteen years more than half the sheep of the State will be crossbreds. So long as a great demand lasts for very fine wool, we may be sure there will be no very material reduction. (Applause.) Personally, I hope it will increase in value. (Applause.) Of course, if prices go too high people who have to go in for other materials but when we realise that up to a little while ago all wool imported into America had to pay above 5d per lb duty, and that now it goes in free, there must be a great future in store for our market. (Applause.) The man on the land is one of the few people who cannot pass his imposts on. (Applause.) Whether we produce wheat or wool we have to take what we can get for it in the open market, and cannot pass it on. (Applause.) That is the difference between us and the middleman. (Applause.) I notice that Mr. Trefle intends to make people in certain areas grow wheat. If wheat is sown where wool is now grown it must be remembered that the adult person, who, over a certain period, eats 10lb of flour and 10lb of mutton, pays 1s for the wheat and 5s for the mutton. Are we going to be discouraged growing mutton at such a price? (Laughter and applause.) Would it not be preferable to encourage the mutton man to bring the price of 10lb of mutton down to what is now paid for 10lb of flour? When you see sheep running about perhaps the thought occurs, only a few people are required to look after them. The number of persons employed from the time the wool from the back of one sheep leaves Australia till it comes back again as the manufactured article is 60. When that is remembered, it will be seen what an enormous amount of labour is employed."

IRRIGATION AREAS.

EXHIBIT OF VEGETABLES.

A small but interesting collection of vegetables, grown on the Murrumbidgee Irrigation areas, is at present on view in the Tramway Department's window, Lincon's Inn-chambers, Elizabeth-street. The collection includes some fine potatoes of several varieties, also cabbages, onions, turnips, carrots, beets, green peas, rhubarb, tomatoes, vegetable marrows, pumpkins, bean and cow pea seeds, etc. The whole of the produce was grown by settlers, and despatched in ordinary manner by goods train. Some fine cobs of maize are also shown.

MARYVALE ESTATE.

Mr. Cusack, M.L.A., has received a notification from the Lands Department with reference to a letter from the secretary of the Farmers and Settlers' Association, Albury, presented by him, respecting the resumption of Maryvale Estate, Tabletop, informing him that owing to the large number of estates on authorised railways which are under consideration no action can be taken for the present in regard to the estate.

QUEENSLAND STATION.

The sale is repored by Morath Bros., Sydney, of Maranoa Downs station, situated 76 miles from St. George, Queensland, consisting of 200,000 acres of leasehold, together with 52,000 high-class sheep, 2500 cattle, and 50 horses, the buyers being Messrs. Hearn Bros., of Victoria. The purchase money is said to be in the vicinity of £90,000.

THE CHIEF CLERK OF "GREAT COBAR, LTD.," BETTER KNOWN AS THE GREAT COBAR COPPER MINE,

Writes what Clements Tonic did for him when he was run down with the great summer heat and nerve exhaustion.

"Great Cobar Mine,
"Cobar, N.S.W., 21/2/'14.

"CLEMENTS TONIC, LTD.

"Clements Tonic to me in Cobar for the past five years, during the terrible summer heat, has been a Godsend.

"At times the intense heat has been so dreadful here that, run down in health, I could scarcely follow the duties devolving upon me as clerk of the above Company.

"Clements Tonic to a material degree helped me to keep healthy, and I always found that it gave me appetite, good digestion, and sound sleep, with increased physical vigour.

"It is in my opinion an admirable medicine, and one that to Australians must be a necessary part of their existence where physical weakness and poor health are the after-effects of depressing climatic conditions.

"I am only too pleased to afford you this evidence of my personal experience, extending over many years, and my permission to use same as you desire.

"(Signed) ARTHUR JAMES."

This letter proves the undoubted powers of this medicine for restoring health after severe heat waves, long attacks of illness, typhoid fever, or for the rapid relief of insomnia, weak nerves, constipation, poor appetite, biliousness, sick headache, and debility. All Chemists and Stores sell it. Get it and keep it in the house. It is health in a new form.—Advt.

BEAUTY'S FAVOURITE.

The article which excels all others in improving the beauty of the skin is naturally and deservedly beauty's favourite. This has been the acknowledged and honoured position held by PEARS' SOAP for nearly 120 years. It won, and has maintained that position by virtue of its complete purity, and by the possession of those special emollient properties which soften, refine, and impart natural colour to the skin. No other Soap possesses these qualities in such a pre-eminent degree as LATE MR. CHAMBERLAIN.

AN IMPERIAL STATESMAN.

GREAT COLONIAL SECRETARY.

There was a business man who in the course of an ordinary business life had two great dreams. Quite late in life he found he had the power to make his dreams come true. The first dream was that the very best service to be done for those around him could be done by improving the city in which they lived. He saw how it might be done, and he made it true. The second dream was how his race could be banded together all over the world for the good of the whole and of each part of it. More, perhaps, than any other man he made that true also. He had many other dreams, and he pursued each as it arose. But it was the crude force and business capacity with which he brought those two dreams into fact which made him, though never a Prime Minister, a greater man than most Prime Ministers. That man was Joseph Chamberlain.

There had been some sturdy and rebellious Nonconformists not far back in Mr. Chamberlain's ancestry. He was a Nonconformist, too. From the time he was a very young man in business he always recognised a duty to do something to raise the standard of living or of knowledge of other Englishmen outside of his own business hours; and in Birmingham he fell naturally into a clique of great Nonconformist thinkers. He largely owed his dreams to them, and never hesitated to say he was only one of a band. It was actually said when he went to Parliament that he went as the representative of Dr. Dale, one of his Birmingham Nonconformist leaders. "Well," he retorted, "there is not a representative in the House who will have a better, wiser, or nobler constituency." It is a great mark of his life that the history of his relations with his personal friends and his family is a story of great, fast, firm friendships.

HOW CHAMBERLAIN CAME TO BIRMINGHAM.

It is often said Joseph Chamberlain climbed to the highest rung from the lowest. As a matter of fact, he did not do quite so much. Twice, by resigning, he voluntarily gave up the two only chances that lay ahead of him of being Prime Minister. And though he went through his father's workshop, he did not start as a working man. Though his direct ancestry can only be traced back to his great-great-grandfather, a maltster in Wiltshire, this maltster's son, Chamberlain's great-grandfather, moved up to London, and started business as wholesale boot and shoe merchant, and great-grandfather, grandfather, and father, who each carried that business on, each rose to be master of the Cordwainers' Company. Joseph Chamberlain himself, at 16, entered the same London warehouse and counting house. But two years later a brother-in-law of his father, named Nettlefold, who had a factory of wooden screws, bought up an important American invention—a certain wonderful automatic machine—and as he wanted more capital for it he took his London brother-in-law into partnership. Joseph Chamberlain, senior, of London, boot and leather merchant, could not see to the new business himself, so he sent his son to represent him. And that is how Joseph Chamberlain, jun., came to Birmingham.

ONE BUSINESS FOR TWO CENTURIES.

Therefore Joseph Chamberlain started from an ordinary business stock, which had won itself an honourable reputation. "My family," he once said in the House of Commons, "can boast nothing of distinguished birth, and they have not inherited wealth. But we have a record—an unbroken record of nearly two centuries—of unstained commercial integrity and honour." Long after, when Chamberlain had come to be the best hated man in politics, his political opponents said—it was always his political opponents that rose in righteous wrath against his commercial dealings—that he had secured a monopoly of the screw trade by the merciless crushing out of smaller manufacturers. And, indeed, when, as a boy of 18, he went to Birmingham, he did find his father's new business in a bad way through over-competition, and did buy out competitors, or amalgamated with them, with such spirit that he was able to shake off business altogether in 20 years, and to retire with his two brothers, in 1874, at the age of only 38, on a moderate fortune. But, in spite of all his political opponents said, there was never the least suspicion of anything but the most scrupulous honesty brought to light. What one of his commercial opponents said was: "We unhesitatingly affirm that Mr. Chamberlain's actions were highly beneficial to those connected with the trade, and beneficial to those whose businesses were purchased on such liberal terms. Also to those who, like ourselves, remained in the trade."

A SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER.

In the early years of his business, when Joseph Chamberlain could not help those around him in any larger way, he worked in London and in Birmingham as Sunday-school teacher both in the Unitarian meeting house and in church. He taught history in a night school, and lectured his pupils on botany and geography and the instincts of animals and birds. From his schooldays to the end of his time he never cared in the slightest for athletics. But he was at one time passionately fond of dancing. He once said he would have sacrificed the finest political speech he ever delivered to escape to a dance. Not many people know that he once wrote a one-act play, "Who's Who?" and took the part of the Frenchman in it himself.

Mr. Chamberlain began his public life in a Birmingham debating society. He thought when he entered it that he would never open his mouth. He found instead he could not keep quiet. The very first night Oliver Cromwell was attacked, and he could not help defending him.

MAKING DREAMS COME TRUE.

It was not till fourteen years after he had come to Birmingham that he began to be prominent as a reformer in the city. In the Unitarian Church he worked in was a Mr. Crosskey, who, with several other ministers, had been struck with the idea that Christianity ought to be put into practice by a new municipal policy, and that the Town Council could do as much for the life of Birmingham people as Parliament. Mr. Chamberlain himself said he was only one of that band. But he was the man that actually got things done. He saw visions of what Birmingham might become. He got himself elected to the council. Within four years he was Mayor and chairman of the school board. He never worked so hard in all his life. In private and public he argued, begged, urged, drove. The council became filled with the best men in the city. They acquired, under a brilliant scheme, the gas and water supply, developed a health department, and by a magnificent business stroke, not only cut one of the finest streets in Europe out of an old slum area, but actually made the work pay its own way handsomely.

Naturally the great line he struck out crossed the paths of many other persons most inconveniently. "Chamberlain is not only Mayor but Town Council, too," grumbled one opponent. Indeed, he never belittled his own position, and his critics often sneered at his use of the word "I." But then he accomplished great things, and he leaves great monuments, which is more profitable work than criticism.

INTO WIDER POLITICS.

Even in 1896, when he was a Secretary of State, Mr. Chamberlain said that it was the municipal institutions that were most powerful to add to the welfare of the community. But, on the question of education only Parliament could carry out big reforms. The Nonconformists of Birmingham, when the Education Act of 1870 was before the country, formed a league, and struck out a bold policy of their own—free, compulsory, unsectarian, rate-aided education. Mr. Chamberlain was one of those who led the rebellion against Mr. Gladstone over the Education Bill. He was always striking out a programme of his own. He was never a complacent, contented Liberal or Conservative. Mr. John Morley, then editor of the "Fortnightly," found it worth while to visit him, and Mr. Chamberlain wrote an article for the "Fortnightly" advocating a programme of "Free Church, Free Land, Free Schools, and Free Labour." He wanted to force the hands of the Liberal leaders—he openly said so—"to force our leaders to raise a standard which we may gladly follow, or to make way for bolder or more active men." He never altered in that itching for vigorous action. Thirty-two years later, in pressing a forward policy on the opposite party, he said: "No army was ever led successfully to battle on the principle that the lamest man should govern the march of the army."

In 1876 Birmingham elected him unopposed. "Joseph," said the Birmingham working man who seconded the nomination, "Joseph, thou hast been faithful over the things in our borough; we will make thee a ruler of the nation." The Tory press sneered at "Our Joseph." It was a term of endearment in Birmingham.

Most of the members had never seen Chamberlain, but his name was known through England as that of a very advanced, rather wild, and somewhat republican demagogue. Just before he went to Westminster he made one of his strongest speeches, accusing the Conservative Government of deliberate dishonesty, and brought the whole press, friends and enemies, about his ears. There was a breathless interest when he first walked into the House. The old Tories evidently expected a sort of anarchist in cloth cap, without a tie. Instead there walked in "a smartly-dressed, elegant man with youthful-looking face, and slim figure. . . . A cynic hastily likened him to a ladies' doctor." His first speeches were delivered in such a calm, clear, subdued, moderate manner that a rigid old Tory, Sir Walter Barttelot, who could hardly believe his ears, jumped up at the close of it, and congratulated him heartily and generously on his "convincing calmness."

"THE ONLY JINGO" WITH GLADSTONE.

The career of Joseph Chamberlain from that time out is too well known and, most of it too recent in people's memory to need relation. Mr. Gladstone in 1880 made him President of the Board of Trade. He had been against the annexation of the Transvaal in 1877, and he spoke in favour of giving the Boers back their country after Majuba Hill. But when the question of Egypt came up in 1882 Mr. Bright described him as "the only Jingo in the Cabinet." Mr. Chamberlain had his way. Troops were sent to restore order in Egypt, and John Bright resigned.

THE CRUX OF A CAREER.

Mr. Chamberlain, before he took a post in the Ministry, definitely told Mr. Gladstone that he was doubtful whether he could agree with Mr. Gladstone's intention with regard to Home Rule. He himself advocated a modified form of Home Rule—rather an extended local government. He was assured that he would have "unlimited liberty of judgment and rejection" on any scheme that might be proposed. On those conditions Mr. Chamberlain accepted—not the First Lordship of the Admiralty (at £5000 a year) which was offered him, but the Local Government Board (with £2000).

Mr. Gladstone did not take Mr. Chamberlain into his confidence as to his bill. He mentioned it first in the Cabinet when it was complete. It turned out to be entire separation of the Irish and British Parliaments. Mr. Chamberlain at once resigned. On the night of the fatal division he, with 92 Liberals, voted against the bill amidst cries of "Judas," "Traitor."

Mr. Chamberlain never admitted that he had changed his opinions on this occasion. He had been consistent all through, he said. It was the Gladstonians that had changed. "Since I have been in public affairs," he said, "I have called myself, I think not altogether without reason, a Radical. But that title has never prevented me from giving great consideration to Imperial interests. . . . And it is because I believe these things are now in danger that I have felt myself called upon to make the greatest sacrifice that any public man can make."

And it is true that when Mr. Chamberlain resigned office he, at the same time, gave up the almost certain succession to the leadership of the Liberal party. It was many years before he took office on the other side of the House. And when he did there was another man ahead of him whom he never passed, and, it is almost certain, never wished to pass. That man was his loyal colleague and friend in most of the great work of his later life—Arthur James Balfour.

Mr. Chamberlain was twice married in his younger days, and twice left a widower. In the interval that followed his resignation in the great crisis of his life he went to America as Fishery Commissioner. And there he met the lady whose companionship has been such a very happy chapter in his life—the daughter of the Secretary of State for War.

THE LIBERAL UNIONISTS.

For six years the Liberal Unionists under Mr. Chamberlain and Lord Hartington (the Duke of Devonshire) remained on the opposite benches with the Liberals. The two leaders sat on the front bench with Mr. Gladstone and the Liberal leaders, although a great gulf divided them. By 1891 Mr. Chamberlain was definitely against the measure of Home Rule he had been prepared to accept in 1886. "All that has happened since 1885 has shaken my confidence in the particular solution of the Irish question which I was then prepared to heartily support." He was always irritated by the theorising ineffective attitude of the English Liberals—he was for strong drastic action—and the English Conservatives were invariably the readier to act. At the same time some of his opinions were undoubtedly changing.

THE LAST HOME RULE BILL.

In 1892 Mr. Gladstone came back to office, with Mr. Chamberlain nominally behind him. But the issue had again been Home Rule, and the crash came with the Home Rule Bill of 1893. Mr. Chamberlain was a great fighter. And his chief speech on the bill so raised the House that it was finished amidst shouts of "Judas!" and one of the few free fights ever seen in the British Parliament. The bill was just passed by the Commons, and rejected by the Lords.

AN "UNIMPORTANT POSITION."

When Mr. Chamberlain became Colonial Secretary in Lord Salisbury's new Government of 1895, people thought it was because he wanted an unimportant position, so that his time might be free for more important reforms in England. Long before he left it, even one of his opponents admits, "he made the Colonial Secretaryship the greatest post in the Administration. He was full of big ideas. "Let the Little Englanders say what they like" he once said, "we are a great governing race, predestined by our defects as well as by our virtues to spread over the habitable globe. . . . We cannot occupy an insular position." He dreamed of Imperial Federation, of an Anglo-Saxon alliance. And to those of the British Empire who lived out of Britain he was incomparably the most sympathetic Colonial Minister that ever took office.

THE RAID.

On December 30, 1895, a telegram reached Mr. Chamberlain at Birmingham that Dr. Jameson, a high agent of the Chartered South Africa Company, had, with 500 or 600 armed men, entered the Transvaal on his insensate raid. Mr. Chamberlain came at once by the midnight train to London. From 10 o'clock next morning to 7.30 at night he was in the Colonial Office. He telegraphed a peremptory order to the High Commissioner at the Cape to stop Dr. Jameson and turn him back. Dr. Jameson disregarded the order, was surrounded at Krugersdorp, and surrendered.

The bitterest controversy of all Mr. Chamberlain's life raged around the imputation, made by his opponents, that he knew of the Raid before it occurred. Cecil Rhodes knew of and authorised the Raid. And it was asserted that either from him or from some other source Mr. Chamberlain must have known of it. Of all Mr. Chamberlain's accusers in Parliament Sir W. Harcourt was hitting at him the hardest. At last a committee of inquiry was constituted, of which Sir W. Harcourt, Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman, and some of Mr. Chamberlain's bitterest political opponents were members. Twice during the inquiry the evidence seemed to be approaching the critical disclosure. Dr. Rutherford Harris, formerly secretary of the South Africa Company, said that in an interview with Mr. Chamberlain and the Under-Secretary (Lord Selbourne) five months before the Raid he had referred to the unrest at Johannesburg, and added a guarded allusion to the desirability of their being a police force near the border. Everyone in the room waited breathlessly for what was to follow. "Mr. Chamberlain," continued Dr. Harris, "at once demurred to the turn the conversation had taken, and I never referred to the subject again." There were also some curious cablegrams between Mr. Rhodes and a lady journalist in London, who professed to know, through her interviews with another official, what Mr. Chamberlain thought. Mr. Chamberlain, in the witness-box, said explicitly that never until the day before the Raid took place had he the slightest suspicion of anything in the nature of it. Lord Selbourne supported him. And Mr. Chamberlain's opponents on the committee reported that neither the Colonial Office nor the Secretary of State were in any way privy to or implicated in the Raid. Subsequently in Parliament, when the matter was dragged up again, the man who defended Mr. Chamberlain against imputations from the Liberal side was Sir William Harcourt himself.

THE LAST YEARS.

The Boer War and Mr. Chamberlain's subsequent visit to South Africa are too recent for relation here. The journey about the veldt was a very wearying one, and for the first time Mr. Chamberlain showed some signs of approaching age. To a deputation there he said: "I have come to South Africa at some inconvenience to myself . . . I am older than most of those present, and my time of active service is necessarily coming to a close. . . . I ask you to give up all kinds of animosity which can prevent co-operation for the common good, and also for the dominion which is yours, as well as ours."

On his first political visit to Birmingham after his return from South Africa, Mr. Chamberlain made the sensation of his life.

"You are excited at home about the Education Bill, about temperance reform, about local finance. But these things matter no more to South Africa, to Canada, to Australia, than their local affairs matter to you." The colonies were trying to promote Imperial union by offering Britain preference for her goods. It was contrary to the established fiscal policy, but he doubted whether the interpretation of free trade which is current among a certain limited section is their true interpretation.'

On September 9, 1903—as an ultimate consequence of that speech—for the second and last time Mr. Chamberlain resigned office.

The purposeless controversy as to whether he might or might not have been Prime Minister will probably for some years survive him. Sir Henry Lucy has written that he knows from Mr. Chamberlain himself that he had determined not to seek the Premiership. It was a life of strong antagonisms, strong fights, and strong friendships. But when the dust and noise and turmoil of those struggles are long past and lost in the distance, there will stand two great silent monuments of a great man dead—the dreams that he made come true.

REAL ESTATE.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

Despite the wet week, the real estate market showed signs of much activity. The chief item in the list of sales was the disposal of the very fine block at the corner of Martin-place and Pitt-street, known as the Mutual Life-chambers, which was sold to the Mercantile Mutual Insurance Company for £122,000. This makes one of three leading city corners all opposite each other, and the whole of which have been sold within the last 12 months. There was first of all the block at the corner of Pitt and Moore streets, opposite the Post Office, which belonged to the Perkins family, but which was resumed by the Federal Government, in order to erect the Commonwealth Bank. The question of price has yet to be settled, but it is estimated by some people that the price that will be paid will be about £1300 per foot on the Pitt-street frontage. A few weeks ago the opposite corner belonging to Mr. Henry Bull was disposed of by Messrs. Hardie and Gorman for £75,000. In this block there is 75 feet frontage to Pitt-street, which works out at a little over £1200 per foot, and now we have the corner immediately opposite this one sold this week for £122,000, which, on the Pitt-street frontage of 75 feet, works out at £1626 per foot. But on the Mutual Life corner there is a valuable block of buildings on the site; buildings which would cost anything between £80,000 and £90,000. They are as good now as the day they were built, and this would account for the difference in the price per foot for each corner, but it brings the average present day price for these corners at about £1200 per foot on the Pitt-street frontage. They are to-day three of the most valuable sites in Sydney, and setting the value of the Commonwealth corner at £90,000, and the other two at the prices obtained, viz., £122,000 for the Mutual Life corner, and £75,000 for Henry Bull's corner, it provides a total of £287,000 for two roods eight perches, or a little over half an acre of the best land which Sydney can produce at the present time. It means this, that in a little over 100 years, land which Captain Phillip and his party turned down as useless, a barren waste, has reached in value over £500,000 an acre. While the land near Parramatta, which was regarded by the great coloniser as precious, and worthy of settlement, is still worth only a few pounds an acre.

But the sale of the Mutual Life Buildings this week brings to mind the fact that this site and its noble pile of buildings is not as valuable to-day as it was 22 years ago. For, according to the files of the "Herald" on Monday, February 15, 1892, over 400 people crowded themselves into the spacious salerooms of Messrs. Richardson and Wrench. It was the first sale held of the Government land fronting Martin-place. The audience at the sale included members of both houses of Parliament and leading citizens. Mr. Wrench occupied the rostrum, and announced that he hadn't any knowledge of what the Government reserves were. All he had to do was to get as many bids as possible, and when the bidding stopped, Sir William Lyne, then Minister for Works, who represented the Government at the sale would say whether the reserve had been reached or not. The first corner submitted was where the Bank of Australasia stands, at the corner of George-street and Martin-place. There was spirited bidding for this lot, which was considered to be the best position in Sydney. The bidding started at £1100 per foot, and it ran up to £1700 per foot.

Mr. Wrench tried to induce Sir William Lyne to sell at that figure, which represented £68,000 for the allotment, but Sir William announced that the Government reserve was £1749 per foot, or a total of £69,960 for the allotment. Some one in the crowd shouted, "Wait till July," and Sir William replied, "I will get £2000 per foot on the Martin-street frontage for this land." And he did, for some time afterwards the Bank of Australasia purchased the corner for £1000 per foot on the George-street frontage of 75 feet, or a total of £75,000 for the allotment. The bank also purchased 25 feet more than the corner, on the Martin-street frontage, at £500 foot, making a total of £87,500 for the entire block, on which the bank now stands.

But to return to the notable sale. As soon as the George-street corner was passed in at £1700 per foot, Mr. Wrench submitted the Pitt-street corner, which, after spirited bidding, was knocked down to a Mr. F. T. Humphrey at £1500 per foot. The adjoining lot in Martin-place was sold to Mr. John Gilchrist, at £1200 per foot, and the next lot to Mr. James Brown, at £1000 per foot. It then transpired that the three buyers, Humphrey, Gilchrist, and Brown, were simply agents for the Mutual Life Association of New York, and that this company was the purchaser of the three blocks; the sale money came to 40 feet at £1500, £60,000; 30 feet at £1200, £36,000; and 30 feet at £1000, £30,000—a total of 100 feet along Martin-place and 75 feet along Pitt-street, for the sum of £126,000. The company immediately erected a very fine building, which it is estimated cost about £80,000. Land and buildings thus ran into something over £200,000. After holding possession for 20 years the company has disposed of the block, and its fine building, for £4000 less than the land alone cost them. Surely the purchasers have secured a bargain. At the notable sale already mentioned, these three blocks on the Pitt-street corner were the only ones disposed of.

There is, however, another interesting point about this Government subdivision. The Equitable, which is another American assurance company, purchased the two allotments upon which the Equitable building now stands at £1300 per foot for one allotment, and £1200 per foot for the other lot. At the time of this sale the purchasers believed they were buying the corner of George-street and Martin-place, and verily they believed they had erected their very fine building upon the corner, but subsequently when the plans came out for the Government sale of the Martin-place frontages, it was found that the Equitable was not on the corner. There was much ado about the matter, and the company even went so far as to bring out experts from America to decide whether the building could be removed bodily on to the corner. Such removals had often taken place in America, but it could, for some reason or another, not be done in Sydney, and so the corner was allowed to pass into other people's hands.

It will thus be seen that the sale of the Government land in Martin-place has been productive of much interest. Although the intervening blocks between the corners were not disposed of at the first sale owing to their very narrow depths, they afterwards found purchasers. The University of Sydney was one the subsequent purchasers, and upon its choice, Challis House was built by the Senate of the University, by whom it is owned.

Apart from the sale of the big city property, the market, despite the unpleasant weather, has been fairly active this week. Messrs. Raine and Horne had a very large attendance at their weekly indoor sale on Thursday. An interesting list of properties were submitted, and quite half a dozen of these found new owners. A block at the corner of William and Palmer streets, Woolloomooloo, on which is erected an old stone building, which at one time was a leading hotel, was sold for £3550. This works out at £175 per foot for the corner. For the next lot submitted, viz., a residence at Darling Point, known as Orme, with about ½ acre of land, there was keen competition, and at £6750 the property was passed in, the bid being a little below the reserve. Two pairs of brick cottages in Searle-street, Petersham were sold for £1800; a cottage at Kogarah was disposed of for £320; and a cottage at Campsie found a buyer at £131; a very nice cottage in the progressive suburb of Epping was disposed of for £1050; and 10s a foot was paid for land at Sutherland. There was bidding for most of the other properties submitted, but as the reserves were not reached no sales were effected. It was evidence, however, that the people are looking for good suburban properties.

Messrs. Richardson and Wrench this week not only sold the block at the corner of Pitt-street and Martin-place for £122,000, but the firm also disposed of a terrace of 11 houses in Bourke-street, Surry Hills, for £9000. The same firm also sold further lots at Bankstown at from 15s to 20s per foot; at the Highview Estate brought 20s, and the Highlands Estate from 12s to 15s per foot. Land was also sold at Thornleigh Estate, Concord, for £2 12s 6d per foot, at Gladesville at 9s per foot, and at Livingstone-road at £3 10s per foot.

Messrs. Stanton and Son had a busy week. There was a good demand for blocks in the Rosebery model and industrial suburb. Vacant land brought £4 10s per foot, and cottages were sold at £800 each. Three vacant allotments were sold, and 10 cottages at £800 each were also disposed of. At Haberfield the firm sold a cottage for £1300, a pair of cottages for £1230. At Neutral Bay a cottage realised £950, and at Drummoyne a cottage on Lyons-road changed hands at £750.

Messrs. Slade and Brown include in their sales three shops at Chatswood for £1300; several cottages in the same suburb from £420 to £925 each, two cottages at Willoughby for £1225, a cottage in Bancroft-avenue, Roseville, for £1125, another for £925, and also several blocks of vacant land.

Messrs. B. B. Tuohy and Co. this week disposed of two cottages at Neutral Bay for £1365, and two other cottages in the same suburb for £700 and £800 each. A country home and farm, known as Oakleigh, at Minto, was sold for £1000. Another farm in the same district brought £700, and a farmlet at Sutherland realised £200.

There will be an attractive sale this afternoon at Strathfield, in the Toohey's Estate.

The trustees have instructed Hardie and Gorman to dispose of Torrington, a very fine residence, and the grounds surrounding it. The whole property has been subdivided. The house and a large area of land will be sold as one lot, and the remainder of the estate will be offered in allotments. This splendid property fronts the Boulevard, which is 100 feet wide. It also has frontages to other main roads leading from the Boulevard. The house is two stories high, and it is a good opportunity for gentlemen requiring a family residence to secure one.

On Monday, July 20, there is to be a special auction in the rooms of Richardson and Wrench of freeholds belonging to the City Council. The catalogue will include 20 large blocks at Chippendale. At Surry Hills there are eight lots in Bourke-street, eight in Dowling-street, and four factory sites in Cleveland-street; also a number of allotments in Nickson-street. At Camperdown there are over 20 good building sites to be submitted. The whole of the above are freeholds, but at the same sale leaseholds having 50 years to run, and situated in Liverpool-street, Wentworth-avenue, and Commonwealth-street, will also be submitted. These blocks are in a progressive portion of the city.

Some valuable city and suburban properties will be offered at auction in the wool saleroom at the Royal Exchange on Tuesday, July 21, by Batt, Rodd, and Purves, Ltd. These properties, which include shops and chambers near the General Post Office, also properties at Newtown, Hunter's Hill, and Waverley, are being submitted on account of the owner leaving for an extended European tour.

Hugh Duff and Co. will, on Saturday, July 18, submit Wells Estate, at Burwood. The subdivision is only five minutes from the local railway station. It comprises 32 splendid building sites, which ought to command a ready sale.

Warrinilla, a first-class wool-growing property, situated about 35 miles from Murrurundi and 50 miles from Scone, is in the market, and will be submitted at auction by Messrs. Edward Higgins, Parkinson, and Co., in conjunction with Badgery Bros., at Scone, on July 15. There is a total area of 4750 acres. It is a property that is watered permanently in all seasons by running water flowing throughout the land. A number of improvements have been made, including the building of three cottages. It is a high and safe country, with drought unknown. It is free from grass seed, and is admirably suited for growing fine merino wool.

Mr. H. Pritchard is holding an auction sale of the Riversmead Estate, Riverstone, on Saturday, July 25. This property adjoins the Riverstone Meatworks, which are being rapidly extended. The land, however, is sufficiently removed from the works to make pleasant homes for the workers. The estate is especially adapted for poultry raising, and is but 10 minutes from the river, store, station, and township.

QUEENSLAND STATION SALE.

Messrs. McPhie and Co., of Toowoomba, report having completed the sale on account of Messrs. Bishop and Tyrrell, of Beechal Station, Warrego district, 795 square miles leasehold, 36,000 mixed sheep, 2200 mixed cattle, and 170 horses, at a satisfactory cash figure.

LATE MRS. M. A. BLACKMORE.

Mrs. Mary Ann Blackmore, widow of Mr. Samuel Fry Blackmore, solicitor, died at her residence, Fernhill, Norton-street, Leichhardt, on the 2nd inst. at the age of 82 years. Deceased, who was a native of Weldon, Northamptonshire, England, came to Australia in 1853, and 12 months later married Mr. Blackmore, who at the time of his death, two years ago, was the oldest practising solicitor in the State. Mrs. Blackmore and her husband were pioneers of the Albury district, where they resided for many years. Subsequently they came to Sydney, and went to live at Leichhardt, of which Mrs. Blackmore was one of the oldest residents, having lived there for over 50 years. She left a family of eight children, viz., Mr. W. P. Blackmore, of Messrs. Gordon, Garling, and Blackmore, solicitors, of Young; Mr. Hugh Blackmore, C.P.S. at Wellington; Mr. Alfred Blackmore, solicitor, of Sydney; Mrs. Stephen, wife of the Rev. P. J. Stephen, of the Central Methodist Mission; Mrs. Harold Wragge, of Beecroft; and the Misses Frances and Adelaide Blackmore, of Leichhardt, and Miss Sophia Blackmore, missionary at Singapore. The deceased lady was a life member of the Albury Hospital and the Leichhardt Benevolent Association, of which latter she was one of the founders.

The funeral took place yesterday afternoon, the remains being interred in the Methodist section of the Necropolis. A special service, at which every member of the family was present, was conducted by the Rev. A. Stephen before the funeral started, and the Revs. A. Stephen, J. H. Lewin, and R. J. Williams officiated at the grave.

RANDWICK ORPHANAGE.

The asylum for destitute children at Randwick has been gay with festivities this week in celebration of the 43rd anniversary of the superintendence of Mr. Joseph Coulter. The festivities began on Wednesday, and concluded last night, when the children were entertained at a cinematograph and musical entertainment, subsequent to a special tea provided by Mr. Anthony Hordern.

SMALL ERUPTIONS ON FACE AND NECK.
90 Park-street, South Melbourne (Vic.).—"My face and neck began to have a blotchy look, and about two days after small eruptions began to form about my neck. A little time after my face was affected in the same way, accompanied by terrible itching. I was kept awake at night with the irritation, and for days I could not wear a collar. After trying about half a dozen other ointments and medicines, which did not do me the slightest good, I was advised to give Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Soap a trial. I decided to try it, and after the first treatment with the Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Soap I felt relieved, and in two weeks all traces of the eruptions were gone, and ever since having used the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment I have never been troubled with the complaint." (Signed), W. Laidlaw, July, 1912.

SECRETARY:

REGISTERED OFFICE:

C. J. TURNER and SONS CO-OPERATION, LIMITED, is being formed for the purpose of acquiring as a going concern, and continuing the business successfully carried on for the last 16 years by Mr. Charles James Turner, and subsequently by C. J. Turner and Sons, and to extend the business on terms which will allow the numerous supporters of the business of C. J. Turner and Sons an opportunity of acquiring an interest in the operations of the new concern on a co-operative basis.

It will be seen that the Vendors receive no cash for the purchase of the business.

The success of co-operative selling institutions, especially in the case of producers who occupy small areas of land, has been amply demonstrated in all parts of the world, and may now be regarded as almost a necessity.

From the auditor's certificate appended it will be seen that the average turnover of C. J. Turner and Sons for the past three years is just under £30,000 per annum, and arrangements have been made to retain the services of Mr. C. J. Turner, the founder of the business, as Managing Director, at a nominal salary of £200 per annum for the first twelve months after the formation of the Company. At the expiration of this term the Company is free to make whatever arrangements it sees fit with reference to the management and control of the Company.

With further and larger capital and the experience of sixteen years in this line of business, it is reasonable to expect that the business will materially increase.

The Vendors undertake not to dispose of any of the ordinary shares to be allotted to them until the expiration of twelve months from the registration of the Company.

The only agreements affecting the Company are:—Sale and Purchase Agreement, dated the 24th day of June, 1914, made between C. J. Turner and Sons and A. G. de L. Arnold as Trustee on behalf of the Company. 2. Agreement, dated 24th day of June, 1914, between Charles James Turner and A. G. de L. Arnold as Trustee, whereby Charles James Turner agrees to act as Managing Director of the Company for a period of 12 months after its registration at a salary of £200 per annum. These agreements and a draft of the Memorandum and Articles of Association of the Company may be seen at the office of the Solicitor to the Company.

The Provisional Directors will proceed to registration and allotment when 1000 shares have been applied for. No person will be allowed to take up or hold more than fifty or less than five cumulative preference shares.

Application for shares should be made on the prescribed form, accompanied by the amount of application moneys. Should no allotment be made, or should the allotment be made of a less number of shares than the number applied for, application moneys will be credited to shareholders towards payment of allotment moneys or returned to applicants, as the case may require.

THE ISSUE.

It is one of the features which distinguish Federal from State elections that Federal candidates are able to define the issues more or less strictly, and to dismiss wholly irrelevant matters from the consideration of their constituents. Efforts are always made to detach a section of the electors from their true allegiance on the ground that a particular candidate, though he belongs to their party, is not in sympathy with some opinion of theirs which, whether or no it be connected with politics, is not one of the main issues of the election. Such attempts are naturally more plausible when the victim is a candidate for the Senate than when he is fighting for a seat in the House of Representatives. It is easy to suggest that an elector may do his duty by voting for five out of six, or two out of three, and then satisfy his caprice by giving a vote to the other side. But this ingenious device can hardly survive such a thorough exposition of the differences between the parties as will be given during the ensuing two months. No one who believes that the Liberal party should govern the country can vote for a man who helped to carry on, or was in sympathy with, an orgy of obstruction and disorder during the last session. To vote for a Labour senator is to undo, or to help to undo, all the benefit of votes given for Liberal candidates. The electors on September 5 will have before them the history of the two parties during the last Parliament, their conduct at the time of dissolution, and the policies expounded on behalf of each of them in official speeches. With these data the electors will have the only facts which should influence the decision of a patriotic citizen. It will be impossible on any ground worthy of respect to compromise between the two claims. Among the declared adherents of either party there must be differences of opinion which neither argument nor experience can shake. But even they will agree that it is in the best interests of the country to obtain decisive majorities in both Houses.

Mr. Cook, although he has yet to make his policy speech, has by his speeches at Tamworth, Cootamundra, and Maryborough given the electors a clear idea of the measures which he will bring before the next Parliament. Mr. Fisher will deliver his first important public address at Bundaberg on Monday night. His supporters, however, have already indicated the main counts in his indictment of the Government. They have no doubt gone further than an ex-Prime Minister would go in their denunciations of the action of the Governor-General in granting a dissolution. Mr. Fisher will hardly forget that in any self-governing country the King's representative invariably acts on the advice of his Ministers. Nor will Mr. Fisher suggest that it was possible to carry on the business of the country in the temper and under the conditions which prevailed during the last Parliament. His chief lieutenant, however, has already suggested a doctrine, at variance with all constitutional theory, by which the Senate should have equal authority with the House which votes money and makes or unmakes Ministers, and he himself will propound a scheme by which both Houses will be placed on a lower level than the small oligarchies which control the Labour policy. The initiative and the referendum have no doubt worked satisfactorily under the conditions prevailing in Switzerland. Every elector will realise how the initiative would affect politics and the quality of Parliamentary work under the conditions which have arisen in Australia. It will not be through any such proposals as these, nor by any justification of the conduct of the Opposition during the last Parliament, that Mr. Fisher will be returned to office. The conclusion that Parliamentary government is at an end because his followers have shown no sense of responsibility is based on the fallacy that from a single failure it is possible to deduce the quality of between four and five millions of people. Nor will Mr. Fisher succeed through a belated offer of a high tariff. Some of his followers in Victoria have already withdrawn their objection to increased duties unless accompanied by the so-called new protection. But the effect of this sacrifice of the working man may best be judged by the appearance of Mr. Pratten as a candidate for the Senate, and of the president of the Victorian Chamber of Manufacturers as president of a Liberal league. The value of Mr. Fisher's promises must be judged in this as in other cases in the light of the decisions of the Labour Conference, which declined to put "effective" protection in its fighting platform.

The value of the undertaking of the Liberal leaders is proved by the use made by them of the Interstate Commission Act passed by a Labour Government. They have appointed as Commissioners three men of exceptional experience and of unquestionable impartiality to investigate the effect of the existing tariff, and have promised to legislate in accordance with the first recommendation put into their hands. Their methods of dealing with the tariff are typical of the contrast in method between the two parties. Mr. Cook at Maryborough mentioned the bill for the establishment of an agricultural bureau as one of the bills which the obstruction of the Senate made it impossible to carry into law. Their want of forethought in arranging for the building of warships in Australia is another instance of the recklessness of the Labour party in proceeding with work involving a vast expenditure without due preparation. The estimate of the cost of the Western Australia railway, and the plans for the development of the Northern Territory without any adequate system of land tenure or any trained staff, are further instances which illustrate the same attitude of mind. It cannot be said that the Labour party, though it may waste money, gets more work done than the Liberals. The report of the manager of the Fitzroy Dock shows that under its system nothing could be done. Mr. Agar Wynne's experience in the Post Office has led him to the same conclusion. So do the latest reports from the Northern Territory and from the Immigration Offices. The Liberal party, on the other hand, has a record of achievement on which, even if it had been given a fair chance by its opponents, it could have appealed to the electors with some confidence. The new plan of shipbuilding, the settlement of interstate disputes regarding the Murray waters, and the improvement of the Post Office are matters of the first importance and of lasting benefit to the Commonwealth. Of more importance and of greater benefit is the infusion of a new spirit into the Commonwealth services, a spirit based on the conviction that the only consideration for a Minister is the worth of an officer and his ability to do the work of the country carefully and efficiently.

THE SPELL OF SCIENCE.

A collection of curious depressions, 254 of them, has existed from beyond the memory of man on the borders of Norfolk and Suffolk in England. The country people, who passed them daily, called them Grimes' Graves. Probably they told their sons how forgotten warriors had been buried there in the days of the Danes. It was not till a little over forty years ago that someone, who knew more of the old days than the country people did, obtained leave to dig down into one of these pits and discover what was the actual secret of it. As they dug it became clear that somebody—somebody in the long past—had been there before them. The pit was an ancient shaft dug out and afterwards filled in. It descended through the chalk past a layer of flint into more chalk until it reached a second layer of flint 35 feet down. There the ancient shaft ended. But from the bottom branched out galleries, running just along the top of that flint layer. Other depressions in the surface above turned out to be similar shafts, and often the galleries of one would communicate with those of another. In the rubbish which was taken out of them were found numbers of deers' horns—with all the branches pared off except one short pick-like branch at the extremity. Those were the picks with which these workings were excavated. For those ancient shafts and galleries dated from long before the Danes. The moderns who dug them out anew were penetrating a secret earlier than the Iron Age or the Bronze Age. They were opening up one of the original fore-runners of all the mines of the world—a mine sunk by the men of the stone age in order to obtain the flint which was the first raw material of their primitive manufacture. The mine dated from a time when the stone men were clearly becoming particular as to the sort of flints they used. At 20 feet it passed through a layer of coarse flint such as is used locally for building houses, known as "wall-stone." They had left that flint unworked. The lower layer of flint was of the fine-grained sort, once used for gun-flints. Indeed, the same layer is actually worked for gunflints at this day at a point about a mile away. It was along this layer that the stone-men, with their deer-horn picks, drove their galleries. They were good enough picks, but, of course, very soft, and numbers of them were thrown away in the workings. At last in one passage the modern investigators came to a point where the roof had fallen in. The ancient workmen must have left it safely at nightfall to climb up to their wurleys on the heath above, where the deer's haunch was already cooking on the camp fire; the fall of earth had happened, luckily, in the night, and when they went down in the morning they found the gallery blocked with debris, and decided it was not worth while clearing it. So they took up the work elsewhere. But the modern investigators went on. They dug through the debris—possibly not without a wicked hope of finding some remains of the stonemen themselves, and at last broke through the fallen chalk. Before them lay the end of the gallery—the "face" of this primitive mine. There were three half-finished recesses from which the flint was in process of being hollowed out. Lying before two of the recesses, exactly as they had been left when the stone-age miner and his mate picked up their bearskin coats and turned homewards to whatever was the stone-age equivalent of a pipe, were the two deer-horn picks with which they had been working. The chalk dust of the last half-hour's labour still coated them. And clearly visible on the dusty handle of one of the picks was the print of the workman's hand.

It is no wonder that a man can give his life to a science of which this sort of thing is the subject matter. But it has a special interest for Australians. The flint weapons which archaeologists dig from the Thames flats or the silt of the Somme Valley can be found in many a western paddock in New South Wales to-day. They lie there around the old camps of the blacks—exactly as the stone men left them around their camp fires, to be found 8000 years later in the silt of ages around Lake Geneva, or in caves that still hold the bones of the woolly-haired rhinoceros or the European lion. In Western Australia there are still stone-men who are manufacturing spear heads as perfectly shaped as any that can be seen under the glass of the National Museum in Copenhagen. There is no mining needed to procure the raw material in Australia in these days. The Australian stoneman finds his gun-flint lying ready for him on the surface of the earth around every surveyor's camp or at every boundary gate. He is making exquisite spear-heads out of sauce bottles; out of the dead marines that sometimes punctuate the "bullocky's" track; even out of insulators kindly provided by the Government on its telegraph poles. In these rapidly-moving times we can scarcely imagine an age in which customs lived without change for two or three thousand years. But the Australian blacks are in that age—not merely similar to the stone age, but actually part of the stone age. And perhaps that makes it natural that one of the most distinguished anthropologists from among the many great scientists who are shortly to meet in Australia is an Australian himself, a native of New South Wales, and a graduate of Sydney University. Professor Grafton Elliot Smith, the son of a school-master in this State, educated at the Sydney High School, one of a family which is doing splendid work in New South Wales, was trained as a doctor at Sydney University. It was as an anatomist that he afterwards went to Cambridge, and to the school of medicine, Cairo, and to the University of Manchester, to which he at present belongs. But early in his career the fascination of research into the history of the race must have thrown its spell upon him, as we trust it will upon many another young Australian before the coming meeting of the British Association is at an end. His appointment at Cairo gave him the opportunity of doing some of the most interesting work that has ever been done by an anatomist. He stands to-day well at the front of British science—a typical Australian scientist in this respect, that his activities are extraordinarily comprehensive. When an Australian falls in love with science he is apt to fall in love with the whole range of it, from classical history to bacteriology. He very seldom becomes the sort of student of one subject to whom the world consists of that subject, and nothing else beside. He may be in danger of wasting his energy by diffusing it; but at least when he steers clear of that danger, he has a breadth of view and freshness of outlook which make his work particularly valuable. The number of Australians who have gone down before the fascination of geology, in particular, is already considerable. May there be many more of them.

MR. J. CHAMBERLAIN DEAD.

A GREAT IMPERIALIST.

PEACEFUL END.

LONDON, July 3.

Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, M.P., who has been an invalid for a considerable time, died at his London residence, 40 Princes Gardens, S.W., this morning, aged 78 years.

The family was present at the death-bed, and the veteran statesman and Imperialist passed away peacefully.

The greatest Colonial Secretary in British history is dead.

Joseph Chamberlain was the son of a wholesale bootmaker in London. The same business had been carried on by his grandfather and great grandfather. Joseph Chamberlain entered this old house as a clerk at the age of 16. But when he was 18, a brother-in-law of his father, by name Nettlefold, bought up an American machine for making screws. Joseph Chamberlain, senior, put some money into it—but, as he himself was tied to London, the son was sent to look after the father's share in the Birmingham business.

So Joseph Chamberlain, at the age of 18, first went to Birmingham. From that day to the day of his death he became a Birmingham man.

In Birmingham young Chamberlain came under the influence of a certain circle of very brilliant and notable nonconformists. He himself had undertaken Sunday-school work before he left London. And in Birmingham he flung himself into the work of trying to teach his less fortunate fellow-men on every subject that he thought would be of benefit to them. From this it was only one step to a debating society; and from a debating society into the municipal politics of Birmingham.

Joseph Chamberlain will go down to posterity as an Imperial statesman; and yet it may be doubted if it was not as a municipal reformer that the most brilliant work of his life was really done.

He found Birmingham a slum, and left it a city.

Of Chamberlain's career in the greater politics of Westminster there is no space here to speak. His sudden rush to eminence, his change of attitude over the Home Rule Bill, the vexed question of his relation to the Jameson raiders—these matters are fully set forth and discussed in an account of his life which we publish on another page. It was after his visit to South Africa that the wiry constitution, upon which his energy had put an impossible strain, broke down, owing to the hardships of the journey. From the end of 1903 he took no active part in politics. And only this year he announced that when the end of the present Parliament arrived he would not seek re-election.

"A CRYING SCANDAL."

"CHRISTIAN WORLD'S" ATTACK.

LONDON, July 3.

The "Christian World" deals with the New Hebrides in an article entitled, "A Crying Scandal."

After alleging that women and children are openly recruited and kidnapped for immoral purposes, and that the administration of justice is a farce, the paper says that the Government is in possession of papers which it dares not publish because they prove that the bulk of the maladministration has been French rather than English; therefore, it is afraid of arousing French public opinion against England.

The paper expresses the hope that the present conference will remedy matters, but adds, "If it does not do so, the papers indicated must be published and the consequences faced."

BUILDING TRADE DISPUTE.

LONDON, July 3.

The National Federation of Building Trade Employers have now completed arrangements for a national lockout should the ballot of the employers, which is to be taken forthwith, be in favour of one.

It is expected, however, that sectional settlements will end the strike, as five of the men's unions have already approached the employers.

AUSTRIAN CRIME.

CONFESSIONS.

BY THE CONSPIRATORS.

VIENNA, July 3.

Speaking to his lawyer, Prinzip, the youth who fired the shots which killed the Archduke, stated yesterday that he got bombs and a sum of money from M. Ciganovic, a rich merchant of Belgrade. He added that he tried to assassinate the Archduke during the military manoeuvres at Tarc, but the gendarmerie prevented him from getting near the Royal visitor.

Prinzip said he followed the Archduke about from the moment he set foot on Bosnian soil.

Cabrinovic, the man who threw the bomb at the Archduke, stated that he got the bomb from Major Milan Pribicevic, the Secretary of the Pan-Servian Union, who is also in the Servian military service. He says that Major Pribicevic told him to apply to M. Ciganovic, a well-known Komitaji, who supplied him with six bombs and six automatic pistols from the service arsenal at Kragujevac, upon his (Cabrinovic's) promise to find four more conspirators. Cabrinovic and Prinzip then approached a Belgrade student named Trifke Grabes, and all three received a supply of cyanide of potassium, which they were instructed to swallow after throwing the bomb.

Cabrinovic refused to give the names of three other conspirators.

Grabes, when arrested, said he did not throw his bomb, as the Archduke and his wife were already fatally wounded.

Prinzip promises to divulge the names of the other conspirators to-day. He says he repents the murder, because his accomplices betrayed him.

Prinzip's courage broke down and he wept during his examination yesterday.

He states that the poison he carried was knocked out of his hand before he had time to drink it after he had fired at the Archduke.

LYING IN STATE.

TRIESTE, July 2.

The bodies of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand and the Duchess were brought ashore from the battleship Viribus Unitis, and with imposing ceremony were entrained for Vienna.

As the Duchess was a morganatic wife, the ceremony in the Royal Chapel was different. Whereas the catafalque-bearing the remains of the Archduke was flanked with velvet cushions, carrying his military and naval insignia, the cushion at the side of the wife's catafalque bore only a pair of white gloves and a white fan.

A PRIVATE FUNERAL.

BERLIN, July 2.

The German Emperor, who is suffering from a slight cold and lumbago, will not be able to attend the funeral, and Prince Henry will represent him.

VIENNA, July 3.

Some attribute the German Emperor's absence from the funeral to considerations of safety. Neither Prince Henry of Prussia, Prince Arthur of Connaught, nor the Kings of Saxony and Bavaria will be present at the interment, it being announced that the Emperor Francis Joseph desires to confine the attendance to the family.

THE ORPHANS.

In view of the late Archduke's small personal fortune, the Emperor has granted the orphaned children an appanage, the same as if their father had succeeded to the throne, and the new Heir Apparent approves of this step.

MEXICO.

CONSTITUTIONALIST SPLIT.

UNITED STATES EFFORTS.

WASHINGTON, July 2.

Fully instructed in regard to the Government's attitude, Mr. John R. Silliman will leave for Saltilly to-morrow to represent the United States in the temporary capital of General Carranza, the Constitutionalist leader.

It is understood that he goes, virtually as Dr. Wilson's personal agent, to lend a hand as occasion occurs with a view to healing the breach between General Carranza and General Villa, and particularly to impress on the Constitutionalists the necessity for peace in Mexico under a Provisional Government as proposed by the Niagara Falls conference.

PEACE PROPOSALS.

NIAGARA FALLS, July 2.

Communications between the warring factions of Mexico have begun.

The representatives of President Huerta have formally addressed to the mediators a note to be transmitted to the Constitutionalists' representatives in washington in which they express their willingness to discuss measures for peace with the Constitutionalists and bring an end to the present civil strife.

BRITISH REFUGEES.

MEXICO CITY, July 2.

Fifty British residents, including 30 women and children, are about to leave the capital for Vera Cruz, whence they will proceed to Jamaica.

UNITED STATES AND COLOMBIA.

MR. ROOSEVELTS CRITICISM.

OYSTER BAY, July 2.

"If the Wilson Administration puts through the treaty with Colombia, providing for the payment of £5,000,000, it will forfeit all right to the respect of the people of the United States," declared Mr. Theodore Roosevelt yesterday.

This statement followed one by Mr. J. T. Dubois, a former Minister in Colombia, assailing the acts of the Roosevelt Administration in connection with the Panama revolution.

"I have nothing to say about Mr. Dubois," said Mr. Roosevelt. "He was merely the instrument of Dr. Wilson, who was responsible. If the payment of the £5,000,000 is made, it will amount to a naked payment of blackmail. The mere proposal is an outrage on the honour and a blow to the interests of the United States people."

TRANSATLANTIC FLIGHT.

WANNAMAKER MACHINE TESTS.

HAMMOND'S PORT (New York), July 2.

Flying over a measured course, the Wannamaker hydro-aeroplane, in which Lieutenant Porte is to attempt to cross the Atlantic, developed a speed of 60 miles an hour, although the motor was throttled down so that the propeller made 1200 revolutions per minute, whereas the maximum number of revolutions is 1300.

GENERAL CABLE NEWS.

LONDON, July 3.

The newspapers are emphasising the importance of the British Union Cold Storage Company's concession in view of the Commonwealth's far-reaching plans for the development of the Northern Territory.

The Labour party is in favour of an autumn session, but the great bulk of the Liberals continue to be averse to the idea, feeling that the autumn should be devoted to propagandist work in the constituencies, in view of the next general election.

HOME RULE.

THE AMENDING BILL

LORDS' DEBATE.

IRISH CONVENTION SUGGESTED

LONDON, July 3.

The debate on the motion for the second reading of the amending Home Rule Bill was resumed in the House of Lords last night.

Lord Londonderry (Unionist) asked if the Government was absolutely sincere. Was Mr. Asquith prepared to support the Marquis of Crewe, Lord Privy Seal, and tell Mr. J. E. Redmond, the Nationalist leader, that it would insist on amendments of a far-reaching character being accepted? He added that unless the House of Commons was to consider the amendments made by the House of Lords the proceedings would be simply a farce.

Lord Wimborne, who replied on behalf of the Government, asked the Opposition not to put forward the maximum but the minimum that would satisfy Ulster.

Lord Dunraven (Unionist) urged the Government to drop both bills, and call a convention of Irishmen to decide the future of Ireland.

Lord Islington (Liberal) said that Ulster must be allowed to come in in her own time, and on her own conditions; but with armed Roman Catholics facing armed Protestants exclusion alone would avert a conflict.

Lord Halsbury (Unionist), considering that it was urgently necessary to do something to avoid civil war, supported the second reading of the bill.

The debate was adjourned till Monday.

VOLUNTEERS AND ARMS.

In the House of Commons yesterday the attention of Mr. Birrell (Chief Secretary for Ireland) was called to the practice of the Ulster Volunteers carrying arms in the streets.

Mr. Birrell replied that at the present time Government action in regard to the matter would not be wise.

Mr. Neil Primrose (Liberal): Does the Government give any sign in Ireland of its existence?

CORPS OF ARMED WOMEN.

To protect their homes the Rev. Canon Scott has organised a corps of armed women at Brookfield, near Omagh.

UNIONIST COUNCIL CONFERENCE.

A conference of the Unionist Council will be held in Belfast on the 10th instant to discuss the establishment of a provisional Government in the event of the Home Rule Bill becoming law.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

ANNUAL DINNER.

PROSPERITY OF THE STATE.

LONDON, July 2.

At the New South Wales dinner, which was held to-night in the Hotel Cecil, the attendance numbered 200, among those present being Mr. Lewis Harcourt (Secretary of State for the Colonies), Lord Emmott (Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies), Sir George Reid (High Commissioner for Australia), the Agents-General, Sir Thomas Ewing, Mr. A. C. Carmichael (New South Wales Minister of Education), Mr. R. Hollis, M.L.A., Captain Leslie Wilson, Sir Robert Nivison, and Mr. David George (London manager of the Bank of New South Wales).

Sir T. A. Coghlan (Agent-General for New South Wales), who presided, said the prosperity of New South Wales during the past 10 years had been the most rapid in the history of the State, while its indebtedness in relation to resources was never lighter.

Mr. Carmichael justified the efforts of the Government in educational, industrial, and financial spheres.

SUFFRAGISTS.

WILD SCENE IN COURT.

LONDON, July 3.

A wild scene occurred during the Carnarvonshire Quarter Sessions after Georgine Lloyd and Phillis North had each been sentenced to three months' imprisonment for breaking windows at Criccieth.

Lloyd attempted to leap over the dock, and it took five warders to hold her down.

AMERICAN TRAIN ROBBERS.

PENDLETON (O.), July 2.

Three robbers attacked the passengers in a car on the Oregon-Washington railroad. During the fight that ensued a passenger, who happened to be a deputy-sheriff, killed one of the robbers, and wounded another. He himself was also injured.

The wounded bandit and his companion escaped after ransacking the express and robbing one-third of the passengers.

Later.

The Deputy Sheriff, who was wounded in the fight, is now resting easily in a bed banked up with flowers from the grateful train passengers.

FAMINE IN INDIA.

DELHI, July 2.

HIGH RENTS.

GOULBURN, Friday.

At a sitting of the Transport Wages Board an auctioneer and estate agent said that in the last two or three years rents in Goulburn had increased about 40 per cent. The rent of a new, decent-looking house, three rooms and kitchen, would be from 15s to £1. Without conveniences the rent would be about 12s. The rent for the ordinary working men's cottage ranged from 10s to 25s a week, the latter of high grade. He had 40 standing applications for houses. He quoted cases where rents had been increased from 6s to 12s a week, and from 10s to 15s. The Mayor stated that about 50 new houses were being erected.

BOY ILLTREATED.

WOLLONGONG, Friday.

At the Police Court this morning, before Mr. A. Gates, D.S.M., Thomas Langham, master mariner, of Wollongong, pleaded guilty to assaulting Thomas Ferguson, 9 years of age, a boy whom he had adopted.

According to the evidence of the Government medical officer, the lad's body was much bruised, owing to the treatment he had received. Since the assault the boy has been taken care of by the police.

His Worship said the treatment of such a small boy by defendant was brutal. He inflicted a fine of £5, and 6s costs, and £1 1s medical expenses, in default three months' hard labour.

RIFLEMEN.

INCLUDED IN THE WAR STRENGTH.

SCHEME OF MOBILISATION.

ACTIVE SERVICE LIST.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Although the rifle club movement of Australia dates from the war in South Africa, no concerted effort has yet been made to turn the enthusiasm of this civilian force into practical military purposes. During the last few weeks, however, the Commonwealth Mobilisations Committee have had the matter under serious consideration, with the result that a scheme has been devised which will make the skilled marksmen of the Commonwealth immediately available in a national emergency.

There are altogether 47,665 efficient riflemen in Australia, distributed among 1133 clubs, and from now on this large body of men may be considered as an important part of the defence scheme.

In the course of the next few days every rifle club captain throughout Australia will receive from the central administration a large book containing documents of all kinds which would be necessary in the event of a call to arms. Immediately on receipt of this volume every captain will be required to send to the supervisor of rifle clubs, on separate forms, showing the number of members in his club, and those who, in his opinion, are physically fit for active service. A statement will also be made of the number of unmarried men or widowers without children between the ages of 18 and 35, and also the number of married members of the club and widowers with children between the same ages. Similar information will also be requested as to the members between 35 and 45 years of age, and the number between 45 and 60. Particulars are also asked as to the number who are able to ride, and information must also be supplied as to how many members of the club are blacksmiths and farriers, wheelwrights, saddlers, tailors, shoemakers, carpenters, or tradesmen of other kinds. The number of riding horses suitable for active service which members would be prepared to take with them to the regimental depot for sale to the department must also be indicated, and also the number of club members who have bicycles or motor cycles of their own. Captains must indicate how many of the remaining members of the rifle clubs are, in their opinion, physically fit to act as transport drivers if required. Details as to the transport equipment owned by members of each rifle club which might be hired or purchased by the department in an emergency are also asked for.

No doubt captains of rifle clubs will view this first document with chagrin, but they will probably hasten to supply the particulars applied for, as the board has decided that no efficiency allowance or supplies of free ammunition will be issued to any club unless the details asked for have been sent in. It has been estimated that about 80 per cent. of rifle club members will be considered fit for service by their captains, but the military authorities think that after medical examinations the actual force ready for the field will be nearer 60 per cent. At the beginning of August the captain of each rifle club will be notified as to the infantry light horse and Army Service Corps unit to which members of his club have been allotted. Immediately instructions have been given to call out the riflemen they will know to what regiment they are attached, and will receive orders from the colonel in command where to go. Captains are to induce their members, as soon as they know the regiments to which they are allotted, in the course of a few months, as often as possible to associate themselves with it, so that they might become to know the officers and men with whom they would have to fight in time of war. Members who are not themselves medically fit to take the field will be required to hand over their rifles if they belong to the department, and they will be compulsorily purchased from them if they are privately owned.

YACHT WRECKED.

OFF NORFOLK ISLAND.

NORFOLK ISLAND, Friday.

The yacht Wanderlust arrived last evening from Lord Howe Island with Captain Garrett, Miss Stock, and Messrs. Stock and Jackson on board.

While trying to enter Emily Bay, in tow of an island whale boat, she struck a reef and became a total wreck. All were thrown into the water, but reached the reef and were rescued.

The remains of the vessel were washed ashore.

VENTURESOME VOYAGE.

The Wanderlust was a yawl-rigged auxiliary, previously known as the Batavia, and was purchased in Sydney in May last by Mr. Ralph Stock, author of "A Recipe for Rubber" and other novels.

Mr. Stock, together with his sister and Mr. C. Jackson, an ex-army man, left Sydney in the Wanderlust towards the end of May for a cruise amongst the islands of the South Seas.

The little vessel was in charge of Captain Neil Garrat when she cleared the Heads. Trouble was experienced with the engines after leaving and the Wanderlust returned to port. Repairs were effected, and the little vessel again made her departure, eventually reaching Lord Howe Island safely.

Before leaving Sydney Mr. Ralph Stock said that he was making the venturesome voyage with the object of obtaining material for another book on similar lines to "The Confessions of a Tenderfoot." It was his intention to visit Lord Howe Island, Norfolk Island, the Cook Group, Society Islands, Pamotu Islands, Marquesas Islands, Gilbert and Ellice Groups, New Hebrides, and New Caledonia.

The Wanderlust was 43ft in length, and had a beam of 9ft 6in.

PONY OWNERS ON STRIKE.

HIGHER STAKES WANTED.

There has been friction between the Pony and Galloway Owners' Association and the Associated Racing Clubs, which embrace Kensington, Rosebery, Ascot, and Victoria Park.

The immediate cause of the rupture is the alleged refusal of the clubs to meet the association in conference.

On this subject, Mr. E. H. Symonds, secretary of the P. and G. Owners' Association, yesterday made the following statement:—

Our association has endeavoured, by every legitimate means, to fix a definite date for a conference with the Board of Management of the Associated Racing Clubs. All efforts to do so have so far failed. The association has therefore decided not to nominate at any race meeting held under the control of the A.R.C. until the demands for increased prize money and other reforms have been granted.

The A.R.C. has declined since May 8 to fix a definite date to meet pony and galloway owners' representatives. This is the crux of the present trouble, and the cause of nominations being withheld from a coming race meeting.

It must be obvious to anyone (adds Mr. Symonds) that the small prize money given by the A.R.C. is out of all proportion to the generous support of owners and the general public to the pony and galloway meetings.

Efforts are being made by one of the clubs to secure nominations from Melbourne owners. On the score of expense alone, such a course is not likely to lead to anything practical.

There are about 700 ponies and galloways in the metropolitan area, and about 200 owners and trainers, of whom at least 170 belong to the association.

RUGBY DISPUTE.

HOME UNION INTERVENES.

MATCH TO BE PLAYED.

Mr. J. H. Houghton, manager of the English team, acting under instructions from the Northern Rugby Union, decided yesterday afternoon to place a team in the field against Australia in the final test match at the Sydney Cricket Ground this afternoon. Mr. J. Clifford, the other manager of the team, did not agree, and it is understood that he resigned his position.

The English managers, acting on their own initiative, declined on Thursday to participate in a match designated England v Australia, on the grounds that, owing to injuries, they were unable to place a thirteen in the field representative of the Northern Union's full strength. They desired to wait until after the New Zealand tour, but the general committee of the league decided that a postponement was not practicable, and that the final test match must be played in accordance with the original programme. A crisis was reached on Thursday evening, when Mr. Houghton declared that he and Mr. Clifford were not prepared to fall in with the league's decision. However, Mr. E. R. Larkin, secretary of the league, immediately cabled to Mr. Joseph Platt, secretary of the Northern Union, fully explaining the seriousness of the position. A reply came to hand at midday yesterday to the effect that the Northern Union committee had cabled instructions to their managers to play the test match to-day.

Mr. Houghton, when spoken to on the matter, said that, acting under instructions received from home, the match England v Australia was to take place. The members of the British team received the announcement enthusiastically, and to a man endorsed their governing body's action. A prominent forward, when spoken to, said they were willing to meet Australia, as the players recognised that in a tour like the present the good must be taken with the bad. They had received unstinted patronage from the public, and had been received everywhere in a cordial and sportsmanlike manner. They had played some hard games, and as was only natural in the circumstances, some of the team were injured; still, this fact was not sufficient in itself to justify the drastic step of Messrs. Houghton and Clifford. The governing committee at home, he said, was fully alive to the great possibilities of the thirteen aside code in New South Wales, and were not the men to sanction an action which would rob the Sydney public of witnessing the most important match of the tour.

Even with a weakened team England is sure to put up an exciting and stern fight this afternoon, as the coveted "ashes" are at stake; and should they succeed in carrying off the honours, their triumph will be all the more meritorious.

DAY BAKING.

PRONOUNCED A FAILURE.

TRIAL IN VICTORIA.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Consternation exists among bakery employers over the results of the system of baking bread in the daytime. This was strikingly shown at the meeting held last night. Each speaker in a large gathering had the same tale to tell—confusion, loss of trade, return of stale bread, and demands for fresh bread.

The following motions were unanimously agreed to:—"That, whilst employers have endeavoured to loyally abide by the determination of the wages board, it has been found universally already that day baking has proved disastrous to the trade, as well as most inconvenient to consumers; the worst fears have been confirmed, and every day's experience demonstrates the impracticability of the system, which is certain to prove most injurious to masters and to the public, as well as to the operators themselves; that the master bakers apply to the Industrial Appeal Court to have the present determination set aside."

Among the carters the opinion has completely veered round in respect to day baking. At first they favoured the system, but the worries of the last few days have altered their views. They have had to act as buffers between the angry consumer and employers in the delivery of stale bread. Besides, there is the prospect of a large number of them losing their employment. A special meeting has been summoned for Thursday to consider the matter.

UNION v. UNION.

CHARGES OF INTIMIDATION.

ENGINEERS' DEMAND.

"The campaign of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers when directed against non-unionists may be laudable enough, but," said Mr. Claude Thompson, general secretary of the Amalgamated Railway and Tramway Service Association, yesterday, "when that campaign is directed against members of our association, it is pernicious.

"During the last few days," he said, "our members employed in the Eveleigh workshops have complained of threats being made to them that if they do not join the Amalgamated Engineers, they (the engineers) will refuse to work with them. The gratuitous information has also been afforded that the Amalgamated Railway and Tramway Service Association is not a union in the eyes of the Amalgamted Engineers. So far have the threats and misrepresentations gone, that I have been compelled to report a number of engineers, shop delegates, and foremen to the Chief Commissioner for Railways and Tramways for attempted intimidation of our members. In one glaring case I am now collecting evidence upon which to lay an information. Many of our members have been members of the Amalgamated Railway and Tramway Service Association long before the Amalgamated Engineers accepted such persons as members. It is only recently that the Amalgamated Engineers (the aristocracy? of unionism) have condescended to accept the lower grades of the engineering trades as members.

"Our association will not permit members to be intimidated whilst there is a law in the land. Shop delegates, perhaps, not with the sanction of the executive of the Amalgamated Engineers, have been making threats for which the laws of this State provide condign punishment. No union or unions in this State are strong enough or rich enough to threaten the members of the Amalgamated Railway and Tramway Association with impunity. What they say or do to non-unionists is no immediate concern of ours, but a hostile attitude towards our members is our concern, and the guilty persons will be held responsible. As far as I can learn, little or no effort is being made to enrol non-unionists, but efforts are being made to hector and bluster members of the Amalgamated Railway and Tramway Service Association into resigning and joining the Amalgamated Engineers."

ENGINEER'S STATEMENT.

Mr. A. E. Dengate, organiser for the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, stated last night that no intimidation was resorted to. The trade conditions of engineers in railway workshops had, he said, been gained by the Amalgamated Society of Engineers. Therefore, these men should, in his opinion, join this society, but there would be no objection to their belonging to the service union as well.

DEFENCE.

MINISTERS TO GO TO LONDON.

NEGOTIATIONS FOR THE CONFERENCE.

AGREEMENT PROBABLE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Everything points to a better understanding between Great Britain and the oversea dominions on the question of Empire defence being arrived at. During the present financial year there is reason to believe, also, that the parts Australia, New Zealand, and Canada are to play in the naval policy of the Pacific will be finally defined.

Provided there is a Liberal majority in the Federal Parliament after the approaching elections, it is practically certain that the Prime Minister, Mr. Cook, and the Minister for Defence, Senator Millen, will go to England next year with a view especially to having every phase of the position considered. In any circumstances, a meeting of the Imperial Conference will take place during 1915, and it is already stated with authority that opportunities will be taken advantage of to go somewhat extensively into defence matters.

The Minister for Defence, Senator Millen, does not agree with the First Lord of the Admiralty, Mr. Winston Churchill, that all capital ships like the Australia and the New Zealand should be concentrated in home waters, nor does he admit that Great Britain carried out her part in the bargain of 1909, although no intimation of an intention to depart from it was at any time communicated to Australia. It is hoped that the coming conference will tend to promote a settlement, and to focus many views which, at a distance, seem to be quite discordant.

DATE OF CONFERENCE.

In the ordinary course the session of the Federal Parliament, immediately after the coming appeal to the people, will close late in December, and the long recess until late June, or early July, may be expected to follow. In these circumstances it is considered likely in well-informed circles that the defence question will be considered by the Empire representatives towards the end of May or during April, so that the Australian delegates may be afforded ample time to return to Melbourne before the second Parliamentary session commences. No arrangement, however, has yet been made. Official copies of the correspondence which have passed from time to time between the Imperial authorities and the oversea dominions since 1912 have now been made available to the Australian Defence Department, and the communications throw interesting sidelights on the situation, which has hitherto been clouded with doubts.

The points have been summarised in London as follows, so that the position may be quickly seized. The Secretary of State for the Colonies on December 10, 1912, addressed a despatch to the Governments of all the Dominions, in which he declared that the Imperial Government would welcome more continuous representation of Dominion Ministers, if they wish it, upon the Committee of Imperial Defence, and asked whether the Dominions desired to adopt such method of more continuous connection in naval and military affairs with the Committee of Imperial Defence in the United Kingdom.

ATTITUDE OF COLONIES.

The Canadian Prime Minister, Mr. Borden, in introducing his Naval Bill into the Dominion Parliament, mentioned, with approval, the idea that the Canadian Minister should be in London during the whole or portion of the year, being regularly summoned to all meetings of the Committee of Imperial Defence, and regarded as one of its permanent members. Newfoundland did not consider it advisable at present to send a Minister to London as a member of the Imperial Defence Committee, but rather that, when at any time accredited Ministers are in England, they may be invited to attend deliberations of the committee. The reply of the South African Government was given in a minute signed by General Botha, who said that he and his colleagues had noticed with pleasure that no new departure in constitutoinal practice was intended. "The South African Government," he said, "doubt whether the idea of a Minister of the Union residing in London for the purpose of constantly representing the Union Government on the Imperial Defence Committee is practicable, so long as control of the foreign policy remains as under present conditions. It necessarily must remain solely with the Imperial Government, and the Imperial Government will continue to consult the Dominions on all questions of foreign policy which affect them. Individual Ministers do not think it is necessary to have a Union Minister in constant attendance at the Imperial Defence Committee.

AUSTRALIA'S POSITION.

The Commonwealth Ministry—Mr. Fisher's—replied by cable message, on December 19, 1912, to Mr. Lewis Harcourt's despatch, saying that it would be impossible for any Commonwealth Minister to visit Great Britain during 1913. They suggested, however, that a subsidiary conference on naval defence should be held in August, January, or February, 1913. The message continued: "If this is not practicable, Ministers would be prepared to attend a conference in New Zealand, South Africa, or Vancouver, Canada." The suggestion evidently took Mr. Harcourt by surprise, for he telegraphed on January 8, 1913, asking whether this conference was suggested for 1913. Informed that it was, he telegraphed again, on January 10, 1913, that, owing to the situation of public affairs here the suggestion was quite impossible, adding that other Dominions could not attend at short notice, and it was doubtful whether they would desire a general conference at present. The general election for the Federal Parliament took place on May 31, 1913, and on August 15 the new Cook Ministry cabled to Mr. Harcourt that they were considering the naval defence situation, especially in connection with the 1909 agreement. They expressed anxiety to know exactly the intentions of his Majesty's Government in this respect, and said that they were willing to arrange for representation at a conference should his Majesty's Government consider this necessary. There was apparently no reply to this message, but on November 21, 1913, Mr. Harcourt wrote asking why the Australian Prime Minister, Mr. Cook, had told Parliament that he had asked the Imperial Government to convene a conference of Dominion representatives, as no such request could be traced. The Commonwealth Ministry answered by cable, on February 9, 1914, that they regarded their telegram of August 15 as a request for a conference. After a considerable interval, Mr. Harcourt sent a message, on March 13, 1914, to Australia and New Zealand, asking whether they desired a conference. The New Zealand Government replied that "New Zealand desires a conference, but unless time and place are convenient, representation cannot be adequate." The Cook Ministry reiterated its desire for a conference, but said that, "in view of the early meeting of Parliament, it is now impossible for any Commonwealth Minister to visit London this year—1914."

Correspondence closes with a brief cable message, dated April 1, 1914, from Mr. Harcourt to Australia and New Zealand, saying that the question of the Defence Conference must stand over for the present.

EXCLUDED INDIAN.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

It was reported a few days ago that a half-caste Indian, named Charles Cowper, who spoke perfect English, and who was a passenger from New Zealand, had been refused the right to land in Sydney, and would probably have to return to the Dominion.

Mr. Atlee Hunt stated yesterday that the authorities in Sydney had been instructed to allow the man to land immediately upon his undertaking to leave by the R.M.S. Osterley, which he had indicated was the steamer he had intended to join.

CAREER OF CRIME.

BOYS' BAD START.

SENTENCED TO TWO YEARS.

When sentencing two youths, John Alfred Lawler (16) and Leslie James M'Kay (17), who had pleaded guilty to nine charges of breaking and entering and stealing from dwellings at Belmore, Chatswood, Campsie, Homebush, Kogarah, Turramurra, and Rockdale, at the Metropolitan Quarter Sessions yesterday, Judge Docker said that the prisoners had had a successful run of crime, and were not detected till the ninth offence had been committed, when, although they got nothing, they ransacked the place, and when captured they admitted everything. "These are very serious offences," said his Honor, addressing the prisoners, "and unfortunately they are very common. It seems to be the easiest way for young fellows who want money to commence a course of crime. It is necessary for many persons engaged in their daily occupations, earning an honest livelihood, to leave their houses protected only by a lock and key; and it seems easy to take the property and then turn it into money. That, of course, cannot be permitted in the interests of civil society. Persons who have to leave their dwellings must be protected, and so the law provides a heavy punishment for these offences—10 years' penal servitude for breaking and entering and stealing, and seven years for breaking and entering with intent to steal. So if you form a little sum in multiplication, you will see how many years of penal servitude, to which you are liable—a good many more years than you are likely to live. That is a very sad way of beginning life, and it is indeed sad to see young fellows throwing away their chances in life in this way, bringing sorrow upon their parents. Only yesterday a jury called my attention as Judge to the prevalence of these offences, evidently suggesting that they should be met with a firm hand, and that it is best, metaphorically speaking, to nip in the bud a course of crime. The sentence upon you, for the first three charges, is that you be imprisoned in Goulburn Gaol for two years, with hard labour, instead of 10 years on each count, the terms to be concurrent. The sentences on the remaining six cases will be concurrent also—two years' hard labour on each charge. How long you will have to serve on these sentences will depend upon your own conduct in gaol."

According to the evidence of persons called to give evidence on the prisoners' behalf, both of the lads had borne good characters up to two months ago, and M'Kay's employer said that he was prepared to take him back again if he were released. Lawler's father said that the prisoner had been an industrious lad, and had given his wages regularly to his mother. He considered that bad company was the cause of the lad's downfall.

EXCHANGE REFUSED

QUAMBONE CASE.

MR. TREFLE AND THE BOARD.

The Minister for Lands yesterday refused the Quambone exchange application. The matter has excited considerable interest in the western district by reason of the political feeling engendered by the application.

The case was interesting also from the fact that Mr. M'Donald, M.L.A., a member of the State Labour party, appeared in support of the application. The Minister took the opposite view to the local land board of the case, the board having recommended the exchange. Mr. Trefle came to the conclusion on the evidence that the land at Sandy Camp, in the Warren district, wanted by the applicant, in exchange for his 14,430 acres block at Mungerbambone, was, on its unimproved value, from 2/ to 10/ per acre better than the land sought to be surrendered.

Mr. Trefle stated the whole case as follows:—

"In December last a proposal was made by James M'Leish to surrender 14,462 acres on Mungerbambone resumed area, in the Land District of Coonamble, for an area of 14,430 acres on Sandy Camp, in the Warren district. The Minister for Lands directed that the case should be heard at Quambone, and that the Quambone Land Seekers and Small Holders' Association should be specially invited to be represented and give evidence at the inquiry, as it was considered that the members of such an association would be able to give evidence that would be of great assistance in the disposal of such a matter.

"When the case came before the board at Quambone on May 20, Mr. G. R. W. M'Donald, M.L.A., who appeared for Mr. M'Leish, objected to the Land Seekers' Association appearing as objectors, and his objection being upheld by the board, some of the members of the association were called as witnesses by the district surveyor, who conducted the case on behalf of the Crown. After making an inspection of the proposed exchange and surrender lands and taking evidence, the board on May 23 reported favourably on the proposal.

"The evidence taken at the board meeting and the board's report have now been fully considered by the Minister for Lands, who has given the following decision:—

"On the evidence I consider the unimproved value of the exchange lands exceeds that of the land offered in surrender. It is also evident that an important factor which weighed with the board in making its recommendation was the anticipated surrender of improvement lease 1666, which it is now clear applicant intends to retain. These facts satisfy me that the exchange is against the interests of the Crown, and it is accordingly refused.

"In coming to this decision, I cannot refrain from expressing my disapproval of applicant's treatment of the Land Seekers' Association in refusing to allow them to be represented before the land board. This was in opposition to my publicly announced desire that they should be afforded the fullest opportunity of pressing their objections.

"Whilst I recognise," added the Minister, "that legally the point raised by applicant is correct, this action defeated my desire to ascertain and gauge the real value of their objections. It is to be remembered that a land board inquiry in this and similar cases is limited to a recommendation to assist me as Minister in coming to that decision; consequently the technical objection taken deprived me of the additional light that might have been thrown on the case by the cross-examination of witnesses and the assistance of objectors' counsel."

ANTI-TRUST BILL.

IN VICTORIA.

DRASTIC PROVISIONS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

A bill to deal with trusts and combines is now nearly ready for submission to the State Parliament.

Its provisions are very stringent and extensive. The powers proposed to be undertaken are designed to enable the State Government to deal effectually with all trusts and combines whose operations might prove to be, or are, contrary to the public interest. In order to guard against competition from another State that would be unlawful in Victoria, it will be laid down that persons who aid, abet, or procure, or are knowingly concerned in the commission of an offence against the Act, or doing of any act outside Victoria which would, if done in Victoria, have been an offence against the Act, shall be deemed to have committed such an offence. Heavy penalties will be provided.

TENNESSEE TRAGEDY.

PERTH, Friday.

The inquest was held at Tennessee regarding the tragedy near Albany, where, on June 21, Frederick Anderson Smith was shot dead. A verdict of wilful murder was returned against the father of deceased.

Accused reiterated his statement that the son threatened him, and that he took up a gun to protect himself, and tried to fire low when he was rushed. The medical evidence showed that the charge of shot, fired at a few feet distance, had blown away half of deceased's heart.

THE HOLD UP.

ANOTHER MAN ACCUSED

ARREST AT HOBART.

CHARGED WITH RECEIVING.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The scene of further startling developments in connection with the Eveleigh highway robbery on June 10 was transferred to Tasmania yesterday.

A man named Samuel O. Falkiner was arrested in Hobart on a charge of having received, harboured, maintained, and assisted Edward Alexander Ryan, in Melbourne, on June 18, knowing that Ryan had robbed Frederick Miller, at Eveleigh, on June 10, of £3301, the property of the New South Wales Chief Commissioner for Railways and Tramways.

The news of the arrest was telegraphed to Superintendent Gleeson, of the Melbourne Criminal Investigation Department, this morning.

When the man Jewey was arrested at Strathfield Railway Station, as he was about to board the express, the Sydney authorities began investigations for the purpose of tracing the luggage which might have been on board the train bound for Melbourne, or, on the other hand, which might have been forwarded some days previously. The man on the station with Jewey had succeeded in eluding the police, and a careful search for his luggage was also commenced. No name was known to the police.

Sydney and Melbourne detectives were commissioned to make inquiries, and after a long and frequent telegraphic communication between the two cities it was learnt that two suit cases, in addition to other goods, had been consigned to Melbourne under the name of Falkiner. The two cases were traced to an address in Fitzroy. It was learnt that a man named Samuel Falkiner had received these goods about the date of the robbery, but that he had since disappeared.

Interest was now centred in tracing Falkiner, but he seemed to be in every city in Australia at the same time. First, the detectives learned that he had gone to Adelaide; then that he was back in Melbourne, on to Sydney, and back to Melbourne again. Close watch was kept on a number of houses in Melbourne where it was believed he might be found. These places have been raided during the past fortnight, and secret officers stationed in them in order that any communications between Sydney and Melbourne might be intercepted.

The result was successful. Code messages were intercepted, and translated sufficiently to grasp their purport. It was within the knowledge of the detectives on Tuesday that the man known as Falkiner had left for Devonport (Tas.), with the intention of proceeding to Hobart, via Launceston. The Tasmanian police were warned, and asked to search the man and his belongings. It was ascertained yesterday that a man closely answering the description given had been seen by the Tasmanian police on board the train bound for Hobart. A further message was received this morning that a man named Samuel Falkiner had been arrested.

The man admitted his identity, but denied certain other facts. What these facts were, Superintendent Gleeson said it would be unwise to make public at the present juncture. Important developments were still in progress which might be completed at any moment.

Falkiner was until recently employed as a cleaner by a firm in Flinders-street, Melbourne. Falkiner will be taken direct to Sydney from Tasmania.

Further search at the house in Richardson-street, Middle Park, was stopped to-day. No more money was found, though every likely hiding place was examined.

LABOUR FINANCE.

STORY OF DEFICITS.

PERTH, Friday.

The Legislative Assembly adjourned till Tuesday afternoon. The Opposition leader, Mr. Wilson, criticised the Government's State enterprises, and strongly condemned the refusal of information to the House. The Treasury returns for the 11 months showed that on the simple receipts and working expenses, the State concerns had lost £35,000. No returns could be obtained about the State sawmills or the brickyards. Under the Labour Government system of dealing with settlers, 1,100,000 acres of selections were abandoned during 1913, the purchase of second-hand plant for agricultural implement works was a blunder, and in 11 months the works earned £37,000, and spent £61,000.

Reviewing the financial position, Mr. Wilson showed that the 1904-5 Labour Ministry took office with a surplus of £93,000, and when ousted 12 months later, left a deficit of £43,000. A Liberal Ministry came into power when the revenue and gold yields were decreasing, and the Commonwealth contributions steadily falling, but strict economy and careful financing for six years converted a deficit into a surplus of £13,000. The Liberal Ministry were not seeking popularity, but sound finance, and people tired of economies changed their managers. The present Government supervened, and in three years, despite good harvests, increased general revenue, and increased Commonwealth contributions, compiled a deficit of £527,000. The Government's financial system was absolutely unsound.

SMALLPOX.

A CASE FROM MELBOURNE.

Three cases of smallpox were reported yesterday by the Board of Health, one being an inmate of the Long Bay penitentiary, the second a passenger on the steamer Karoola, running to Melbourne, and the third a lodger in a Sussex-street boarding-house.

The reported case of smallpox from the steamer Karoola is described as "a suspicious case," and the company does not anticipate that the vessel will suffer any detention in this regard.

The Karoola arrived from Western Australia, via Melbourne and Adelaide, early yesterday morning, and the case was not discovered until after all the passengers had left the vessel. The passenger is said to have joined the steamer at Melbourne, though he is believed to have recently gone there from Sydney.

When the case was discovered the wharf labourers and others on the steamers were required to give their names and addresses, and to sign a document agreeing to report themselves to the Board of Health immediately should any of them develop unusual symptoms.

The steamer did not leave her wharf in Darling Harbour, and she will not be prevented from going into dock to-day.

WHAT SYDNEY SHOULD DO?

MELBOURNE, Friday.

As no case of smallpox has occurred in New Zealand for three months, the Dominion Minister for Health to-day declared that from then on the islands are to be regarded as free of the scourge.

SPIELERS AND ROWDIES.

BOWRAVILLE, Friday.

During the recent race meeting Bowraville was over-run by a party of spielers and rowdies, who at times almost took possession of the town. Armed with pistols, bottles, and stones, they rendered it unsafe for people to frequent the streets. Their language was of a most disgusting character.

ELECTIONS.

LIBERAL AND LABOUR.

A HOT CAMPAIGN.

The busiest man in Australia to-day is the Prime Minister. Mr. Cook has had much travelling and many meetings during the week, and a most comprehensive programme has been mapped out for him for the next two months.

The leader of the Federal Opposition is also mapping out meetings for weeks ahead. Mr. Fisher opens his campaign at Bundaberg on Monday. The leader of the Victorian Labour party, Mr. Elmslie, will visit Sydney during the month and discuss with Mr. Holman the State's Labour campaign at the elections.

The activity of the campaign is daily increasing, for most of the Federal members have returned to their respective States and are getting to work on their own contests.

LIBERAL SENATORS.

The Liberal Senate campaign in this State is in full swing. Messrs. Trethowan and Pratten are making a good impression on the North Coast, and already have addressed splendid meetings at Wingham, Wauchope, Kempsey, and Port Macquarie. Two more weeks will be spent on the North Coast, after which they will return to Sydney and commence a tour of the west, visiting, particularly, the big centres of the Macquarie and Robertson electorates.

Mr. Frank Coen last night opened his campaign at Yass, his home town, though he had delivered short addresses in various centres during the past couple of weeks. On Monday Senator Oakes and Mr. Coen will start on a tour of the southern line, visiting Albury, Corowa, Germanton, Henty, and Junee. Sir Albert Gould will speak at Mudgee on Wednesday, and then return for some meetings in the suburbs and the Nepean.

Senator Millen will, on Tuesday, speak at the Manchester Unity Hall, Enmore, with the Rev. S. D. Yarrington, who will open his campaign for the Cook electorate. For the following five days Senator Millen will visit Mortdale, Penrith, and Katoomba.

Arrangements have been made for a rally in the Protestant Hall, Crow's Nest, on Monday, July 13, when the Senate campaign in the northern suburbs will be officially opened. As the meeting is in the Prime Minister's electorate, Mr. Cook will preside. On July 14, Mr. Cook will speak at Hornsby, while at Parramatta, on Wednesday, July 15, the Liberal policy speech will be delivered.

On Friday, July 17, Mr. Cook and Sir William Irvine will address a gathering of farmers and settlers and Liberals in the Sydney Town Hall. Mr. Robert Patten, M.P., president of the Farmers and Settlers' Association, will preside. After that Mr. Cook will spend a week in New South Wales, and then visit Victoria, South Australia, and Tasmania, returning to Sydney for a few days, then going to Queensland, and again returning to New South Wales for the closing days of the campaign.

For the coming week Mr. Cook will go to Dulwich Hill on Tuesday, with the Speaker, Mr. Johnson. On Wednesday he will speak in support of the Rev. S. D. Yarrington's campaign, in the Mascot School of Arts. On Thursday Mr. Cook will attend some functions in connection with the Liberal Conference, on Friday he will speak in the Paddington Town Hall with Mr. W. H. Kelly, M.P., and the Liberal candidate for East Sydney.

SOUTH SYDNEY.

Mr. G. A. Pitt, the Liberal candidate for South Sydney, has been getting matters in train in connection with his campaign and meetings of his committees have been arranged to take place at Redfern on Monday, Botany on Tuesday, and Kensington on Wednesday. After these meetings have been held, at which arrangements for the campaign will be perfected, Mr. Pitt will open his campaign and address meetings in the principal centres of the electorate.

LABOUR AND TAXATION.

MR. COOK ANSWERS MR. FISHER.

"You have to make up your minds. Vote up or pay up," said the Prime Minister, Mr. Cook, at Greenwich yesterday afternoon when addressing a meeting of ladies there. "One result of our losing the election would be another stiff dose of taxation," he added.

This was the text of the speech.

A SERIOUS OUTLOOK.

Mr. Cook went on to say the question of taxation was becoming a very serious one in Australia. He had been looking over some figures, and it made one pause to think when they saw the burden increasing in New South Wales. The same phenomenon was observable wherever the Labour party was in power. Where Labour ruled, taxation piled higher. Labour and additional taxation had become synonomous terms. In Western Australia they had just finished up another remarkable year, with more taxation and deficits.

I notice Mr. Fisher, in passing through Sydney, has left me a little political note of good will," said Mr. Cook, "and I would like to reply to it. Mr. Fisher says Mr. Holman is going to help him very greatly. I cannot say I am sorry, because I take it the two are going to combine their interests. It is fair to assume they are in general agreement concerning policy and the objectives they have in view. I wonder if Mr. Fisher is going to do what Mr. Holman has done should he be returned. During the last year you have had an increase of a million pounds in your revenue. I wonder where the working man comes in in all this taxation? He has to pay a penny extra on the trams when he goes out on Sunday and more when he takes his wife and family. When he goes to get his wages he finds he has twopence to pay on his receipt. The other taxes, such as income tax, in the case of companies, are put on the price of the goods that the companies sell.

WHAT IT MEANS.

"A million extra in taxation means nearly 10s a head and for each family of five it reaches about 45s per annum on the average. Put on the top of all the other taxation, it works out this way:—Federal taxation, £3 13s per head; State taxation, £1 11s 4d; Local Government taxation, 18s 11d; making a total of £6 3s 11d per head. For a family of five this averages about £31 per annum, or 12s per week for the ordinary man to pay in taxation. If this is what Mr. Fisher is going to make his appeal upon, I wish him good luck and great joy. It will be a pleasure to me to have both Mr. Holman and Mr. Fisher together tied to this continual policy of additional taxation. I promise we will show the people what the Labour regime is doing in the Federal and State spheres, and then, if the working man likes to keep the Labour party tight round his neck like an old man of the sea, if he plumps for Mr. Holman or Mr. Fisher he is in for another stiff dose of taxation."

OTHER STATEMENTS.

Mr. Cook traversed other statements of Mr. Fisher, who, he said, had quoted Mr. Mauger as saying: "We (the Liberals) are as good as the Labour party." If Mr. Mauger said that he was very foolish. It was not very complimentary to him (the Prime Minister). He hoped he was a little better than the Labour party men. (Applause.) For labour itself, he hoped no Liberal would have anything but the highest and best respect. There could never be any quarrel between Labour and Liberalism as such. There was room in the folds of Liberalism for all phases of labour. The quarrel commenced when this precious party trading on the name of labour did nothing to help its best interests forward. Such a statement was a slander on Liberalism, which was much better than the Labour party.

LABOUR AND COMBINES.

Mr. Fisher makes apology for their defeat last time," said Mr. Cook; "no, not an apology, but an explanation. The big interests were against them because they had been hit. Are we to infer Mr. Fisher is hoping to get them behind him on this occasion? I wonder how he hit the banking interests of Australia. All of them have been making increasingly big dividends during the whole time the Labour party was in office. Mr. Fisher boasts of his national bank. What has it done? While the other banks are making excellent dividends, this bank is in debt to the tune of £45,000. A very curious thing is happening in connection with that bank. Mr. Miller has been constituted a sort of czar, and when asked the other day if he was assisting a big Broken Hill company, he declined to furnish any information. You have the spectacle of this bank setting out to help the [illegible] by putting its credit behind these [illegible], financing them, while ordinary [illegible] and farmers must go and pay [illegible] cent. higher for the little [illegible] LABOUR RULE.

Mr. [illegible] and support of [illegible] and their merry [illegible] highest com[illegible] Mr. Co[illegible] went on [illegible] bine. [illegible] com[illegible] ference, [illegible] crease in freights. The two great men in this combine were Senator Guthrie and Mr. Hughes, and it was about as beautiful a combine. Did they hit the land-owner? Last year the revenue from this source was £200,000 higher than on the previous year. That was the way they were bursting up big estates. The lack of settlement was one of the ugliest features they had to face, while the secondary industries were multiplying greatly.

PREPARING FOR THE FRAY.

According to the general secretary of the executive of the P.L.L., Mr. J. Grant, the Labour campaign in New South Wales will be in full swing in the course of a week or so. Already tours have been mapped out for a considerable number of speakers, including Messrs. Fisher, Hughes, King O'Malley, Thomas, and the six Senate candidates.

Mr. Fisher is to open at Inverell on the 13th, be at Moree on 14th, Glen Innes on 15th. A little later he will speak at Sydney, and then in the Illawarra electorate.

Mr. King O'Malley will speak at Narrabri on Monday. Then he goes on to Gunnedah, Singleton, Blayney, Cootamundra, Narrandera, and Wagga in that order.

Mr. Josiah Thomas is fixed for Kiama on 11th, Orange 13th, Molong 14th, Chatswood 15th, Granville 16th, Lithgow 17th, and Portland 18th.

Mr. Hughes will open at the Record Reign Hall, Glebe, on Tuesday. His subsequent engagements are Hurstville 9th, Melbourne 13th, Adelaide 15th. Following this he will visit other Victorian centres, and then take up again work in his own electorate.

Senator McDougall will tour Riverina to begin with, opening at Hay on Monday. Senator Rae will open at Werris Creek on Thursday, and spend 14 days in the north, speaking with Mr. Fisher at Inverell and Moree.

The North Sydney campaign will be opened on 11th, and the Parkes campaign on Monday next.

Mr. Holman has promised to speak as often as circumstances will allow. His fixtures have yet to be arranged.

THE SENATE.

Mr. COEN'S CAMPAIGN.

Mr. Frank Coen, one of the selected Liberal candidates for the Senate, opened his campaign at Yass last night. After dealing with the circumstances leading up to the double dissolution, and justifying the course taken by the Cook Administration, Mr. Coen said that if it had been intended that the Senate should have extreme powers as a revision chamber, the smallest State would never have been granted equal representation with the largest. While the spirit of the Constitution clearly indicated that the powers of the Senate as a revision chamber were limited to a safeguarding of the interests of the States, unfortunately the letter of the Constitution was silent on the point. The way out of the difficulty, to his mind, was to amend the Constitution in the direction of providing that the rejection powers of the Senate should be limited when that House was called on to revise bills, the provisions of which, from their very nature, could in no way infringe on the rights of one or more of the States. The amendment would simply mean incorporating the spirit into the letter of the Constitution.

The effective occupation and settlement of the Northern Territory was perhaps the most pressing of our national problems. "Set as we are in these eastern seas, but six days' sail from the restless East, where swarm myriads of people differing from us in race, religion, colour, and civilisation, it is imperative—if we intend to hold the Territory—imperative for us to make provision for its adequate defence. At the present time the defence of the Territory is the paramount consideration, but it is not the only consideration. We shall be in a better position to defend that broad expanse of country if it is effectively occupied; effective occupation can only be secured by the development of natural resources, and so the Federal Government must consider the best means of developing the resources and settling the vast areas of this troublesome heritage."

Referring to electoral reform, the candidate said he was in favour of the absentee vote and postal voting. He also favoured preferential voting, so that the people of the Commonwealth would be free to exercise their political choice unfettered by the restriction of party selection.

Closely allied with the questions of defence and commercial enterpirse was the question of a uniform gauge for the railways of the Commonwealth. This was a national necessity, and he rejoiced that the Prime Minister had delivered an ultimatum to the States that unless they came to an arrangement very speedily he would take effective steps to settle the question once and for all.

WERRIWA.

MR. CONROY'S CANDIDATURE.

The selected Liberal candidate for Werriwa (Mr. Conroy, M.P.) opened his campaign at Goulburn last night.

He said that a reduction of the cost of living could not be obtained except by a reduction of the tariff. The cost of living the Labour party threatened to increase by raising the tariff, thus enabling trusts and combines to create further artificial scarcity, and again raise prices. The present system tended to foster industrial growth in cities in some lines at the expense of growth in other lines, and undoubtedly at the expense of the agricultural, mining, and pastoral workers of the Commonwealth.

Referring to defence, he said that the Commonwealth must act in conjunction with Great Britain, whose naval power alone enabled us to adopt a policy of a White Australia. "We cannot hope to compete on land with the armed numbers of other nations once landed here, and the militarism adopted by the Labour party, while placing an enormous burden upon the workers of Australia, is unnecessary, and hinders the adoption of a thoroughly sound system. Our original cadet and volunteer system, with a body of trained officers, would, with a little improvement, have provided the only secondary defence needed, without the conscription of boys between the ages of 14 and 18. The forced training of these boys ought to be abandoned without delay, and the age raised to 18 years."

Taxation upon landed estates under the present Act was inequitable, and required adjustment. The fact that only a few electors now suffered should not blind the people to the unfairness of a system.

While the Constitution remained a Federal one he was not desirous of seeking further powers of unification for the Federal Parliament. Already the evils and delays of centralisation were seriously hampering many of the services, and the Commonwealth must first learn to properly carry out the services under its control before seeking to obtain further powers.

He advocated a system of proportional representation for the election of senators. The present Electoral Act was another instance of legislative bungling by the Labour party, and required immediate amendment. All attempts to amend the Act were blocked by the Labour party in the last Parliament, and yet it was complaining because difficulties were in existence which could have been avoided. An extension of the period of election for the House of Representatives from three to four or five years was worthy of consideration.

Great care should be taken lest national irrigation works become a burden instead of a gain to the community. The absence of snow-fed rivers rendered the task a very costly one, and quite different from the task of other countries.

The increase in the price of meat was primarily due, not to trusts, but to its relative scarcity. Moreover, the enormous extra cost of distribution had greatly affected the local consumer. The action of the Labour party in asserting otherwise was a proof either of want of knowledge or a cunning attempt to catch votes by false pretences. The cause was therefore mainly quite outside the domain of legislation, and he was not in favour merely to catch votes of pretending that Parliament could overturn economic laws. He admitted they could shift the burden, but almost always to the injury of the country. The Labour party, by legislating against outside capital had prevented competition against the local capitalist, thereby increasing the rate of interest for all borrowers, and enormously benefiting the wealthy citizens at the expense of the poorer citizens. The aim of all Liberal legislation should be to obtain for all freedom of conscience, speech, and act while preserving the equal freedom of other citizens.

MOVEMENTS OF MINISTERS.

The Prime Minister will attend a display of physical training by the employees of Messrs. John Bridge and Co. on Monday. The Hon. Minister Assisting in Home Affairs, Mr. Kelly, M.P., arrived in Sydney from Melbourne yesterday. He will spend a few days in his electorate organising.

VICTORIAN MINISTERS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Premier, Sir Alexander Peacock, said to-day that he and his colleagues would take part in the Federal election campaign, and render every assistance possible in securing the return of the Liberal candidates.

SPORT ABROAD.

LAWN TENNIS.

WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIPS.

LONDON, July 3.

DOUBLES CHAMPIONSHIP.

N. E. Brookes and A. F. Wilding (Australasia) defeated S. N. Doust (Sydney) and T. M. Mavrogordato, 6-1, 6-2, 3-6, 6-4, in the semi-final.

In the final match, Brookes and Wilding defeated the brothers A. H. and F. Gordon Lowe, 6-2, 8-6, 6-1.

LADIES' SINGLES FINAL.

COMMENTS ON THE PLAY.

The heat yesterday was tempered with a cool breeze. There was again a large crowd present, including Mr. A. J. Balfour and Lord Methuen.

In the semi-final match between Brookes and Wilding and Doust and Mavrogordato, Doust made many mistakes, especially in lobbing; which he varied with faulty volleying. He improved in the third set, in which he poached bravely and brought off many dazzling volleys against the lowest shots; but Brookes and Wilding had apparently slackened in their play.

In the final match against the brothers Lowe, Brookes and Wilding had a fairly easy passage. The Englishmen drove too squarely, and lost many points by not using cross shots. Gordon Lowe, however, drove finely, and scarcely missed a volley; but A. H. Lowe's service was weak.

Wilding and Brookes proved themselves to be not an ideal pair, owing to Brookes being a left-hander. A ball in the centre of the court often left the couple in doubt as to who should take it on the forehand. Doust attacked this weakness yesterday. Wilding's play was tactically unsound, and he often forced Brookes out of position. Dixon and Roper Barrett are expected to attack these weaknesses in the challenge round. Brookes yesterday made 65 winning strokes, and 45 losing ones, as against Wilding's 50 and 36 respectively.

[N. E. Brookes, who has played through the tournament, will meet A. F. Wilding in the challenge round of the singles. By reason of his holding the title, Wilding was not called upon to take part in the preliminary rounds, which is a great advantage, as in order to retain his title he has to win only one match. Wilding is much better fitted, physically, than Brookes, to play a strenuous match, but the famous Victorian may rise superior to himself, as there is no doubt about his ability.

However, Brookes and Wilding will be comrades in an endeavour to wrest the doubles championship from H. Roper Barrett and C. P. Dixon. So that whatever the result, the Australasian Davis Cup representatives have performed with marked distinction in the two most important events in the world's championship tournament.

Mrs. Larcombe will meet Mrs. Lambert Chambers in the challenge round of the ladies' singles.]

AMERICAN SUCCESSES.

LONDON, July 2.

The Henley-on-Thames regatta was continued to-day with the preliminary heats of the various events.

HENLEY GRAND CHALLENGE CUP.

The first three heats of the Henley Grand Challenge Cup were won by American crews.

The first heat, in which Harvard University (U.S.A.) defeated Leander, was splendidly contested. The crews were practically level until near the winning post, when Harvard spurted and won by a length in 7m 27s.

In the fourth heat Mayence (France) beat Jesus College by three-quarters of a length, after a hard race. The crews kept together for a mile; then Mayence went ahead and won in 7m 22s.

Gollan was unable to strike fast enough, but he sculled powerfully and consistently, and he made a plucky spurt at the finish.

The "Daily Telegraph" states that Stewart marred his victory by using his lead to give his wash to Gollan, as M'Villy did to his opponent last year.

Last year six eights competed for the Grand Challenge Cup, Leander defeating Jesus College, Cambridge, by one length, in 7m 11s. The Argonaut Club (Toronto) was the only foreign crew to compete.

NEWMARKET FIRST JULY MEETING.

THE CURRAGH WINS PRINCESS OF WALES' STAKES.

LONDON, July 2.

At the First Newmarket July Meeting to-day, the race for the principal event on the card resulted as under:—

PRINCESS OF WALES' STAKES, of 2000 sovs added to a sweepstakes of 30 sovs each for starters; the owner of the second horse to receive 200 sovs; the owner of the third 200 sovs, the nominator of the winner 300 sovs, and the nominator of the second 200 sovs out of the stakes; for three and four year olds; three years old to carry 8st 8lb, and four year olds 9st 6lb. 1½m.

Lord Cadogan's b h The Curragh, by Spearmint—Currajong, 4yrs 1

Mr. W. Hall-Walker's b c White Prophet, by White Eagle—Sand Blast, 3yrs 3

The Princess of Wales' Stakes attracted 173 entries, and the entrants included the Derby favourite Kennymore, Stornoway, Hapsburg, Cantilever, and Sun Yat. The result of the race emphasises the value of the Carbine blood in England, inasmuch as first and second honours were secured by sons of the famous New Zealander. The Curragh, whose dam, Currajong, is by St. Frusquin (son of St. Simon), from Hellas, by Amphion from Blavatsky, by Isonomy, did not earn a winning bracket out of three starts as a two-year-old, but last season he lost his maiden certificate by capturing the Dee Stakes, worth £444, at the Chester May meeting; while during the current season he ran second to Junior in the Manchester Cup, and won the Great Jubilee Handicap at Kempton Park. His success in the Princess of Wales' Stakes stamps him as one of the best horses of the season. Brakespear, who carried the livery of King George, was bred by his owner, and his dam, Guinea Hen, is by Gallinule from Nightmare, by Childeric from Ante Diem, by Musket, consequently he has the double strain of the Musket blood. Brakespear scored a couple of wins last season—in the Chesterfield Stakes at the Newmarket July Meeting, and the Prince of Wales' Stakes at the Goodwood July Meeting. White Prophet, who ran third, is by White Eagle from Sand Blast, by Sheen from Sahara, by Galliard, and was bred by his owner. He carried silk four times last season without troubling the judge.

BOXING.

THE WELLS-BELL BOUT.

The "Daily Mail" this morning publishes a report disclosing wonderful pluck and heroism on the part of Colin Bell, the Australian boxer, who recently suffered defeat at the hands of Bombardier Wells.

The paper states that after an attack of neuritis in his ear Bell was operated on by Dr. Franklin, a specialist, and his agonies had to be deadened by the injection of cocaine in orded to enable him to meet Wells. Bell also had an affection of the nose, which prevented him from breathing properly.

Dr. Franklin, who witnessed the match, declared that it was a miracle that Bell was able to enter the ring at all.

CARPENTIER AND JOHNSON.

LONDON, July 3.

Georges Carpentier, writing in the "Daily Chronicle," states:—"Gunboat Smith is very strong, and hits very hard, but I am doubtful if he can touch me, as he is much less quick than I am.

"I intend afterwards to meet Jack Johnson for the championship of the world. Johnson tried his uttermost against Moran, but he is no longer the man he was at Reno, and is unable to employ his science through lack of wind. He was marvellous in defence, but his blows lacked force and precision. A layer of fat took much of the quickness out of him. Perhaps his training had not been severe enough. At his best, Johnson would have knocked out Moran in less than 10 rounds."

FOOTBALL.

RUGBY LEAGUE TESTS.

LONDON, July 2.

Enormous interest is being taken in Lancashire and Yorkshire in regard to the third Rugby League test between Australia and England, at Sydney, on Saturday.

Mr. J. Platt, president of the English Northern Rugby Union, sends the team the following message:—

"We confidently anticipate that the best traditions of Northern Union football will be upheld by you. We hope that you will expend every atom of energy and skill you possess to secure victory; failing which, we hope you will lose like sportsmen."

ULSTER.

MR. GRIFFITH'S REPLY TO ANGLICANS.

CHURCH APPEAL ATTACKED.

Mr. Griffith, Minister for Works, yesterday said he challenged the Primate's allegations regarding the coercion of Ulster.

"As an Irishman and an Anglican," said Mr. Griffith, "I very much resent the action of the dignitaries of the Anglican Church in this State in endeavouring to drag the Church into the maelstrom of party politics on the question of Home Rule for Ireland. In the manifesto published to-day these gentlemen make three allegations, each of which I consider to be without any sort of justification. The first is that the establishment of Home Rule in Ireland means the imperilling of the civil and religious liberty of the population of a portion of that country. Secondly, that its passage means civil war and bloodshed; and, thirdly, that the British Government has done wrong in passing a law granting to the people of Ireland the rights of self-government so long enjoyed by Australia and other portions of the Empire.

"As a Protestant, I have a right to ask our Archbishop what is his justification for the statement that the granting of Home Rule to Ireland will imperil the civil and religious liberty of anybody. Is not his Grace aware that the Irish Constitution contains complete and ample safeguards against any such possibility? But even if it did not, do the Roman Catholic countries to-day—France, Austria, Belgium—persecute the Protestant minorities? Has the vast Roman Catholic majority in Quebec (where, out of 2,000,000 people, 1,425,000 are Roman Catholics)) interfered with the civil and religious liberty of the Protestant minority? His Grace must surely forget that we are to-day in the twentieth century. I might tell his Grace that in the Midland Counties of Ireland, where I was born, there is nothing but the kindliest feeling between both the clergy and laity of the two Churches.

"With regard to the second statement that the passage of Home Rule means civil war and bloodshed. This can only come about if the Orangemen of Ulster (who have for centuries traded on their loyalty) are prepared to fire upon the flag and enter into armed rebellion against the laws of their King and country. Also, I feel I have a right to ask these Church dignitaries on what ground they maintain that the British Government has done wrong in giving effect to the definite mandate of the people of the British Isles, as constitutionally expressed through the Parliament of their country?

"I would add that I cannot recall any instance in the history of the Anglican Church where it has come out flat-footed on the side of 'sedition, privy conspiracy, and rebellion'—unless we consider it identified with the action of its leaders in the Southern States of America in encouraging the slaveholders to plunge their nation in bloodshed in support of the right of one man to enslave his fellow.

"In conclusion, though I do not wish to use expressions likely to hurt the feelings of a body of gentlemen for whom, speaking generally, I have the most sincere respect, yet I feel compelled to say that the action of the signatories of the manifesto, in using the name of the Redeemer of Mankind in support of the political attitude of the Tory party in the British Parliament, and their dupes in Belfast, constitutes, to my mind, a perilously near approach to blasphemy in its crudest form."

The Rev. E. Digges La Touche supplies the following additional signatories to the "Protest of the Sydney clergy against the coercion of Ulster":—A. C. Corlette; Thos. J. Heffernan, H. T. Holliday, Norman Jenkyn, H. Wallace Mort, M.A. W. Newmarch (Rural Deans), W. R. Bowers, H. M. A. Pearce, J. Poole, R K Robnson, C T. L. Yarrington.

WANTS TO GET SMALLPOX.

PROMISED RAILWAYS PUT OFF.

Mr. Griffith, who has publicly claimed to be the lineal administrative descendent of Mr. E. W. O'Sullivan, is perturbed over the slowing-down policy with regard to new railways enunciated by the Premier in his pre-sessional speech.

The Minister for Works was asked yesterday how the decision of the Government to subordinate new construction to duplication would affect his railway and tramway policy?

The Minister replied that the word "affect" hardly expressed the position. "Paralyse" more nearly described it, he said, with a smile. He added:—"It means that for the next two years all the lines I have been investigating, promising, and legislating about must remain in abeyance entirely, as no new lines can be commenced until the back of the duplication work is broken. This, though sure to prove an unpopular decision with a large number of members of the House, is absolutely inevitable.

"The present congestion," said Mr. Griffith, "would go on getting worse until chaos resulted, unless some heroic methods are adopted to duplicate the lines. This is one of those cases in which a Government has deliberately to take a course which it knows to be unpopular, because it is wise and necessary. Personally, I am hoping that a motor accident or an attack of smallpox, or something that would justify my being absent from the House for a month or two, will overtake me before Tuesday, when Parliament opens. I don't know how I am to meet the reproaches of my friends and enemies in the House to whom I had promised these works before the present decision was arrived at."

CRICKET.

TEAM FOR SOUTH AFRICA.

THE ACCEPTORS.

The following players have decided to become members of the Australian team to tour South Africa in October next:—W. W. Armstrong (Vic.), capt.; W. Bardsley (N.S.W.), vice-capt.; W. Carkeek (Vic), C. Kelleway (N.S.W.), J. Ryder (Vic.), T. J. E. Andrews (N.S.W.), R. L. Park (Vic.).

Messrs. Armstrong, Carkeek, Ryder, Park, Bardsley, Kelleway, and Andrews have informed the Australian Board of Control of their acceptance of the invitation, but nothing definite has come to hand from Adelaide concerning the South Australian players who have been invited to make the tour.

HAZLITT'S SUCCESSOR.

As published in the "Herald" of June 22, G. R. Hazlitt does not intend making the trip, and a player will have to be selected in his place. Two good all-rounders in B. J. Folkard—whose bowling should prove successful on the matting wickets of South Africa—and H. L. Collins, who bats right hand and bowls left, should have an excellent chance of being selected. Collins is the better fieldsman.

BARING AND MACARTNEY.

Last night C. G. Macartney stated that he had not yet decided to make the trip. Word was also received from Melbourne to the effect that F. Baring's reply to the Board of Control would depend upon business arrangements yet to be made.

WESTERN AUSTRALIAN DELEGATE APPOINTED.

Mr. John Rushton, hon. secretary of the Western Australian Cricket Association, has been appointed as that body's delegate to the Australian Board of Cricket Control. Mr. Rushton will thus be the first delegate from the west to sit on the board.

TAXES IN TASMANIA.

HOBART, Friday.

The State Treasurer, Mr. Lyons, indicated to-day that the Government intends to put an extra penny on sweep tickets, which will yield an additional £12,000 per year, and to impose taxation on motor cars. The revenue from the latter tax would be specially earmarked for the improvement of roads. The Ministry was also of opinion that the death duties did not yield as much as they should owing to evasions.

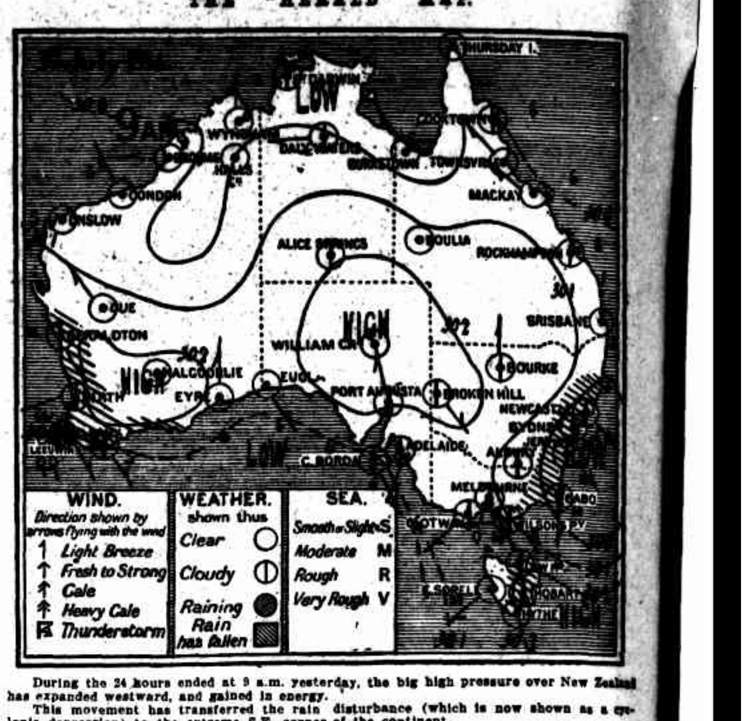
AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.



During the 24 hours ended at 9 a.m. yesterday, the big high pressure over New Zealand has expanded westward, and gained in energy.

This movement has transferred the rain disturbance (which is now shown as a cyclonic depression) to the extreme S.E. corner of the continent.

After being responsible for further light to heavy rains over eastern New South Wales, the distrubance appears to have lost much of its character and energy. The centre lies over the South Coast of New South Wales.

Over the rest of Southern Australia relatively high pressure dominates the weather, which is mostly fine.

In tropical parts of the continent morsoonal tendencies are still in evidence, but inactive at present.

The high over the mainland has two small centres, one in the far SW corner, and the other over South Australia, each 30.2 inches in barometric value.

The eastern high has a central value of 30.5 inches to the east of New Zealand.

Ocean Forecast.—Squally and rough between Sydney and Tasmania; squally also from the south-west of continent to the Bight. Smooth to moderate elsewhere.

CRUELTY TO STOCK.

The need for more humane methods in the transportation of live stock in New South Wales was dealt with at a public meeting held under the auspices of the newly-formed Association for the Relief of Travelling Stock, at the King's Hall, City, last night, when a protest was voiced against the cruelty of the present method of transit of stock by rail. Mr. F. E. Winchcombe, M.L.C., presided.

In moving the first resolution, Mr. O. Lindsay Thomson pointed out that in six months 1938 sheep and cattle arrived at the Flemington saleyards either dead or crippled to such an extent as to compel their removal to the boiling-down establishment. During the year 3,700,000 sheep and cattle were sent to Flemington by rail, and of these the dead and crippled numbered 3876. Meat killed in this fever, he mentioned was injurious. In his opinion the remedy lay in the establishment of slaughtering yards in country centres, under Government or municipal control. He moved:—That this public meeting, representative of all classes of the community, emphatically protests against the cruel treatment meted out, especially on the railways, to stock submitted for slaughter in this State; and that this resolution be forwarded to the Chief Commissioner for Railways and the Minister for Railways.

Mr. George Black, M.L.A., in seconding the motion, said he thought the object of the meeting had the support of practically all the members of Parliament. He made a plea for kinder treatment of our "woolly and inarticulate countryman, who supplies us with food and raiment." While the establishment of country slaughteryards was the ultimate remedy, that could not be brought about at once. In the meantime the journeys should be expedited by stock trains taking precedence over all except passenger trains, which would avoid much of the suffering caused by animals spending long periods in trucks. The chilling of animals in the country and sending their carcases to Sydney in cool storage would mean a saving of rolling stock. A thousand live sheep required 11 trucks, whereas if slaughtered first the carcases could be placed in two refrigerating cars, and the skins and tallow in two more cars, while by-products would not fill one car.

Mr. D. Levy, M.L.A., described the present day stock trucks as a disgrace to our civilisation. He did not know why the law against cruelty to animals was not enforced against the railway authorities. He would give his unswerving support to any proposal in Parliament to increase the penalties for offences of this kind.

Colonel Onslow, M.L.A., emphasised the need for caution as the question touched the food supply of Sydney. The Government and the Legislature should be sure that any legislation and administration decided upon should properly meet the case. He [illegible] that no reflection on the present railway administration could be too severe. As to the question of establishing country slaughterhouses and freezing works, and thereby decentralising the meat trade, this was to achieve the object of the meeting. But it must be remembered that every attempt to start any enterprise in this direction had resulted in failure. The first thing, he thought, should be to improve the railways. If the railways been in the hands of a private company the responsible authorities would have been prosecuted years ago for the cruelty to stock in the matter of transport. (Applause.)

Mr. G. Earp, M.L.C., referred to the work already made by the Animals' Protection Society to remedy matters.

The resolution was unanimously carried.

FINANCIAL.

THE AMERICAN BUSINESS MAN.

Most folk know that the business world is being rapidly Americanised, but there are few who have any very accurate knowledge of how it is being brought about. It may not, therefore, prove uninteresting to have an actual case described. Some years back an American landed upon our shores seeking for that health that he had lost through over-strenuous work in his own country. He liked what he saw, and not being a man of means immediately looked out for something to do. It was not long before he became a sort of departmental manager in a well-known Sydney distributing house. He had certain lines that he had to sell, and was also the advertising man, for all Americans are supposed to know the last word in publicity. No sooner had he settled down in his new position than he began Americanising those with whom he was brought into contact. The process was quite unconscious. No one would have been more surprised than he to have heard himself described as a propagandist of any particular business theory or practice. What he did was merely to carry on his business operations on lines that suggested themselves to him as sound in view of his early training in the States.

One of the first things that he found amiss in his new surroundings was the firm's catalogue, or "catalog," as he would have spelt it. It was certainly a poor production, judged even by our standards, with its sugar-bag paper and its absorbent ink. Nor was it any better in substance than in appearance. It was a mere price-list of the goods that the firm had for sale set out with no particular skill or arrangement. In short, it was just the kind of thing that the average man on receiving one through the post would promptly consign, unopened, to the waste-paper basket. It was here that the Americanisation process began. The firm must have a much better catalogue than that. "This here outfit is not worth a row of pins," so our American friend was heard to remark as he surveyed one of the latest issues with scarcely veiled contempt. But how to do better? The firm was not accustomed to spend much on advertising. It had never learnt to realise the value of a judicious publicity campaign. So to apply for a largely increased appropriation would have been merely to court a refusal. No! The customers must pay. So the man from Massachusetts straight away purchased a set of the best American magazines and with the assistance of these and a pastepot he made a "dummy" magazine of his own. It was not quite as pretentious as one or two of the highest class publications of this kind issued from the American press, but it did not fall far short. He carved out some spaces for advertisements and allowed some space for letter-press and illustrations. There were to be some informing articles, some short stories, a serial, a page for music, and so on, with advertisements front and back printed in many colours. One feature was that the advertising pages were to be as attractive as the other part. Then he prepared a list of the people from whom the firm purchased the goods wholesale that it afterwards distributed. If the firm bought soap to the value of say £10,000 a year from a soap manufacturer, that same manufacturer could scarcely refuse to take a page advertisement at £5 a page in the firm's magazine-catalogue. Upon this idea rested the financial basis of the scheme. Nor was he disappointed in his expectations. The advertisements came in quite as freely as he had reckoned on.

Next there was the printing to be seen to. Tenders were called for, and a wide variety of estimates was received. Those who quoted highest guaranteed that their work would be of a correspondingly high order of merit; but our American friend was no expert printer. He really did not know "the stone" from "the cage," the "father of the chapel" from the "printer's devil." He wanted the best, but did not desire to pay excessively for it. So he gave the order to a firm of printers who were not in too big a way of business, lest in the multiplicity of their affairs he might be neglected, but not so small as to admit his running any risk as to their ability to carry out their contract. Meanwhile he was learning that there were such things as long primer and brevier type, and "solid" and "leaded" pages of letterpress, and advertisements that were set up by hand composition and those that were printed from stereos. He found that he had to pay extra for making "author's corrections" at the rate of so much "per thousand ens." All this was new to him, but he was an apt learner. On his editorial side at first he was a little weak too. He did not know to whom to apply for "copy," but a few judicious inquiries put him wise in that regard. Then he found that it was just as easy to buy poor "copy" as good "copy." But at last all was ready, and the printers started. He soon found that something was radically wrong. The advertisements were not set up as they were in the American magazine. They were crude productions by comparison. So he stood behind the man at "the case" and gave him some lessons, not perhaps in the art of composition, but in taste. Then the letterpress did not look workmanlike either. Many of the pages had to be reset. The American was regarded as a veritable nuisance. The printer despaired of making salt out of the job, but was anxious to please. When the first issue was out its Editor-manager used language that lacked nothing in force, though it may scarcely have been polite. There was no comparison at all between his initial effort and the productions that he held up as types of what could and should be done. He was disgusted but determined. He would not be beaten.

But what was the matter? The printer on being shown some of the best printing America could produce smiled. "You are not paying for that kind of thing," he explained. "Look at this paper. Look at this ink. They are about the finest in the world." "Kan't they be got here?" the American inquired, and the printer shook his head. That day a cable was despatched to New York for a supply of the best ink and best magazine paper procurable, no matter what the cost. Then there were types that were imported, and typographical ornaments either made locally or obtained from abroad. All these things made a great difference to the appearance of the magazine, but it was still far from perfect. The ink was apt to show through the pages, the imposing was badly done, the colour blocks were printed out of register, "quads" stood up in a most trying way. "Why kan't you print me a block like that one?" said the American one day to his printer, as he showed him a beautiful reproduction that he had clipped out of the "Inland Printer." "Because I cannot get blocks made like that," was the reply. "Why not, sure?" urged the American. "Can't be done," retorted the printer.

After the man from Massachusetts got this information from the man from Woolloomooloo he hurried off to the process block engraver. "Kan't y' make a better block than that?" he said to the process man, as he showed him a print of one of his blocks in the magazine. "Better than that? If that is one of my blocks it is rottenly printed, that is all I can say," answered the process engraver. "Look at our proof book." He then showed his visitor a proof of the identical block pasted up in the proof book for reference. There had certainly been a great falling-off in the printing, 30 per cent. the block-man said. Back to the printer this information was conveyed. That put the printer on his mettle, and better results were obtained next time. More care was given than ever before in that establishment to the "make ready." Still the American magazines were far ahead. The process man said that it was because they used finer screens for the block-making. In the result finer screens were imported. This did something, and gradually the magazine approximated to the best American article. To-day that Printer and that Block-maker, if they were quite candid, would admit that the Americanisation of their businesses was the best thing that had ever happened to them, though the knife of the business doctor cut deep at the time.

STAMP DUTY PROBLEMS.

DUPLICATE RECEIPTS.

"Another Accountant" writes:—

Arising out of two letters published by you on Thursday as to the necessity of stamping all duplicates or copy receipts, doubtless many of your readers, like myself, would be glad to know whether there is any legal obligation to furnish a duplicate receipt at all.

No necessity whatsoever.

SCRIP CERTIFICATES.

"Radio" writes:—

Sir,—Re scrip certificates: There is still some misunderstanding re stamping scrip certificates. Is this procedure rendered unnecessary by the stamping of transfers? If not, who is liable for the stamp duty?

Some companies are stamping scrip certificates, others are not. The Commissioner says they ought to be stamped. The Courts alone can decide who is right. The stamp on the transfers has nothing to do with the matter. If anyone is liable the company is.

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

The oil market was fairly active. There was a strong distributing demand for linseed oil, and prices were firm. First brands of imported oil commanded 3/8 and 3/10 a gallon. The locally-produced oil, put up in drums, was worth the same price as imported makes. Meggitts, Ltd., of the Parramatta mills, reported that it had again been successful in securing the Victorian Government railways contract for the whole of their requirements of linseed oil. It is now five years since the Victorian railways commenced ordering large quantities of Australian oil, and the second year that they have drawn the whole of their supplies, amounting to 50,000 gallons per annum, from the Australian mill. Cablegrams from London indicated that Burrell and Co. were quoting 2/0½ a gallon, less 2½ per cent., usual terms. Stocks of oil in London on May 23 amounted to 10,050 tons, and those in Paris to 10,365 tons—the latter an increase of 300 tons as compared with the previous week's quantity. When the last mail left, the final Indian crop figures were coming to hand, from which it appeared that the total crop was likely to be about 150,000 tons less than last year. This was, of course, expected, but in view of the fact that India had already shipped, of old crop seed, some 60,000 tons more than last year, this shortage was discounted to some extent. Shipments from India that week amounted to 26,000qrs, as compared with 67,000qrs during the same week last year. It had to be remembered that the large and modern oil mills now working in India were doing very well, and were themselves supplying more and more of that country's requirements of oil, the great bulk of which had in the past been shipped from London. There was no change in whitelead on spot. Stocks continued small, and it was impossible to buy under the published quotations. Burrell's whitelead was offered by cable at £28 a ton, less 5 per cent., usual terms.

The position of bran bags appears to be daily getting more hopeless. Yesterday holders generally were willing to do business at 4/10½ net to rails, although during the afternoon a parcel of 25 bales was offered at 4/9 net delivered. The nominal quotation for supplies ex Itonus, due next week, was 4/9 slings, but buyers refused to discuss business on such terms. The cornsack market on the other hand is improving. Season's delivery was not to be secured under 6/6½ net to rails. Spot supplies were variously quoted at from 6/6½ to 6/9. The cablegrams from Calcutta showed that that market was steady. Cornsacks were worth 6/3¼ c.i.f., and bran bags 4/6½ c.i.f. for October to March shipments.

Eastern produce moved out freely at about previous levels. Pearl barley continued to attract attention. Packed in 56lb bags, it realised 15/6, but in cwt sacks it was to be had at 15/3 per cwt. There was a brisk inquiry for rice. Locally dressed brought from £19/5/ to £21/5/ a ton. The usual winter demand for oatmeals was in evidence, and merchants had no difficulty in maintaining values.

Copra was dull. The nominal quotation was £20 a ton f.o.b. export steamer for sundried in bags.

CUSTOMS DECISIONS.

AGE CERTIFICATES FOR IMPORTED SPIRITS.

BREADSTUFFS.

A STEADY MARKET.

The local wheat market was again quiet and unchanged yesterday. A few parcels were offering, and an occasional sale was reported at from 3/10 to 3/10½ alongside. Farmers' lots were worth from 3/4½ to 3/5 a bushel in the country. Private cablegrams from London showed that that market was somewhat firmer with a sharp advance in Liverpool options.

There was an average demand for flour at £9. Bran and pollard were quiet at £5/5/ a ton.

At Darling Harbour yesterday 2236 tons of wheat and 144 tons of flour were manifested to arrive.

There is little change in the local wheat market. The continued dry weather has made farmers reluctant to part with their wheat, despite the reports of easier oversea rates. The price is nominally on a basis of 3/9 per bushel on trucks Port Adelaide for farmers' lots. There is still a good demand for all lines of feedstuffs. Large consignments of chaff have been forwarded to the northern country at free rates. Although there is at present no export business for Algerian oats, there is a brisk local trade, mostly for the back country, at 2/3 per bushel on trucks, Port Adelaide.

BRADFORD TOPS.

There is but little business passing in the Bradford tops market, although there is a fair inquiry. Merino crossbreds are slow, and prices are without change, as follows:—64's, /21½; super 60's, /30; common 60's, /29½; 56's, /24; 50's, /21; 46's, /17; 40's, /16½.

Some New South Wales brands are offering: salted at from 102/ to 106/, and unsalted at from 104/ to 108/ per cwt. New Zealand is very scarce, and is nominally unchanged. The English market closed steadier, and Indian grain is held from 3d more.

ANIMATION IN EGGS.

Trade in all lines was decidedly more brisk on Friday, all lines showing renewed activity.

The reason was apparent to the most casual observer. Instead of a gray curtain of falling rain obscuring the outlook from every store, and depressing everyone, buyers and sellers alike, bright sunshine filled the street, warmed the air, and had a wonderfully cheering influence on all concerned. On the other hand, the break in the weather had not yet had its effect on the supplies, and only light consignments were to hand, resulting in a general firmer tone in values all round.

Eggs were especially active. New-laids were scarce and inquiries frequent, and agents expressed themselves as hard put to it to meet demand. Consequently, the price of 1/7 that was mentioned in Thursday's market report, was on Friday the ruling figure, and of such general acceptance that it must now take its place in the quotes. River lots were also up, 1/4 being the value of such consignments, while railways were hard on the heels of the new-laid article. The scarcity was more marked in the other two lines, as the rains had made the roads in many parts of the country virtually impassable. But, despite this, renewed activity, it must be borne in mind that, should the fine weather last, an easing in values is almost certain to result, and agents generally on Friday looked forward to a plentiful supply by Monday or Tuesday, though more foul weather will keep eggs scarce.

Honey was selling briskly when of good, clear quality, and demand continues to outpace supply.

Bacon was firmer. The fall in prices that was talked of last week has not taken place, and indications on Friday were that it was still a good way off.

Other lines showed animation, but no changes in price were made.

PRICE OF COPPER BETTER.

BARRIERS AND COPPER STOCKS FIRMER.

MOVEMENT IN HAMPDENS.

According to the cabled "middle" quotations of the London Stock Exchange to hand yesterday morning, the home market was in a slightly better humour on Wednesday for Australian copper and silver propositions. The cable message also announced that the price of copper had improved 32/6, to £61/12/6 per ton.

Whilst this information was calculated to strengthen the tone of the local market—and it did in the case of Barriers—the big forward movement in Hampden-Cloncurry was totally unconnected with the small recovery in the price of copper.

An analysis of the "middle" quotations on Wednesday shows that the following stocks were firmer to the extent mentioned, namely—Briseis, /1½; Zinc Corporation (pref.), 1/3; Broken Hill Proprietary, /6; Mount Elliotts, 1/3; Hampdens, /9; Golden Horseshoes, /9; Great Boulders, /1½; and Amalgamated Zinc, /3. The stocks that were steady included Zinc Corporation (ord.), Great Cobars, Chaffer's, and Lake View and Star; whilst Mount Morgans were quoted /6 easier, and Mount Lyells a fraction lower.

The chief movement took place in Hampden-Cloncurry, sales being booked at 28/9, 29/, and 28/10, as compared with the previous day's closing sale at 28/3. The strong demand for the scrip was said to be due to buying orders from Friezland, the nearest telegraph office to the mine, and it is said that this was due to good developments at the bottom level of the Duchess mine. It must also be borne in mind that the smelting operations of the last four months show an improvement in the quality of the ore sent to the smelters.

During March 5302 tons of ore produced 538 tons of fine copper, the value of the ore being a shade over 11 per cent. Next month the copper content of 5278 tons of ore receded to 9.92 per cent., but next month (May) the tonnage rose from 5278 to 6236 tons, whilst the quality of the ore improved to 10.29 per cent. The output of the red metal also rose from 524 to 651 tons. The June record showed that the quality of the ore smelted increased from 10.29 per cent. to 11.49 per cent., but the output of copper—627 tons—was 27 tons less than the record for May, which is not accounted for by the slightly smaller tonnage of ore treated. Anyhow, supporters of the mine on the field appear to have a good opinion of the developments taking place in the Duchess. The movement in the shares was not relished by those operators who have gone "short" on the stock.

A better feeling existed for Barriers, and holders of British Broken Hill (old), Broken Hill Souths (paid), likewise the contributing scrip, had no cause to complain of the prices booked. The result was a sympathetic hardening (very slight, it is true) of other Barriers. New Burragorang again commanded steady support, and sales were booked on the firm side.

The tin section took a back seat. Indeed, the lid appeared to be partially closed down on tin propositions. A time sale was booked in Tongkah Harbour at a steady figure, whilst firm offers were made for ordinary delivery. Tongkah Compound were also solidly held, whilst Vegetable Creek changed hands at a steady figure. The Ardlethan group was inactive, with sellers steady.

In the gold division, Great Southern Consols repeated the previous day's easy sale, but Edna May sold firmly at 75/4½.

In the afternoon, Mount Morgans were again firmly supported at a solid figure. The figures for June, published in another portion of this issue, show that the value of the output was £4199 less than that for May. This is explained by the fact that the amount of ore treated was 1778 tons less than during May. This, in turn, is officially explained by the statement that the "change over" from the old to the new plant caused a reduction in the last four weeks' output, and will probably similarly affect the returns for the current four weeks. It is satisfactory to be able to say that the quality of the ore treated in the past month shows no falling off in either the copper or gold contents. With the new furnaces and concentrating plant in full and effective working order, a marked improvement in the monthly outputs may be expected.

Hampdens eased a shade towards the close of the day, but New Burragorang were well supported; whilst business on sound lines was booked in Briseis Tin, Vegetable Creek Tin, and Carpathias, but Katoo Deebook failed to sustain the previous sale price.

MINING NOTES.

Operations at the Junction North Broken Hill mine during the fortnight ended June 27 are officially recorded as follows:—"Surface: The winze from the surface to 450ft level advanced to 245½ft. No. 4 level: The 4/23 rise to meet the surface winze advanced to 71ft."

The manager of Mount Ross Diamond and Tin Mine, Copeton, reports having washed 16 loads for 52 carats of diamonds, the stones being very good samples, and taken from the eastern run, to which he has now completed a road from the "deep" shaft.

In a run of 122 hours during the fortnight ended June 27 the plant of Parker's Tin Sluicing Company treated 3775 cubic yards of material for 3 tons 16cwt 3qr 4lb of tin oxide. The plant is working well, and the water supply is fair. The time worked includes 64 hours' sluicing prior to closing down for want of water on May 2. The 6 hours' stoppage was due to shifting the nozzle, pipe columns, and other work. At the time of writing the report, June 27, the manager states it was raining steadily, and the conditions were favourable for it continuing.

The latest report from the Central Tin Mining Company, Renison Bell (Tasmania), states that during the fortnight ended June 17 the mill ran 758 stamp-hours, and treated 140 tons of mine ore for 60cwt of tin oxide. The whole of the ore mined for the period came from the "E" workings. A rise has been put up from "Upper E" tunnel towards the surface for filling purposes. This work is now advanced to 25ft, and the manager anticipates holing through at 45ft. The intermediate drive, "E," has been advanced to 58ft, and is now suspended. The whole of the workings are now in a fair condition. Arrangements are being made whereby the item of fuel will be reduced.

For the week ended July 3 the dredges of the Araluen Redbank Company secured 79oz 2dwt of retorted gold.

MINING IN THE STATE.

DIRECT CYANIDING.

ORANGE, Friday.

A small but "financial" syndicate proposes to give the Cadia Hill mine a further trial. At present some samples are undergoing experiment in Sydney, and the proposition to further exploit the property will, to some degree, depend upon the results of these tests. The property is a low-grade proposition, the value of the ore being, on the average, about 10s per ton, but the previous proprietors of the ground were never able to make a payable extraction. The present applicants for the leases believe that with trituration in a special mill to the very finest proportions and cyanidation they will recover 80 per cent. of the contents at a cost of 5s per ton of ore treated.

MOUNT MORGAN COMPANY.

OUTPUT STILL LOWER.

THE CAUSE EXPLAINED.

Despite the fact that the copper content of the ore smelted last month by the Mount Morgan Gold-mining Company was slightly higher than that handled during May, namely, 2.77 per cent. as against 2.72 per cent—whilst the blister copper also carried more gold, nevertheless the value of the output for June—namely, £70,309—shows a decrease of £4199. This was largely due to the fact that the quantity of ore treated—23,630 tons—was 1778 tons less than that smelted during the preceding month of May, and this is explained in an official note.

	Ore. treated. Tons.	Copper. Tons.	Gold. Oz.
February 8	22,871	647	7,918
March 8	22,208	494	6,168
April 8	17,508	639	6,718
May 3	24,670	764	8,283
June 28	23,630	645	7,511

VALUE OF OUTPUT.

February 8 (copper at £60 per ton)	£72,139
March 8 (copper at £60 per ton)	61,171
April 8 (copper at £60 per ton)	66,609
May 3 (copper at £60 per ton)	77,095
June 28 (copper at £60 per ton)	70,309

Official Note.—The general manager advises that sections of the new plant being completed, one of the new furnaces is now in commission, he expects to blow in the second furnace during next week. The concentrating plant started a trial run on June 29. The change over from the old plant caused a reduction in the last four weeks' output, and will probably similarly affect the returns for the current four weeks.

OBJECTS OF MILLIONS CLUB.

The council of the Millions Club has framed the following list of objects, relating chiefly to advertising Australia, and to the promotion of immigration and the encouragement of defence:—

To actively support exhibitions abroad, particularly the Panama Exposition and the proposed Australian exhibition to be held at Earl's-court, London, in 1916, by assisting in securing exhibits, and in such other ways as may be indicated by the exhibition commissioners in each instance.

To assist in defence movements, and particularly to arrange for the enrolment of time-expired and other past-efficient members of various arms of the British forces, with a view to supplementing the universal training system.

To issue a monthly paper containing special information of value to immigrants and tourists, to be called "The Glad Hand," and to be distributed through the Colonial Offices in London, and also on all incoming steamers.

To use all influence on local representatives of the State Parliament to support the Minister for Works on his reintroduction of the Main Roads Bill, which will establish a central board of control of the main roads throughout the State, and to support the Good Roads' Association in their endeavours to effect an improvement in the maintenance and construction of the main roads.

To hold at some future date an ideal home exhibition, showing models of homes, labour-saving appliances, and more hygienic conditions of living.

The proposal of the president to prepare a special Millions Club exhibit, to be offered to the Panama Commission for the Australian Court at the San Francisco Fair, is being enthusiastically taken up. A competition is being promoted by the club for the best idea for an exhibit, the chief conditions being that it should be thoroughly Australian in character, represent our primary industries, and be so durable in make that it can be afterwards exhibited in London and various European centres. A prize of 20 guineas is offered by Mr. Rickard for the best idea sent in.

INDEPENDENCE DAY.

To-day is July the Fourth. To-day, 138 years ago, the American colonies proclaimed their independence, and to celebrate the anniversary the Star Spangled Banner will be much in evidence in all American communities to-day, and the enthusiasm customary to the great national holiday of the United States will be displayed. The usual reception at the American Consulate in Sydney will, however, not be held to-day, on account of the indisposition of the Consul-General. Several gatherings of Americans have been arranged for this afternoon and this evening.

SPORTING.

THE TURF.

Sydney sporting folk will be catered for this afternoon at Moorefield, while those that wish to go further afield will find an afternoon's sport at Wallsend. The V.R.C. Grand National Steeplechase meeting opens at Flemington; the Canning Park Racing Club provides an outing for Western Australian sporting folk, as does the Albion Park Jockey Club at Brisbane.

The Moorefield July reunion this afternoon furnishes what promises to be a pleasant outing for metropolitan racegoers, and the bill of fare framed for the occasion foreshadows interesting sport. The recent rainfall has made the going heavy, but the track is always sound. The transit arrangements include special trains starting from the Central Railway Station at 11.15 a.m. (horses and attendants), 12.25, 12.34, 12.48, 12.55, 1.6, and 1.13 p.m., while the ordinary service to Kogarah will also be available. Racing commences at 2.10 p.m. with the Hurdle Race, in which the places may be filled by Treacherous, Zoeholme, and Monsieur. Sweet Malt, La Fiancee, and Rymerhild read as well as anything in the Flying Handicap; and the places in the Kogarah Stakes may go to Goyason, Dinta, and Perilla. Fairy Lad, Kolapore, and Mount Mostyn may get home as named in the Juvenile Handicap; the situations in the Moorefield Handicap may be occupied by Matouree, Royal Time, and Former; while Nombi, Osterley, and Hobble Skirt may pass the judge as named at the close of the Welter Handicap.

The weather having cleared up sufficiently, the trainers got their charges out yesterday morning, and most of the regular attendants on the track did steady work, chiefly on the cinders. Among the horses that worked were Matouree, Volcore, Sir Vive, Grail, Vif, Hot Air, Nombi, Former, La Fiancee, Rymerhild, Tiffany, Balderodgery, Clubs, Mountain Blue, Secret Service, Alured, Feramorz, Irishman, Beragoon, Perilla, Idyia, Ulva's Isle, Burri, Simon Frisco, Lochano, Gigandra, Third Prize, Rubecula, Chiffonette, Trousseau, Challenge Crosse, Ravello, Best Scot, Master Penury, Winston, and several others.

Our Goulburn correspondent writes that the local racing club has decided to obtain by mortgage £2500, to enable it to purchase the course now leased from Mr. H. Baxter.

The pony and galloway meeting of the Rosebery Racing Club, postponed from Wednesday last, will take place on Monday next.

Up to 4 p.m. on Tuesday next the secretary, Mr. Geo. W. S. Rowe, will receive entries for the July meeting on the 18th inst. The prize-money totals 800 sovs, of which 150 sovs each goes to the Hurdle Race, Nursery Handicap, and Rosehill Handicap; 125 sovs each to the Flying Handicap and Carlingford Mile; and 100 sovs to the Granville Stakes.

Nominations close on Monday next, at 8 p.m., with the secretary, Mr. J. Grisdale, for the half-dozen items on the card for the July meeting of the Newcastle Jockey Club on the 11th inst. The added money amounts to 650 sovs, of which the Tramway Handicap and July Handicap absorb 125 sovs each, and the other events 100 sovs each.

The seven events on the programme for the Victoria Park Racing Club's meeting, on Wednesday next attracted 172 nominations.

The Victoria Park Racing Club has appointed Mr. J. B. Donohue as an additional stipendiary steward. Mr. Donohue has lately been acting in that capacity in Melbourne. He will commence his duties at Victoria Park on Wednesday next.

VICTORIA RACING CLUB.

ANTICIPATIONS.

The Grand National Steeplechase meeting of the Victoria Racing Club opens this afternoon at Flemington, and the bill of fare provided for the occasion holds forth promise of high-class sport, especially in connection with the races over obstacles. The programme will be run through as under:—Maiden Hurdle Race, 1.15 p.m.; Iramoo Welter, 2 p.m.; Grand National Hurdle Race, 2.45 p.m.; Maiden Steeplechase, 3.30 p.m; Myross Handicap, 4.5 p.m.; and Winter Handicap, 4.40 p.m.

Proceedings open with the Maiden Hurdle Race, in which Tardy, Porch, Lady Pistol, and Hollands should have most to say towards the finish, and the numbers may be hoisted for Porch, Lady Pistol, and Hollands.

Cairn Wallace, Wishing Cap, Golden Rock, and Sconser may have the settlement of the Iramoo Welter among them, and the places may go to Cairn Wallace, Sconser, and Golden Rock.

The field for the Grand National Hurdle Race will be half a dozen less than that of last year, but high-class performers have accepted for the event, and a great contest seems assured. Obi heads the list with 11st 13lb, and as he scored last year with only 6lb less in the saddle, he must be regarded as having a first-class chance. Arquebuse, who follows with a concession of 4lb, is in great heart, and with 11st 9lb, must be given a good look in; while with 11st 4lb Clontaft must be in it up to his bridle tips. Wingara should run well, and so should Wisconsin, Sir Prim, and Flash Jack; while Chess may be the best of the others. The brunt of the battle should fall to Obi, Arquebuse, Clontaft, Sir Prim, and Flash Jack, and the judge may declare for Clontaft, Arquebuse, and Obi.

Barfleur, Sonny B., Ballydarton, and Nolinga should figure prominently in the race for the Maiden Steeplechase, and the situations may go to Sonny B., Ballydarton, and Nolinga.

The Winter Handicap, which brings the afternoon's sport to a close, should bring about a good race, in which Sylvanmore, Hamburg Belle, Marcultus, and Border King should be about when the whips are cracking, and Hamburg Belle, Sylvanmore, and Marcultus may fill the situations.

POLO.

COUNTESS OF DUDLEY CUP.

THREE MATCHES TO-DAY.

The polo carnival, in which thirteen teams have entered to compete for the Cup presented by the Countess of Dudley, will commence, weather permitting, at the Kensington ground to-day. Rain interfered with the arrangements made by the New South Wales Polo Association, and not only was a postponement necessary, but the players have been unable to practice, and exercise the ponies. An inspection of the ground yesterday morning showed that the turf was very soft; but a heavy roller was in use, and if there is no further rain the playing areas should be in fairly good condition.

The first match between Muswellbrook A and Glen Innes will commence at 11.15; the second, between Sydney B and Muswellbrook B, will start at 1.15, and the third, when Narromine and Warren will meet, at 3.15 p.m. Special trams will run to the ground, in addition to the ordinary service.

COOMA, Friday.

The polo team with ponies left for Sydney to take part in the Dudley Cup competition. The players are Messrs. C. J. Crisp, H. Hepburn, N. Allen, and V. Allen.

COURSING.

In to-day's issue the New South Wales National Coursing Association advertise the conditions of the St. Leger meeting to be held at Woodstock enclosure, Rooty Hill, on Thursday and Friday July 9 and 10. The nominations are numerous, the Imperial Stakes being over-subscribed. Reports from Rooty Hill advise that the ground is in excellent condition, owing to the late rain, also that there is a good supply of well-trained hares. Given fine weather, the meeting promises to be most successful.

Nominators should not forget that dogs must be named by Tuesday, and that the draw will take place at Bateman's Hotel on Wednesday, at 11 a.m. A special train will leave Sydney each morning at 9.47 a.m.

WATERLOO CUP MEETING.

WON BY NEW SOUTH WALES DOG.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Victorian Coursing Club concluded their Waterloo Cup meeting at Geelong to-day, when the weather was again favourable. The Cup final was in every way worthy of the importance of the stake. Fluke, like Astrokan two years ago, followed up his V.C.C. Derby success by accounting for the older dogs in the more important Waterloo Cup. He won all his courses in brilliant fashion, and clearly established his right to be classed among the truly great greyhounds of recent times. He met Australian Swell in his first course to-day, and beat him pointless.

Near the escapes Fluke made a drive at the hare, and not noticing the close proximity of the fence crashed into it. It was thought for a time that he was badly hurt, but he soon pulled round, and there did not appear to be much amiss with him when he went into the slips for the final. He was a pronounced favourite after winning the first course today, but it soon became known that all was not well with him, and the odds were laid on Don't Forget Me for a while. But before the dogs went to the slips for the deciding course Fluke had regained his place in the market. Don't Forget Me was feeling the effects of the hard ground, but he ran a fine course with Golf Club. Golf Club looked like making a race of it with him soon after they left the slips, but the New South Wales dog began to draw away, and ultimately turned four lengths to the good. Golf Club became placed off the first turn, and the pair mixed the work for a while. Then Golf Club took sole possession for a few points; but coming round wide he let Don't Forget Me in again for a series of wrenches, and the Sydney sider was the harest of winners when a good hare reached home. In the final they were slipped to a good hare. Fluke, as usual, got going very smartly, and soon drew out for a lead, but the hare began to circle and favour the New South Wales representative; and Don't Forget Me secured the first turn, by favour, with a little less than two lengths to the good. He made the next turn, and wrenched before Fluke raced from behind him, and scored a go-by, and went on for three more full points, before Don't Forget Me got in again for a wrench. Fluke then ran past him for two more points, and drove home a good hare a handsome winner by three points. It was a brilliant achievement to win so decisively after having all the early work scored against him. Fluke is owned by Mr. J. Phillips, of St. James, and his son trained him for the stake. Don't Forget Me is owned by the well-known New South Wales leashman, Mr. D. Darcy, who owned last year's runner-up, Dad. Don't Forget Me is a brilliant dog, possessed of great pace, and he is very clever in handling his hare. Details:—

TO-DAY'S PROGRAMME.

The second half of the "C" Grade competition matches will be played this afternoon. In addition the various clubs have arranged fixtures for their members. The following is the list:—

COMPETITION GAMES.

Given fine weather the competition games will be continued this afternoon; but in any case the heavy rains during the week will have the effect of making the grounds slow and sloppy. Waverley, who are at the head of the competition table, will meet Burwood at Waverley Oval, and the local team should have no difficulty in winning. Of the other games probably that between Lane Cove v Leichhardt, at Leichhardt will prove the most interesting. University v Paddington, at Sydney Cricket Ground No. 2, should prove a close contest. On recent form Petersham should defeat Mosman-North Sydney at Petersham Park. Following are the fixtures for to-day:—

RUGBY UNION.

TO-DAY'S FIXTURES.

The tenth round of the Metropolitan Rugby Union competitions will be played this afternoon. The chief fixture is that between Glebe and St. George at Wentworth Park, where the leaders in the competition will meet strenuous opposition, as St. George have improved greatly since the opening of the year. Another interesting match is that between Eastern Suburbs and Randwick, as these teams will meet for the first time, having been combined last year. Eastern Suburbs will have to be at their best to beat their offshoot. Following are the fixtures:—

RUGBY LEAGUE.

FINAL TEST MATCH.

The final test match between England and Australia, to decide the destiny of the "ashes" of the Northern Union code, will be played at the Sydney Cricket Ground to-day.

The first test match was won by England by 23 points to 5, and the second by Australia by 12 points to 7. To-day's "test" is, therefore, the "rubber" of the series, and will decide the destiny of the "ashes," which were won by Australia on January 1, 1912, at Birmingham. It is a coincidence that on that occasion the victorious "Kangaroo" team was composed of all Sydney men, while to-day's team is also made up entirely of players selected from the Sydney clubs. The early match this afternoon will start at 1.30 o'clock, and the test match at 3 o'clock sharp.

The teams are:—

AUSTRALIA.—Fullback, H. Hallett; three-quarter backs, D. Frawley, S. Deane (captain), R. Tidyman, W. Messenger; half-backs, C. Fraser, A. Halloway; forwards, E. Courtney, S. Pearce, R. R. Craig, F. Burge, C. Sullivan, W. A. Cann.

The President Cup match will be controlled by Mr. S. Brown. Touch judges, Messrs. C. N. Yard and C. Rogers.

TROPHIES PRESENTED.

ORANGE, Friday.

Dr. Thacker, of Wellington, New Zealand, a keen supporter of football, has presented the Central-Western Rugby League with two handsome trophies for presentation to the best back and best forward this season.

BRITISH TEAM'S VISIT.

DISSATISFACTION IN NEW ZEALAND.

AUCKLAND (N.Z.), Friday.

The communication which was received by the council of the management of the New Zealand Rugby League from Mr. Houghton, one of the managers of the English team, did not meet with the approval of the members. Mr. Houghton wrote, confirming the cable message he had sent earlier regarding the extension of the team's New Zealand tour, and enclosing the itinerary, which he said was to be final. That itinerary, by the way, was the same as that decided upon by the New Zealand Council on the receipt of the cable, and was identical with that originally suggested by the New Zealand body to the Englishmen. Accompanying the letter was a Sydey press cutting of an interview with Mr. Houghton, which he said represented all he had to say in the matter.

Mr. M'Lean entered an emphatic protest against the action of Mr. Houghton in speaking in such terms concerning the New Zealand League, when the fault undoubtedly lay with the other side. He moved that the president and the chairman should interview Mr. Houghton on the subject when they visited Wellington to attend the reception of the English team. "They have treated us with the direst contempt and brevity," remarked Mr. Morton, seconding the motion. Mr. Morton commented on the extremely discourteous manner in which the New Zealand League has been treated all through. He protested strongly against Mr. Houghton's action in replying to the whole matter through the press, instead of taking the New Zealand League into his confidence. Mr. Morton concluded that if the English managers assumed a bombastic attitude on arriving in Wellington, and attempted to belittle the New Zealand League, its representatives should uphold the dignity of the League. It was decided to act on the line suggested by Mr. M'Lean.

AUSTRALIAN.

TO-DAY'S COMPETITION.

The principal fixture in to-day's series of League matches is that between Sydney and Newtown at Erskineville Oval. Given fine weather, the match should provide keen and scientific football, as both teams rely largely on combination. Central Western will play their first game on a home ground—Birchgrove Oval—their opponents being North Sydney, and on present appearances the Westerners should experience no great difficulty in winning. Paddington will meet East Sydney at Hampden Oval, and the result seems a foregone conclusion for the former.

The second grade contests, played prior to the League games, are in accord with the League fixtures. Interest in those particular games is centred on the doings of Paddington and Newtown, who occupy first and second positions respectively. Following are the fixtures:—

League.

Sydney v Newtown, Erskineville Oval (H. J. Reynolds, field umpire); Central Western v North Sydney, Birchgrove Oval (G. Hatfield, field umpire); Paddington v East Sydney, Hampden Oval (L. J. Pitcher, field umpire).

A big programme of club events is listed for today, but the match that promises most is the Balmain-Royal Navy fixture at Epping. RUGBY UNION FOOTBALL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—It is with a great deal of pleasure that one notices on all sides what seems to be a revival of interest in Rugby Union Football. The forthcoming games against New Zealand are being freely talked about, and the action of the selectors in thus early choosing the forwards meets with the general approval of all lovers of the game. It is only after having witnessed the last 20 minutes of the final interstate match against Queensland that one realises the possibilities of the present N.S.W. team. For this reason I would urge the officials to give the men selected every opportunity of meeting together, and should funds not permit of a proper "housing" scheme, as was so successful once previously, then why not a week-end "camp" at one of our seaside resorts? It is very practicable, and if adopted then I am quite sure that the public are due for the greatest of all football treats—the sight of a New Zealand representative side fully extended, and up against it.

I am, etc., CENTRE.

THE NEW ZEALAND MATCHES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Having read the letter of "International" in yours of the 2nd inst, I consider that for downright presumption, this suggestion that the New Zealand Representative Union team who are to play in Sydney this month, should do away with the wing forward, and play the eight-pack formation, which New South Wales and British teams prefer, "beats the band." Has not New Zealand won on the football fields the unassailable title of Rugby champions, and has it not been achieved in the first place by their all-round ability, but in particular by their successful seven pack, and the effective wing forward. No player smashes up clever attack or defence more than he; also he does more than any two of his side, if he is the typical New Zealand winger of the standard of Tom Ellison, "Offside M'Kenzie," Bob Oliphant, Dave Gallagher, and others I could mention. Part of his play is putting the ball into scrum, only an item in itself, but "International" should know it means something to his side, throws the ball in from line-out, protects his half-back, does his share of ruck work, is usually very effective in his footwork, and incidentally muzzles the opposite half-back when opportunity offers.

As one who has had New Zealand Club experience, and training in their methods, I sincerely trust that those in control of the coming New Zealanders will not give the "biassed suggestion" a thought, for, if such is the case, New Zealand supporters, and especially those of the "old school," will come to the conclusion that the team will lose by the omission of the "demon winger," one of its characteristic features, and consequently will not be traditional of New Zealand Rugby.

I am, etc., KAHORE! PAKEHA.

LAWN TENNIS CAPITATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I read with great interest the letter of Mr. G. C. Whitney in this morning's "Herald," in regard to the above matter, and I heartily agree with his remarks. In the first place, like him, I am heartily in accord with the fee being imposed, but only on players who play in the badges and in tournaments. I do not think it is at all fair to tax members of clubs who do not play, and by reason of the inferiority of their play have no hope of playing, in the badges or tourneys. The argument may be used that such members get the benefit of having more play whilst the badges are on, but it is not always so, for there is generally much divided opinion in some of the clubs about members playing in the badges, and thus in a way neglecting their clubs, for if it is only a small club, the members get practically little or no play at all, and therefore to tax them is not at all equitable. Circulars were sent to the different clubs asking for their opinion on the matter, but, as Mr. Whitney states, no time was given for a reply to be sent in, and, as most of the annual meetings of the clubs will be held during the next four or five months, I do think the council of the association should have waited a while longer, or else called a meeting of delegates and had the matter thoroughly threshed out. To hear some of the councillors talk, one would think that club members had no call upon them in their own clubs financially, but that they must shell out whenever asked by the association. However, as I stated before, if the fee is limited to badge and tournament players it will deserve the thorough support of everyone concerned.

Whilst on the subject of delegates, could not a monthly meeting of such be held the same as the N.S.W.C.A. and other bodies, to transact business in connection with the sport, and thus make the association more democratic, and thereby increasing the interest in its affairs. Of course, there may be something against this proposal of which I am not aware, but if it is at all possible, I would like to see it given a trial.—I am, etc.,

NEW SOUTH WALES CYCLISTS' UNION.

INTERCLUB PREMIERSHIP COMPETITION.

This afternoon the New South Wales Cyclists' Union will decide the first and second heats of the annual Dunlop interclub premiership, over the Homebush course. The programme is as follows—

First heat (3.21 p.m.): Marrickville, Dulwich Hill, and Liverpool Clubs.

Second heat (3.35 p.m.): Kurri Kurri, Northern Suburbs, and Western Suburbs Clubs.

This event was inaugurated by the Dunlop Rubber Company in 1902 for amateur cycling clubs in New South Wales. The competition is open to teams of nine riders representing any of the clubs affiliated with the New South Wales Cyclists' Union, but only five members of the team, however, may compete on any one day. A club may nominate more than one team, but a rider may only compete for one club. The races are run behind official pace-makers, five of whom are allowed to each team. Each team nominates its own pacers, and, according to the conditions, their names must be posted at headquarters a quarter of an hour before the start. These riders need not necessarily be members of the competing club, but they must be affiliated with the Union. A single pacer only is allowed to each team in the bunch, but in the event of a rider being shaken off he may accept single outside pace until he regains the field. The Union prohibits the use of unlined wooden rims or single tube tyres.

In the event of to-day's races being postponed through wet weather, notice will be posted at the Sports Club, Hunter-street, at noon, and at the several cycling centres throughout the metropolitan area.

COUNCIL MEETING.

At the last council meeting of the League of New South Wales Wheelmen, an application was received from Mr. James Slade to promote an open cycling carnival, at the Sports Ground on Boxing night. The events are:—2 miles wheel race (£80); one mile handicap (£20); five miles scratch race (£10); and one mile interstate championship (£15). The matter was left in abeyance.

Sanction was granted for an open sports meeting to be held at Condobolin on Tuesday, October 7. An offer of £6 was accepted for the six special pacing tandems, which three years ago cost the League over £70. Notice of motion was given by the chairman, Mr. Joe Davis (vice-president) that the time of meeting of the council in future be changed from Wednesday evening to Monday evenings. The secretary's and sub-committee's reports were held over.

THE LEAGUE SPLIT.

ASHFIELD CLUB DEFECTIONS.

A special committee of the Council of the League of New South Wales Wheelmen, consisting of Messrs. J. T. Lang, M.L.A., D. J. Plunkett, and P. Campbell, will attend a meeting of the Ashfield League Club, at Ashfield on Monday evening, to enquire into an appeal made by certain members.

It is stated that at a summoned meeting of the Ashfield Club on Tuesday evening, at which nine members only were present, a resolution that the Ashfield Club join the I.C.C.A., was passed by five votes to four. The I.C.C.A. officials thereupon took possession of the club's property. Several of the club members, however, have appealed to the League of Wheelmen, stating that they did not attend the meeting, as they had no wish to be associated with that section of the club which favours affiliation with the I.C.C.A.

Mr. H. M. Mackay, the League secretary, states that the action of the I.C.C.A. officials was not in order, as according to the constitution, such a resolution must be carried by a two-thirds majority, before it becomes "law."

ALTERATION TO CONSTITUTION.

The special sub-committee of the League Council, headed by Mr. E. R. Larkin, M.L.A., has drafted the new constitution of the league to be referred to the council for endorsement. If adopted by the council, the constitution will be submitted to a general meeting of the league on July 20.

The new rules of the constitution provide, among other matters, for equal representation from country as well as metropolitan clubs.

TRIUMPH CUP CONTEST.

THE RESULT.

The judges of the Auto-Cycle Association of New South Wales yesterday announced the result of the Triumph Cup reliability contest, held from Sydney to Katoomba and Yetholme and return, on June 27 and 29.

Out of twenty-one competitors who finished no fewer than eight tied with perfect scores for first place for reliability. The placing of these eight competitors was therefore determined, in accordance with the regulations, by the points lost at the three secret controls which were located along the route.

The following is the award:—

W. Collins (6-h.p. Matchless) 1
Arthur Biden (5-h.p. Matchless) 2
V. Sampson (6-h.p. N.S.U.) 3
A. Levi (2¾-h.p. Sunbeam) 4

Collins wins the "Bennett and Barkell" medal, and secures a "leg in" for the Triumph Cup (which must be won twice in succession, or three times in all, to become the absolute property of any competitor), while Biden, Sampson, and Levi each secure the A.C.A. gold medal.

Mr. Collins is a member of the Kookaburra Club, and has an excellent record in open trials.

How the Points Were Lost.

The following table shows the position of all the competitors who finished the concluding stage of the trial at Parramatta on Monday afternoon prior to the judges declaring the contest at an end:—

BOXING.

CLABBY v M'GOORTY.

A contest of first importance will be staged at the Rushcutter Bay Stadium to-night between the two famous Americans, Jimmy Clabby and Eddie M'Goorty. On the strength of his performances, which include a verdict over M'Goorty, Clabby came from the United States as nominal middleweight champion of the world, but lost to Jeff Smith recently, and a match between the winner of to-night's match and Smith for the title is talked of. Both M'Goorty and Clabby are fine boxers, and the latter relies on his skill to enable him to concede weight to M'Goorty, who is to weigh 11st 6lb at 2 p.m., the bout thus not being under strict middleweight conditions. Clabby himself expects to weigh about 11st. Both men are in splendid condition, M'Goorty's training work this week having shown him to be in great hitting form. Clabby, however, has never been knocked out, and hopes to add another win to his record.

Prior to the big match, which starts at 8.30, preliminaries will be provided by Andy Lambert v Arthur Lee and Herb. Haar v Wally Evans.

FRUIT TRADE.

MINORITY REPORT.

The final report of the minority (Messrs. John Thomson and Sydney Sampson) on behalf of the Commonwealth Royal Commission on the production, distribution, etc., of Australian fruit, has been issued.

Since the issue of the previous report, which accompanied the progress report of the Commission, in July 12, 1913, the only additional evidence taken has been that covering an investigation of the dried fruits industry at the irrigation settlement of Mildura (Victoria).

"The production of raisins and currants," says the report, "now supplies Australian requirements, and leaves a substantial surplus for export." Both the irrigation settlements producing these fruits (Mildura, Victoria; and Renmark, South Australia) are on the banks of the Murray, and within the arid areas of the two States. They supply overwhelming evidence of the value of intelligent cultivation, and of the scientific application of water to a responsive and highly fertile soil. At Mildura, there is now a population of nearly 7000, with 12,000 acres under active cultivation, producing an annual output of upwards of £500,000. This, says the report, gives proof of the stimulating effect of a protective policy upon this primary industry. The duty is 3d per lb on both raisins and currants."

The report says the supply of refrigerated railway trucks in the summer season is absolutely essential to successful marketing, and a more speedy train service would lead to considerable expansion in the area under citrus and other fruits.

"We dissent," says the report, "from the statement in the majority report of the events which it is alleged were responsible for the appointment of the Commission." The statement that opposition was offered the Commission in the prosecution of its inquiries is strongly objected to.

The minority also found that the fruit trade of Tasmania was handled by certain firms that worked in conjunction in order to secure economy and efficiency in administration. In this way, they were able to make large contracts over a specified period.

The minority were unable to find that growers, because of financial arrangements with packers' agents, suffered any disabilities. How far financial influence was exercised by one firm over another the minority were not competent to say.

SHEEPDOG TRIALS.

IMPROVEMENT IN WORK.

FINALS THIS AFTERNOON.

Fourteen dogs worked yesterday, and their performances all round were a distinct advance on that of the first two days. The weather was much finer and the going better than in the slush of the novice trials.

There was an excellent attendance. After luncheon, his Excellency the Governor watched the dogs work with interest. Details follow:—

The first dog to work in the morning was Arthur Collins's (S.A.) black and white border collie dog, Hemp, who made a good cast with a nice approach. The dog worked fairly well but slowly at the race, which was passed in 13 minutes. No score was made at the bridge, though the sheep were in a good scoring position. Hemp, who was knocked out with his work, was well under control, but did not force enough.

Ready, a black and tan Kelpie dog, worked next in the interest of Mr. H. F. Mitchell, of Uralla, who has twice won the Sydney Championship Trial. The dog's cast was only middling, and he did not respond too readily to the cracking of a long-lashed whip. After rounding the preliminary poles, Ready's work improved a little, but his trial, on the whole, was poor.

A little fox-like yellow Kelpie, Queenie, came out for J. J. C. Sullivan, of Bathurst, where she has won a trial. Over-anxiety put the little bitch out of court, as, after eight minutes' ineffective work at the race, she was ordered off.

The Gong (G. A. Bell's red Kelpie) made a good cast, and rounded the first two flags in three minutes. His sheep were shy, and inclined to bolt near the hurdles, through which they were steered in 10½ minutes. The dog was busy at the bridge, on which he had two of his trio when the bell rang.

The second South Australian to work was Horace E. Collins's black border collie Scott, who made a capital cast, and was well under command, but worked altogether too slow. The race was negotiated in 10 minutes, and a fair passage was made to the bridge, where Scott had a couple of good chances. This dog seemed out of touch with his instructions.

Jett, J. J. C. Sullivan's black barb, was over-keen. Her cast was fair, and she brought her sheep nicely to the race. After six minutes' fruitless work, she crossed between her owner and the sheep, and was at once called off.

Leslie McLeod, of Miowera, Nyngan, was represented by the blue kelpie dog Boyne, who began fairly well, but did not go to his sheep, and disregarded O'Bryan's whistle. The dog settled down, and weaved his sheep neatly to the hurdles, which were done in 8½ minutes by patient work. Boyne had fair chances at the bridge, but he failed to score, though he held his charges well.

Sound, who won the Novice Trial for George Bell on Thursday, made a splendid cast, and took possession in good style. Under good command, she steered her sheep nicely round the first two poles in three minutes, and through the race a minute later. Weaving cleverly to the bridge, Sound's excellent efforts were frustrated by a fighting sheep. She held well, and was all but scoring when the bell rang.

H. F. Mitchell's Uralla kelpie-border dog Liberal gave a disappointing display. His approach was reckless, and after racing them all over the ground, he crossed, and was rung off.

Glen, in the same ownership as the last dog worked, made an excellent cast, approaching well, and leaving the race behind in 6½ minutes. At the bridge, a horney fighter charged the dog, who responded gamely, but could not get his trio over the obstacle.

Boss Arthur Collins's (S.A.) border collie took possession of his sheep in good style after an excellent cast. He just missed crossing the sheep, but was stopped at the critical moment. The race was done in 7¼ minutes, but good work at the bridge met with no luck.

Cora, a neat little red kelpie, was worked by John Casey, of Young. Her cast was fair; she rounded the poles in four minutes, and did the race in 4½ minutes. A quick passage was made to the bridge, which was negotiated in 11½ minutes. At the yarding pen Cora made no progress, though one sheep went in.

Tinkle, who has many good performances to her credit, was worked by her owner, George Bell, of Albury. Her cast left nothing to be desired. Her approaching was excellent, and she drove through the first hurdles in eight minutes. She did rather too much squatting, but was ever on the alert, and did good but scoreless work at the bridge.

King and McLeod (Canonbar, Miowera) did no good with Banshee, a black kelpie, who crossed his cast, and was taken off by O'Bryan, who worked him.

On going over his notes, the judge decided that the following seven dogs should compete in the finals at 3 p.m. to-day.—G. A. Bell's Tinkle and Sound, A. Collins's (S.A.) Boss and Hemp, L. McLeod's Boyne, H. F. Mitchell's Glen, and J. T. Casey's Cora.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE MAUD ALLAN SEASON.

Miss Maud Allan, who will open her brief season at the Palace Theatre this evening, will arrive here this morning by the Melbourne express. A welcome will be extended to the renowned dancer at the Central Station, and 20 children will present her with flowers. The star will be associated with three classic players, whose reputation was established here as juvenile prodigies five years ago, Leo, Jan, and Mischel Cherniavsky, violinist, pianist, and 'cellist. There will be six consecutive evening entertainments, and a matinee on Wednesday. Maud Allan has won fame in the capitals of Europe, and during prolonged seasons at the London Palace Theatre, not as a ballet dancer, but as an exponent of the ancient Greek manner. She dances barefooted, and, as in the case of her Vision of Salome, originally produced at the Royal Opera House, Vienna, realises in dramatic action the music of an orchestra under Mr. Frank St. Leger. There will be scenery by Joseph Harker. A change of programme will be made nightly. The plans are at Paling's.

"MADAME X" AT THE CRITERION.

"Madame X," described as the drama of "mother-love," will be produced for the first time here at the Criterion Theatre to-night by a J. C. Williamson combination, headed by Miss Muriel Starr. The new play is from the French of Alexandre Bisson, and has drawn large audiences in many parts of the world owing to its strong, emotional character. Miss Starr, who won popularity here in "Within the Law," will appear in the name-part, and the new cast will include Miss Mary Worth, Miss Gwen Burroughs, Messrs. Eric Maxon, E. W. Morrison, Winter Hall, Claude Bantock, Frederick Ward, and Roy Redgrave. The plan is at Paling's.

"THE MASTER OF ANGERSTROOM."

The final performance of "The School for Scandal" will be given at the Little Theatre to-night, as on Monday Mr. Hugh Buckler will produce a new play by an Australian author, entitled "The Master of Angerstroom." The cast will be as follows:—Agnes Adace, Violet Paget; Abdul, W. Kingston Hewitt; Dr. Crighton, Alfred Bristowe; John Adace, the Master of Angerstroom, Hugh C. Buckler; Eden Adace, his son, Kenneth Brampton; Klaus Buckau, Arthur Cornell; Bertha, Lillian Lloyd; Grincke, Wilson Forbes; and Mr. Vinson, Gerald K. Souper.

This piece will be preceded at 8.10 by W. W. Jacobs' playlet, "The Gay Parrot," in which Mr. Tom Craven will make his debut as Sam Rogers, a character he has played hundreds of times in London and the provinces. Messrs. Brampton and Forbes, Misses Eileen Robinson and Tempe Pigott, will be in the cast. The plans are at Paling's.

"MR. WU" AT THE ADELPHI.

The Beaumont Smith and Louis Meyer English Dramatic Company will present the Anglo-Chinese drama "Mr. Wu," a recent success at the Strand Theatre, London, at the Adelphi Theatre next Saturday evening. Miss May Congdon will play Mrs. Gregory, Mr. William F. Grant will appear in the name-part, and Miss Frances Irving will undertake Ah Wong. The cast will also include Messrs. Cyril M'Kay, Reginald Wykeham, Harry Halley, C. Aldrich, Misses Shirley Huxley, and Esther Mitchell. Plan arrangements are duly notified.

THE ELLEN TERRY MATINEE.

Mr. Walter Bentley will direct the "Trial Scene" at the forthcoming Ellen Terry matinee at Her Majesty's on July 28, when that great actress will appear as Portia, with Miss Violet Paget as understudy, and Miss Essie Jenyns will make her re-appearance after a long absence from the stage as Nerissa, with Miss Frances Ross as understudy, and all supernumerary parts will be filled by well-known actors. The cast, formed by the Actors' Association, will include:—Duke of Venice, Mr. Robert Inman; Antonio (Merchant of Venice), Mr. Walter Bentley; Bassanio, Mr. Hugh Buckler; Gratiano, Mr. H. R. Roberts; Salerio, Mr. Roland Conway; Shylock, Mr. G. S. Titheradge; Tubal, Mr. W. Holman, sen.; Clerk of the Court, Mr. Harry Halley. Mr. and Mrs. Graham Moffat will play "The Bells will Ring," and all the leading theatrical companies, including Miss Maggie Moore, will assist.

"THE SERVANT IN THE HOUSE."

The production of Rann Kennedy's "The Servant in the House" at the Repertory Theatre is advertised for Monday, 13th inst., for a run of one week. It is a remarkable play, which achieved much success in New York, and has been seized upon largely by stage societies in every country as a trenchant allegorical satire. Manson, the dramatic progenitor of the Stranger in "The Third Floor Back," will be played in this production by Mr. Harry Diver, and Miss Agnes Keogh will also appear. A strong supporting cast has been secured, and Mr. Arthur Styan has undertaken the general supervision of the production. The plan is at Paling's.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

"Gipsy Love," Lehar's fascinating Viennese operetta, is drawing great audiences at Her Majesty's Theatre, where a succession of dainty valse themes and humorous songs, duets, and dances brings forward Misses Spain, Glyn, Godwin, Brunton, and Novotna, Messrs. Hudson, Fisher, Smith, and other artists. There will be a matinee on Wednesday.

THEATRE ROYAL.

At 2.15 to-day there will be an extra matinee of "Bunty Pulls the Strings," this being the third afternoon performance during the first week of the run, an almost unprecedented occurrence. Mr. and Mrs. Graham Moffat and their new Scottish company have evidently found Australian audiences quick in their appreciation of the humorous, homely play.

ADELPHI THEATRE.

This evening, at the Adelphi Theatre, the present George Willoughby dramatic combination will enter upon the last six nights of their season, when they will produce the popular melodrama, "Lured to Ruin." Mr. George Cross and Miss Vera Remee will play the central characters in this sensational piece, which will be elaborately and picturesquely staged.

SYDNEY SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

This afternoon, at the Town Hall, the Sydney Symphony Orchestra will present two of Beethoven's masterpieces, the Seventh Symphony in A and the Fifth Concerto for pianoforte and orchestra, in which the solo part will be played by Mr. Leonard Borwick, the distinguished English pianist, whose playing of the Schumann Concerto at the previous concert was so impressive. The other Beethoven composition to be played will be the "Coriolan" overture, while Wagner's "Siegfried Idyll" and the overture to the "Meistersinger" will complete a programme of unusual brilliancy. The plan is at Paling's, and as notified.

FIFTH HAROLD BAUER RECITAL.

Mr. Harold Bauer will give his fifth pianoforte recital at the Town Hall this evening, when he will present a programme consisting entirely of Chopin compositions. This should prove a highly popular occasion, and this great pianist's interpretations of Chopin have been much admired during the week. Besides the "Sonata in B Flat Minor" (with the Funeral March), Mr. Bauer will play the Polonaise in F Sharp, and an Etude, Prelude, Nocturne, and Barcarolle, Tarantelle, Fantasia, Scherzo, and Impromptu. Messrs. J. and N. Tait announce matinees for Tuesday and Saturday next, and one evening concert at Concordia Hall on Thursday evening. The plans are at Nicholson's.

LEONARD BORWICK.

At the Town Hall next Saturday night, Mr. Leonard Borwick will bid good-bye to Sydney before leaving for his seasons in Adelaide and Melbourne. At this recital all favourite works will be played, including the Waldstein's "Sonata," six popular Chopin numbers; Handel's "Harmonious Blacksmith," Schubert's Impromptu in B flat, Rachmaninoff's "Prelude," Mendelssohn's "Spring Song," and Liszt's Etude de Concert. The booking will open at Paling's on Monday morning. Students' concessions as notified.

THE PETER DAWSON SEASON.

At the Town Hall next Tuesday and Wednesday evenings Mr. Peter Dawson will give his concerts supported by his new English Concert Company. This Australian bass-baritone, who has won for himself a high position in English concert-rooms, now returns a second time to Sydney, where he was so popular four or five years ago. He will be supported by Miss Annetta George (soprano), Miss Hilda Felstead (contralto), Miss Carline Jurs (pianist), Mr. Furness Williams (tenor), and Mr. Thomas Sidney (entertainer). The plans are at Paling's.

AUSTRAL STRING QUARTET.

The Austral String Quartet (Messrs. Cyril Monk, leader, L. D. Hage, S. Vost Janssen, and Carl Gotsch) will give an extra concert at the Concordia Hall on Friday, July 10, on which occasion Mr. Borwick, the eminent pianist, will be associated with the quartet in the Schumann and Brahms quintets. Mr. Borwick will also play solos. This should prove one of the most important chamber music concerts ever given in Sydney. The plan will open at Paling's this morning.

ROYAL PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

The Royal Philharmonic Society's next concert will be given at the Town Hall on Thursday, July 16, when Mr. Joseph Bradley will conduct the full chorus and orchestra (led by Henri Staell) in Elgar's "King Olaf," the Grail scene from "Parsifal," and other fine numbers. Mme. Mary Conly has been specially engaged, and other assisting artists will be Mr. Oswald Rippon, a Melbourne tenor, and Mr. A. E. Y. Benham, basso. Subscribers may now join at Paling's as notified. Mlle. Dolores and Mr. Philip Newbury will both sing at the third concert of the season.

AMATEUR ORCHESTRAL SOCIETY.

The second concert of the 23rd season of the Sydney Amateur Orchestral Society will be given in the Town Hall on Tuesday, 14th inst., when Mr. Alfred Hill will present a programme, including:—Overture, "Sakuntala" (Goldmark), Symphony No. 2 in D (Beethoven), Gavotte "Mignon" (Thomas), and Slavonic Dances (Dvorak). A special feature of the programme will be the reappearance of M. Jacques Fintel, the famous pianist, who will play the solo part in Rachmaninoff's Great Concerto for pianoforte and orchestra. Miss Muriel Barton will be the vocalist. The plan opens at Paling's on 22nd inst., and intending subscribers are desired to notify the hon. secretary without delay.

BRITISH COLLEGE EISTEDDFOD.

The secretary of the British College of Music wishes to draw special attention to the alteration of date regarding the coming Eisteddfod. The first session will take place on Thursday evening, 16th July, in the new Southern Cross Hall, Castlereagh-street. Further particulars are advertised in amusements. The last day of entry has been extended to Friday next.

THE PAUL DUFAULT SEASON.

The announcement that Paul Dufault, the popular Canadian tenor, last heard here with Mme. Nordica, is to return to Sydney for four farewell concerts, will be warmly welcomed, for the enthusiasm aroused by Mr. Dufault during his previous visit here is still freshly remembered. Special interest also attaches to Mr. Dufault's return through the fact that he now comes as a recognised star at the head of his own company. The Dufault farewell season will comprise four concerts, which will be given at the Sydney Town Hall on July 18, 21, 23, and 25. The tour is under the management of Frederic Shipman.

THE LATE J. C. WILLIAMSON.

Subscribers' plans are now open at Nicholson's, as notified.

Miss Alice Harker, Miss Beatrice Schuback, and Mr. Bryce Carter will assist in an attractive programme. The plan is at Paling's.

MR. STANLEY WARWICK'S CONCERT.

Mr. Stanley Warwick gave last night the third concert of a series at Concordia Hall, designed for the introduction of new artists and new music. The artistic scheme is a laudable one, but obviously difficult to sustain, owing to an eventual failure of supplies, and a falling off in the attendance may have been due to the recognition of this fact. There is, however, too much engaging public attention just now, so that in any case the scheme has hardly had a fair trial. By far the most interesting thing in last night's programme was Ernest Truman's melodious setting of Heine's "Du bist wie eine blume," in which the composer, as others have done before him, caught the wistful, reverentially adoring sentiment of the poem. Mr. Philip Wilson sang it admirably, and consented to repeat the music. Miss Eileen Shettle's contralto voice was used with effective warmth in "Deep Eyes of Blue" (Brewer), as the more mysterious "Lynette" (James Bain), and familiar songs were contributed with acceptance by Miss Helen Johnson, a mezzo of power, and Mr. Courtney Hood, a baritone of virile quality. Miss Eva Giltinan was again vivaciously prominent with her amusing "Songs at the Piano." On the instrumental side, which was otherwise weak, that well-known pianiste, Miss Alicia Nolan, raised the level of the programme with her solos; and trios were carefully played by three youthful amateurs, Messrs. Bert Kirschbaum (violin), H. Whittard ('cello), and Stan. Cummins (piano).

CHAMBER MUSIC CONCERT.

The Salon Quartet, under the auspices of the Sydney College of Music, will give a concert of chamber music in St. James's Hall on Tuesday evening, July 21. The programme will include Schubert's famous octet and the renowned septet of Beethoven, in which Mr. Staell's Quartet will be augmented.

"ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA."

One of the biggest ventures of the year in film production in Australia is the drama of Antony and Cleopatra (Cines Company), which will begin its Sydney season at the Lyceum Theatre this afternoon. Over 1000 persons are on the stage in this photo-play, which includes the gorgeous luxury of Cleopatra's palace, the transport of the Roman army across the Mediterranean, and scenes of battle and triumph. Among its grand scenes may be mentioned the reception of Cleopatra by Antony, the Queen arriving down the river Cydnus on her famous barge, the battle near Alexandria, with the destruction of the palace, and the triumph of Octavius in Rome. The acting of the principals in the play is splendid, and there is shown the tragic suicide of Antony and of Cleopatra, and the death of the beautiful slave, flung thrown to the crocodiles to satisfy the queen's jealous hate. This film brought a record price in the British isles, and it has had a great success in Europe.

OTHER ENTERTAINMENTS.

Many new attractions are billed for the picture block theatres. At the Crystal Palace will be shown "An Officer and a Gentleman," a stirring drama; and "Mabel's Nerve," a hilarious comedy. The Lyric Theatre will present a remarkable problem picture "Like Father Like Son," and some other star items. "The Silent Witness," an exciting story of twentieth century commercialism, will be the chief attraction at the Colonial; while at the Empress Theatre, "Dandy Polly" will head the bill. The lastnamed is said to be an uproarious scream from start to finish.

There will be two performances at West's Olympia to-day, starting with the matinee, when Miss Asta Neilsen will make her farewell appearance in Sydney in her latest dramatic success entitled "Cry of the Child." On Monday evening the new sensation will be "The Fighting Blood of 1800," said to be a popular war melodrama. De Groen's Vice-Regal Orchestra will supply the incidental music.

At the American Picture Palace, 303 Pitt-street, the Glorious Fourth of July will be celebrated by the patriotic drama "Stars and Stripes," one of the best American productions. The other special films include "The Barber of Seville" and "Justly Punished," and the comedy items will be "All in the Air" and "Water on Every Floor."

At the Imperial Salon de Luxe large attendances have been recorded during the week. Last evening there was a large and fashionable assemblage of dancers. This evening "An American Night" will be the feature to celebrate the "Fourth of July."

The performances given nightly at the Coronation Hall by the "Dandies" are bright and humorous. The singing numbers are well rendered, and the comedy sustained well throughout.

Lovers of ice-skating find no lessening of the appeal which the Glaciarium makes, and large attendances have graced the ice during the week. To-night Prof. Hans Witte will give an exhibition of fancy skating.

At the Centennial Skating Palace, Bondi Junction, this evening the skating championships for couples, waltzers, two-step couples, barn dance, and ladies and gentlemen will be continued. The grand final will be decided on Tuesday. On July 30 the great skating pantomime will be staged.

The huge floor of the big Royal Roller Rink at Moore Park is kept in such good order that skating can be enjoyed there under ideal conditions. The main floor covers an area of 50,000 square feet. Among the attractions provided are fancy skating exhibitions and races.

The Gloria Company's magnificent spectacle Nero and Agrippina will be presented at the Standard Theatre, commencing on Monday next, and screenings will be given six times daily, from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m.

MR. HAROLD BAUER.

The distinguished pianist, Mr. Harold Bauer, accompanied by his wife, was the guest of the Council of the Musical Association of New South Wales at Farmer's restaurant yesterday morning. A warm welcome to Sydney was accorded Mr. Bauer by the president of the association, Mr. W. Arundel Orchard, who said the visits of great artists to Australia were fortunately becoming more frequent, and the more frequent they were the better it was for the musical fraternity here. (Applause.) These visits were a vital necessity to their musical well-being, situated as they were away from the centres of the art. To-day they had Mr. Bauer in their midst. (Applause.) He was an artist of such a reputation that it was not necessary to say any words of praise. Those who had heard him could not but be delighted. It was really a tremendous education to listen to him. (Applause.) Mr. Bauer suitably responded.

A correspondent draws attention to what he terms "the appalling state of the Quay and north of wharfs." "The approaches to the various wharfs in wet weather," he says, "are a disgrace. It is impossible to cross the Quay in any direction in wet weather and arrive on the other side with dry feet, even if one is wearing stout shoes or boots. There should be some law to force those in charge of these places to keep them in something like decent order."

WOOLLENS.

HOW JAPAN GETS CHEAP "TOPS."

MR. F. W. HUGHES EXAMINED.

TARIFF INQUIRY.

The manufacture of wool-tops and woollen materials, and incidental industries, was the subject of investigation by the Interstate Commission at Parliament House yesterday.

Richard Charles Hagon, merchant tailor, and an alderman of the City Council, said the master tailors did not desire an increase on the present duty on woollen piece goods. At the present they got 90 per cent. of their serges locally. These were 10 per cent cheaper than the imported.

Mr. Lockyer: Not a single woollen mill has approached the Commission for an increase of duty.

Witness: Delivery from local factories cannot be had under about nine months. Merchants would take much more locally-made goods if they were available more quickly. They were compelled to import tweeds, as they could not get the variety and quality locally. Varieties were improving each year, but not so much quality. Thin worsted, which could not be produced locally, was wanted here. If the machinery were here the prospects would be good. There had been a great improvement during the last three years, particularly in serges, as they had got over the dye difficulty. Australian tweeds stood the weather just as well as the imported article. Tweed from Victoria compared favourably with the imported article, but they did not, so far, in New South Wales. Duty and charges ran from 37½ to 40 per cent. on goods landed here. Many ready-made suits were brought into the State, selling at from £5 10s to £5 15s each. They were principally American. That, however, was not an increasing trade.

Fred William Hughes, manager of the firm of F. W. Hughes, Ltd., said that the company manufactured wool-tops, glue and gelatine, and tanned sheep leathers. Incidentally, they were also wool-scourers. He asked for an increase in the bounty on wool-tops. In place of 1d per lb up to 1,000,000lb made by any one manufacturer, and ½d per lb thereafter, with a limit of £10,000, payable in any one year, his company suggested and desired a flat rate of 1d per lb, with the limit of bounty payable in any one year increased to £20,000. He asked that this rate should be permanent. There was very little machinery for making worsteds in Australia. Woollen tops were necessary for the manufacture of serges. His firm made about 3,000,000lb of tops. The total manufactures amounted to 4,000,000. The local demand was only about 5 per cent. The average value of tops was about 32d per lb for a New South Wales fine merino, of what is called 70's quality. The average cost of manufacture was 4½d per lb. They employed in making tops from 130 to 150 employees. Felmongery, wool-scouring, and sheepskin tanning were industries carried on in connection with the manufacture of wool-tops.

The Chairman (Mr. Piddington): Before you started making tops, you were wool-scourers?

Witness: Yes. But we closed down for some time. The proportion of scoured wool exported has diminished from 26 to 12 per cent. of late years, though more country scouring places have started. The shipping companies discriminate between scoured and greasy wool in their freight charges. They fix the freight according to the value of the goods.

Continuing, witness said that scouring would mean a saving in freight of about ⅝d per lb. Most wool was now exported in the grease.

The Chairman: Is local scouring faulty?

Witness: Yes.

Mr. Lockyer: Would it not be better to scour locally on account of the by-products?

Witness: There are no by-products of any commercial value.

Mr. Lockyer: What is "lanoline?"

Witness: Chemists take that in small quantities, but it is really of no commercial value. In England, of course, they have to recover the grease to prevent pollution of streams.

Mr. Piddington: Here you let it run into Botany Bay?

Witness: Yes.

Continuing, witness said his firm had had more than the £10,000 bounty in the first year. It was a fact that most of the tops made here went to Japan. The reason was that it was the natural and closest market. Previously the tops went to England first, and thence to Japan. Now they go direct to the latter country. There was a saving in shipping to that country of ⅝d per lb in freight.

Mr. Lockyer: We pay the bounty on the goods that are shipped to Japan. The wages for combing there are very low, are they not?

Witness: There was no combing machinery there up to four years ago.

Mr. Lockyer: What advantage is the community here going to get by sending the tops to Japan?

Witness: I can quote from the report of Winchcombe, Carson to show that Japan came into the field as Australia's best foreign customer when the demand was not very great.

Mr. Swinburne: It looks like Australia paying a bounty to give Japan cheap tops.

Continuing, Mr. Hughes said that Japan was not able to put in plant for the manufacture of tops, owing to want of money. The Japanese paid more on the Australian market for wool than other buyers.

Mr. Swinburne: You give several reasons for the request, as disadvantages, among which are freight, cost of manufacture, capital, and difficulties of finance. But these are apparently no reasons at all. Japan is your best customer. I cannot understand why Japan does not put down big plants. You say that the cost of manufacture in Australia is 4½d per lb as against 12½d per lb in Japan. Your cost of manufacture, you say, is 4½d, less the bounty, making 3⅞d—for you made over the limit—and at that, you could, I think, easily compete with England, in its cost of 3d?

Witness: That is so. I do not think that Japan will put down plants for many years. We have made a profit of just about the amount of the bounty, enabling us to pay 6 per cent. to the shareholders.

Mr. Hughes asked, further, for a remission of the duty on machinery for wool-top making. Whereas machinery for making yarn from cotton was admitted free, there was a duty of 15 per cent. on machinery for making yarn or tops from wool. He asked for an increase of duty on yarn of all classes of wool and cotton to 35 per cent., with the usual preference of 30 per cent. for British articles. Sewing thread, he thought, might perhaps be exempted. By a yarn, he meant wool or cotton spun into yarn, suitable for weaving or knitting.

Mr. Lockyer: Then, as far as cotton is concerned, you will not be able to distinguish yarn from thread.

Witness: I should say that cotton sewing thread would be the only exemption.

The Chairman: I do not wish to press you to withdraw any part of your application. Have you had any experience with the cotton manufacture?—No.

And you must see it is not a natural industry. Is your only reason for asking for the duty because the cotton yarns might displace the woollen?—Yes.

If you got a duty on woollen yarns, would that satisfy you?—Yes; I propose to withdraw the application in connection with cotton yarns.

Mr. Hughes said the duty on woollen yarns would encourage many small manufacturers to start. He promised to supply the Commission with copies of the balance-sheets of the company for the first three years, and said he would also prepare a statement showing the advantages which the Australian manufacturer had over the Japanese.

The Commission has intimated that, in view of the approaching close of the Sydney session, it would only investigate subjects concerning which applications had already been received, or which reach the secretary on or before July 13 instant.

On Monday the Commission will deal with apparel (woollens, etc.), pipes and tubes (iron and steel), and wire.

SOCIAL PROBLEMS.

Speaking at the Sydney University on "Christianity and the Social Problem," Principal Davies, M.A., said that some people considered that Christianity had nothing at all to do with the social problem; others said that Christianity could not affect the problem. But history proved conclusively that Christianity had from the beginning definitely affected social and political ideas, and to-day it determined the fundamental attitude that men must adopt towards the social question. The driving power of Christianity alone could keep the nation on a higher level. It was only in the light of that teaching that true understanding between man and man would come, and the real brotherhood of humanity be established. There were three great evils. One of these was selfish logrolling in politics, a practice indulged in by certain politicians. A second was the terrible waste of wealth by some people in empty display; and the third was that of the growing professionalism in sport of all kinds. Such practices as these tended to cloud the ideal, which alone could lead the community to higher things.

LITHGOW STRIKERS.

HUNDRED PROSECUTED.

LITHGOW, Friday.

Considerable interest was manifested in the cases heard before Judge Edmunds at Lithgow this morning. About 100 members of the Lithgow Ironworkers' Union were proceeded against under the Industrial Arbitration Act for refusing to work at the blast furnaces at Lithgow on three different dates—May 24 and 31 (Sundays), and June 17.

Mr. Bloomfield, instructed by the Crown Solicitor, appeared for the Minister for Labour and Industry, who prosecuted in the first case, and Mr. A. J. Waldron, for G. and C. Hoskins, who were responsible for the second and third prosecutions; Mr. John Dixon, secretary of the union, appeared for the men, who were not legally represented.

Mr. Dixon applied for an adjournment on the ground that he had not had time properly to instruct a solicitor, and because the legal gentleman who had charge of the case was unable to be present. Several important witnesses, he said, were also absent.

Mr. Bloomfield objected on the ground that plenty of time had been given to prepare the cases, also that the fact that the men were not working on Sundays was doing incalculable damage to Messrs. Hoskins' industry. The extraordinary part of the business was that the men claimed their right not to work on Sundays, yet they were actually working the Sunday shift, and not the first shift on Monday. They worked from 11 o'clock on Saturday night until 7 o'clock on Sunday morning, but refused to go in again until 7 o'clock on Monday morning. As far as the Crown was concerned, and Mr. Waldron was with him, they did not object to an adjournment if the men would work the furnaces continuously until such time as they were prepared to go on with the case.

His Honor said those proceedings could not preserve a continuity of work. It was idle to impose penalties on men from time to time for not working, because the imposition of a penalty was a mere nothing one way or the other, but if it resulted in the men being ultimately thrown out of work, it affected not only the men and the owners, but the whole State, and more particularly the immediate district. When proceedings came before him in connection with this industry, the question was raised as to whether the men should not receive their usual one day off in seven, and when it was understood that this one day could not be given to every man on a Sunday, the question arose as to whether an arrangement could not be made whereby there should be one day's rest in seven. The question then arose as to whether wages could be increased so that the men would earn as much in six days as they had previously done in seven. When it was found they could not the matter was put before the men before the men by the Court, and they declared unmistakably that they required one day's rest. When each man voted for 48 hours a week, he virtually said: "I want one day off in seven, and if you give me that I will take payment for 48 hours instead of 56 without overtime, and I will fall into an arrangement whereby these furnaces can be run continuously."

The men had now by their actions virtually said, "This industry shall not exist," although they previously said they would work the furnaces continuously. This was a matter in which he did not think a fine would settle the difficulty. It was a matter for each individual's own honour and conscience. A man could not escape from a dishonourable action by saying that he was a member of a union. It was a question for each individual, and he asked every member to consider that he had promised by ballot to maintain the continuity of the furnaces, and now repudiated it. If they did not want a six-day week, then they had better strike it out, and go back to the old conditions. He could not help saying that, as far as he could see, the men were doing a dishonest thing—in other words, they were turning round on an agreement made a short time ago, and endeavouring to enforce an increase of wages or extra pay for Sunday work, after they expressly stated that they would not do so. He would not grant the adjournment unless he had some assurance that the men would consider this matter. If that were not forthcoming, he would proceed with the inquiry, although it might be practically useless—certainly useless to ensure continuance in the industry.

Mr. Dixon said he would place his Honor's views before the men.

His Honor: I don't think you, or any man, Mr. Dixon, would be misled in a matter which affects their honesty.

Mr. Dixon pointed out that when his Honor Mr. Justice Heydon received the result of the ballot Mr. Waldron asked that 48 hours a week be suspended for six months, while he himself heard Mr. Hoskins tell his Honor at Lithgow that he would bring the 48 hours into immediate operation.

Mr. Hoskins: I deny that.

His Honor pointed out that the matter had come before him since that time, but he could not deal with it, as the men had ceased work. The question would have been inquired into if this had not taken place. He could not say, of course, whether it would come into operation within six days, six weeks, or six months. He however, was prepared to go on with it, and devote a day from his vacation if necessary. Ultimately the cases were adjourned until Wednesday, his Honor remarking that he hoped the men would act in a straightforward manner.

COMPULSORY MILITARY TRAINING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In fairness to F. P. Roberts, the father of the 16-year-old lad who was placed in solitary confinement because of his protest to military training on conscientious grounds, I would be glad of space to make public the contents of a letter just received from this gentleman. It reads:—"On June 10 Senator Rae drew attention in the Senate to my son, Tom, a lad of 16 years, being court-martialled at the Queenscliff Fortress, and ordered seven days' solitary confinement, and on June 12 the following further facts were referred to by Senator Russell:—1. The lad was tried by court-martial. 2. That he was imprisoned in a cell that has no window, the light coming through a grating. 3. He had half an hour's exercise in the morning, and again in the afternoon. 4. That the cell was locked. 5. After lunch time on Saturday he received only bread and water until breakfast time Sunday."

On June 10 Senator Millen, the Minister of Defence, informed the Senate that he doubted that there had been a court-martial. Senator Rae then asked, "If it was not technically a court-martial, but a trial by military officers, will that be taken into account?" Senator Millen replied: "If two or three officers met and adjudicated in the case I shall regard that as fulfilling the honourable Senator's statements with regard to a court-martial."

"On June 11 Senator Millen stated in the Senate:—'I am informed there was no court-martial. 2. The lad gets one hour's exercise in the morning and one in the afternoon. 3. There are two windows in the cell. The windows are not glazed, but covered with wire mesh. The door is kept ajar all day and secured by a chain.'

"On June 17 Senator Millen further added:—5. 'The statement that the boy was on bread and water was a deliberate falsehood.'

"In view of the Minister's denials, which are a grave reflection on the truthfulness of the statements made, I send you the following, which, if necessary, will be substantiated by statutory declaration.

"1. Three military officers adjudicated upon my son's case at a table in a room at the Queenscliff Fortress on Saturday morning, June 6. Three military witnesses, and altogether there were seven persons present—six military officers and my son. A statement of the charge was made, the witnesses were called to give evidence, and then the sentence of seven days' solitary confinement was ordered.

"2. The cell had no windows, but two ventilating gratings placed right against the ceiling, the cell being 9ft high.

"3. The door was locked for five days, and not until Senator Rae brought the matter before the Senate was the chain used to keep the door ajar.

"4. The boy received only bread and water after lunch time on Saturday until breakfast time Sunday. This is quite true, although he certainly had other diet at other times. The original statement is true.

"5. My wife and I visited Queenscliff on the Sunday. The boy had had half an hour's exercise in the morning, and again in the afternoon on the preceding day. This was subsequently increased to an hour morning and afternoon. Also, after we visited him the letters he had written to us several days earlier were forwarded on.

"I ask you to compare these statements with those furnished to the Minister of Defence by his department when he called for an official report."

This statement clearly reveals a condition of affairs that should be made widely known. No country in the world takes the boys at such an age for the training in the art of militarism, and one rebels at the thought that the military authorities in this democratic country have already got such a hold as to "bamboozle" the Minister of Defence, and to make him a tool in their hands. Citizens, guard your heritage, and now enter your protest against conscription (compulsory military training), by demanding from the candidates the promise to repeal the compulsory clauses of the Commonwealth Defence Act.

CASUALTIES.

FATAL LORRY ACCIDENT.

About 5 p.m. yesterday, William Stewart, 45, a carter, living with George Carr, of Mascot, a carrier, was driving a lorry loaded with skins along Botany-road, Mascot. The lorry wheel suddenly sank in a deep rut in the roadway, and Stewart was thrown into the road, the wheels of the lorry passing over his chest. The Civil Ambulance conveyed him to the South Sydney Hospital, where Dr. Finlay pronounced life extinct.

ALLEGED ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

About 5 p.m. yesterday, Joseph Richards, 50, a carpenter, residing at 11 Wilson-street, Redfern, was found in a bedroom with a gash in the left forearm, which, it was alleged, had been self-inflicted with a razor. The Civil Ambulance conveyed him to the Royal Prince Alfred Hospital, where he was admitted by Dr. Maas, suffering from loss of blood and shock.

STREET ACCIDENT.

An open verdict was returned by Mr. J. W. Fletcher, at the Coroner's Court, in connection with the death of William Donald, aged 36, who died as the result of injuries received on May 25.

Evidence was given to the effect that deceased, who was found lying in the gutter near the corner of Elizabeth and Bathurst streets on the night in question, stated to the police and hospital officials that a man, after calling him a "police pimp," struck him on the head with a bottle, and he fell into the gutter. Police inquiries, however, failed to corroborate this story. A witness who saw the deceased fall said that no one struck him. He fell off the footpath into the gutter, and probably struck his head against an iron post in falling.

MOTOR BOATS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Kindly allow me to call your attention, and that of the general public (particularly the motor boating public) to the new regulations for the control of motor boats recently issued by the Navigation Department, one or two clauses of which appear to me to be badly in need of revision.

The manning scale provides that vessels having an engine of over 25-h.p. must carry as driver a second-class engineer. Now, a second-class engineer holds a certificate of competency to drive a marine steam engine, which is a totally different proposition to a marine motor. On the other hand, a certified marine motor driver holds a ticket for knowing at least something about a marine motor. This being the case, why give to a steam engineer (who usually knows nothing at all about motors) the position which the certified marine motor man (who, as his certificate shows, knows something) is not deemed by the Navigation Department fit to fill? The only course which would properly and fairly fill the public needs would be for the Navigation Department to hold examinations for different grades of motor engineers, as is the custom in the case of steam engineers.

In this connection another point worth consideration is the fact that there are at present in this State dozens of young fellows who have served their time to marine motor building, and who, by the operation of this clause, will be shut out from ever becoming engineer to anything but the smallest class of motor vessel, thus putting the most competent into the position of least responsibility—a reversal of the usual order of things. This does not make for public safety, which the new regulations are intended to safeguard.

In conclusion, by all means let us have every care taken to guard against accident, every provision made that, should accident unfortunately occur, it will not be attended by loss of life, but also let us have fair play, and the best man in the place that he is most fitted to fill.

I am, etc.,
MOTOR ENGINEER.
July 2.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I am very much surprised to read in the "Herald" the new regulations for motor boats, and very deeply regret they are so entirely altered from the old regulations that have been in use so long in Sydney. I am an engine builder of 14 years' experience, and supply a large number of passenger launches, large and small, and I have no hesitation in saying that either the new regulations will have to be altered, or else the motor passenger boat will be a thing of the past. In common with others in the trade, and boat owners in general, I have understood all along that the new regulations would simply be an extension to country districts of the old regulations we have had here in Sydney. So when the new regulations are generally known I anticipate a storm of protest as it will now become impossible to run the majority of launches at a profit and pay the extra and useless hands called for by the new regulations. The avowed object of the new rules is extra safety to passengers, and I thoroughly agree that there is a considerable amount of overloading everywhere, and this calls for regulation urgently. The life belts are also a necessity, inspection of hulls, machinery, likewise, but where serious objection can be taken to the new rules is in the number of extra men to work the boats. In any modern boat up to 50ft or over, and any horse-power, the entire control of the boat can be, and is, carried out by the driver—much better than by two men. This can be easily proved by demonstration with any licensed boat in the harbour. The size and power of motor is of no consequence, as besides the steering wheel the driver has only two small levers to look after, and these are usually fixed close to the steering wheel, and the driver does not need to ever look at the motor or take his eyes off any other boat or wharf he may wish to avoid or make. And yet the motor, of 10 horse-power, is under control as easily as a car engine all the time. I think this can be said of any licensed boat that is in the harbour. This arrangement is far better and safer than having one man looking after the motor and one steering. A deck hand on a very large boat to make fast is all that is necessary as under the old rules, and 40ft and under not even the deck hand is wanted. I have not heard of any accidents under the old rules, and cannot understand why they are altered. In what way will the passengers be safer by the boat carrying extra hands? It is the man at the wheel who creates or avoids collisions, yet the new rules call for a second man on all boats up to 40ft. Now, there are a very large number of boats of from 25ft to 30ft, and as these boats only carry a few passengers, how can the owner pay for an extra man who is of no use to either himself or passengers. And so this class of boat, running often, were of great convenience, and yet small traffic is doomed. If a boat is 41ft in length she will need now to carry a certificated driver, a certificated coxswain, and a deck hand. Three in all, and if the motor is over 25 horse-power a driver holding not less than a second-class steam engineer's certificate, a certificated coxswain, and a deck hand. Now, this is the hardest condition of all, and will be a severe blow to the owners of a good class of large, safe, and comfortable boats, a class that should be encouraged and not severely handicapped. The passenger traffic in this State is practically all in smooth and enclosed waters, and yet the conditions of the coxswains' ticket are severe, and call for two years' experience. This is bad enough, but why a steam engineer, with not less than a second-class ticket, is an entire mystery. Steam boat and motor boat practice are as far apart as the Poles. A steam engineer has to start to learn to run a motor on the same level as a man who has never had a motor, and the steam engineer is full of steam habits and use that have to be got rid of. My experience has been to prefer to teach the new beginner in preference to the steam man. Conditions on a large seagoing motor ship are somewhat different, as there is usually a miniature engineer's workshop, and as the steam engineer is supposed to be something of a fitter and turner, he would, of course, be most useful. But on a motor boat there is no workshop. Distances short and waters enclosed, and so, no matter how good a mechanic the steam engineer may be, he is on the same level as the ordinary driver. Now, there are quite a large number of launches up to 50ft run by the owner, and, perhaps, his son. These large boats run Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays under the new rules. If the motor is over 25 horse-power he cannot now use his boat, as it is out of the question to obtain and employ a steam engineer, as his wages would take up the entire profit, and in what way would the passengers be any safer than at present, with the owner licensed to drive? The owner is just as likely to be careful of a boat that represents years of saving as would be a strange paid hand that knew, perhaps a lot less about the motor than the owner. And how is the owner to get a steam engineer for two days per week? So the new Act will stop this very fine class of boat. This is by no means a single case. I know quite a lot of boats of this class. Personally, I would welcome a more severe examination for a driver than at present, but cut out the absolutely useless questions on analysis of oils, and substitute something of use—coxswains' exam. under old rules and the old manning scale, stringent regulations as to overloading, and fire extinguishers in plenty.

I am, etc.,
ENGINE BUILDER.

MACHINERY.

LATHES THAT TAKE HEAVY CUT FAST.

WHITELEY'S are the Lathes specially constructed to take heavy cuts, and they take them fast. They are built also for efficiency and economy, as they get the maximum amount of belt passing over the Cone Pulley when running on the slowest speed. All the power is consumed with useful work.

The Tool is truly modern, with beds of box section mounted on Cabinet Standards. The Support is rigid. It possesses the minimum number of parts, substantially constructed, built of fine limits of error, and produces the most accurate work. A few of the special features include:—Interlocking Feeds to Saddle; all feeds positive; no friction to slip; four rates of sliding and surfacing feeds; feed motion independent of screw cutting feeds; large hollow spindles; reversing motion, having neither clutches nor tumbler gears.

CAPSTAN, TURRET, OR COMBINATION LATHES.

You will find large stocks of these useful tools from such makers as Pollock and McNab, Pittler and other world-famed makers. Their design, workmanship, and finish being thorough, efficiency is certain to follow their use. Write our Machine Tool Expert for full details and prices.

ALSO WE STOCK:—
MILLING MACHINES,
HACK SAWS,
SHAPERS,
DRILLS,
RADIAL DRILLS,
ELECTRIC DRILLS AND GRINDERS,
BLOWERS AND POWER HAMMERS.

GETTING CHARACTER INTO THE HOME.
You have seen those houses that all look alike. They seem to have been poured into a mould while hot and turned out one after the other—exactly the same in every respect. The Cornices are all alike—every room is finished the same. Is it any wonder that people prefer places with more individuality? Wunderlich Metal Installations give a character to every home in which they are placed. They prevent the "sameness" from creeping in, because they afford such a range of treatment. Get a catalogue, and see for yourself how beautiful are the designs you may choose from. Then ask us to send a FREE estimate for erecting in your home.

MOTOR DRIVING MEANS MORE MONEY,
IF YOU ARE TRAINED AT
DOHERTY AND ADAMS' MOTOR SCHOOL.

JUDGE US BY RESULTS.
Since 1st January, out of 129 pupils, 121 passed City Test first try. Of these some had 10 days' training, others 15 to 20 days. Our tuition does not cease with license. Our pupils are welcome to extend their Mechanical and Electrical Knowledge in spare time, without any time limit, until perfectly satisfied. Our pupils are TRAINED TO BE EXPERT TRAFFIC DRIVERS.
If you are content with only a suburban or country license, then you are courting disaster, as the majority of accidents have been due to the improper training of holders of suburban licenses.
Our city trained men have not only entire confidence in themselves, but also that supreme control over the car which alone can secure and hold the cream of the positions.
EMPLOYERS DEMAND THE CITY LICENSE ONLY.
Remember, our certificate is always a passport to a good position. Don't be rushed. If you rush into this business you will soon find yourself rushed out of it again. Call and let us show you the glowing letters from satisfied pupils, also others from the principal Motor Car firms in Sydney. Country pupils find their lodging expenses light who attend our school.

MOTOR DRIVING. BE A CHAUFFEUR.
TUITION, 30s.
WE GUARANTEE PROFICIENCY and LICENSE from 8 to 12 days. Our Pupils are taught on modern Cars, and obtain their license on a gate-change, which is the hardest car to drive. Most modern lorries and high-priced cars are gate-change. If you obtain license on this style of car, you can drive any car made. We don't charge extra for use of car for license. We specialise in teaching the working and repairs of engines, magnetos, carburetters, tyres, tubes, etc. We have expert mechanics overhauling cars, and parts of same are open for inspection of pupils. Our chief aim is to make you a competent Motor Driver, and capable of looking after your running repairs. It is useless learning motor driving and trying to be a mechanic, as it is necessary to serve an apprenticeship; so don't waste your time, but come to us. We are making a great name for ourselves, and our business is a tremendous success through the fair deal we give every man. Our Pupils speak very highly of us. Have a chat with them. There is no trade can be learnt so quickly and cheaply as the one we offer you, and there is no other trade demands employment like this one. It's the coming thing; get in early. We don't show you how to drive and change gears, but make you do it yourself the very first lesson. Our price is reasonable, cars modern, tuition the best. Night Pupils have Traffic driving same as Day Pupils. Day, Evening, Saturday Afternoon, and Ladies' Classes. WEDNESDAY, 7.30 p.m., FREE DEMONSTRATIVE LECTURE, PUBLIC INVITED.

SHORTHAND. WHICH SYSTEM?
SHORTHAND. WHICH SYSTEM?

The prominent and responsible Business Colleges of Australia, and of the English-speaking world generally, have had many opportunities of investigating the claims of alien catch-penny systems. In the interest of their clients and of their good reputation they have unanimously decided that the is the only system that they can conscientiously recommend.

SYSTEM

SHORTHAND IN THIRTY DAYS.

SHORTHAND IN LESS THAN 30 HOURS.

THE BOYD SYSTEM.

One of our pupils is using the BOYD System of Shorthand for the outward correspondence in her employer's office, although she has only had 25 HOURS' TUITION.

We can PROVE every statement we make.

See the window of A. MURRAY, Tobacconist, Pitt-street, near Moore-street, for particulars of Shorthand Competition and Challenge.

LAIRD AND PEEK,
BOYD SHORTHAND SCHOOLS,
Citizens'-chambers, Moore-street, SYDNEY.

SHORTHAND—WHICH SYSTEM?

Study these accuracy figures:—

These results, achieved by writers of the ISAAC PITMAN SYSTEM—students of the Metropolitan Business College—are given in the examiner's reports in connection with the Public Shorthand Competitions held in Sydney WITHIN THE PAST THREE YEARS.
The 100 p.c. records are those of Miss Pattie E. Juleff and Miss Jean Douglas, both of whom in the 90 words per minute test in May last, conducted by the I.P.S., transcribed their notes WITHOUT A SINGLE ERROR.

SHORTHAND COMPETITION OPEN TO ANY SYSTEM.

As it has been strongly urged upon us that the proposed competition to test the merits of various Shorthand systems would command a wider entry and would receive greater support generally if it were conducted by the Incorporated Phonographic Society of Australia, we, the proprietors of the Metropolitan Business College, have decided to offer the control of this affair to that Society. The I.P.S. will decide the matter in a few days.
It is probable that the first prize will be a cash one of £15/15/ instead of £5/5/, as originally proposed. Everything possible will be done to tempt writers of certain systems to enter the competition.
In the meantime copies of the conditions as proposed by the M.B.C. are obtainable from
T. Stanley Summerhayes,
Principal,
METROPOLITAN BUSINESS COLLEGE.

NO CHEAP SCENTED TEA IN LIPTON'S.

Scented teas are considerably used in Sydney to cheapen Indian and Ceylon blends, and many of them are highly injurious to the system. If you will take the trouble to look at the leaves of such tea after infusion, you will find they are green and dirty-looking. They are not good teas. They are cheap China teas added to cheapen the bulk. A ton of Lipton's tea does not contain an ounce of this cheap, highly-scented and coloured tea.

It is PURE tea—as pure as the sunshine and air which grow it on our own plantations in India and Ceylon, and is the highest grade that can be grown.

THE LIPTON FLAVOUR.

Have you tried the new blends? They are scientifically blended by Mr. H. C. Trill, one of the few recognised greatest tea experts, who came from London to control Lipton's great business in Australasia.

The Lipton flavour is "different." No other tea will give you such surpassing richness of flavour or such a delicious aroma.

¼lb. PACKET OF LIPTON'S FREE.

Send 3d in stamps, and we will post you one quarter-pound sample of our 1/3, 1/6, 1/9, or 2/ tea.

12 DAYS' SALE.

We have decided to make a clearance of the whole of our valuable collection of

and during our 12 DAYS' SALE we shall offer the various works of Art at prices which we know are out of all proportion to their true value.

This is, indeed, a rare opportunity for Connoisseurs, and one that should not be missed by Collectors and Art Lovers, for at the prices we are now offering they are worth taking full advantage of. Nor should it be forgotten that works of art differ from articles of utility, inasmuch as that the work of art never depreciates in value, but is invariably enhanced in value by age. Therefore, these pictures are still worth more than the original prices.

As with all transactions, our prices are prompt cash before delivery, but anyone may by depositing 20 per cent. of the value secure any Picture being kept for them till they are prepared to pay the balance, which must be within 12 months.

Some of these Pictures will be on display in our No. 5 Broadway Window To-day and following days.

J.S.W. HAIR FOODS.

No Hair Lotion can equally suit all heads of hair. It is obvious that hair of an oily nature requires a very different nourishment to dry hair, and vice versa. In the preparation of J. S. W. HAIR FOODS great attention has been devoted to this special feature. The result has been the composition of two lotions to provide for the different natures of hair. For cleanliness of the scalp, or as a hair tonic, J. S. W. HAIR FOOD holds a prominent and enviable position. Even the most broken and lifeless-looking hair must respond to its frequent use; moreover, it helps ordinarily beautiful hair to maintain its vigour. Why not give J. S. W. HAIR FOOD a trial?

OILY, per bottle .... Price 2/6.
NON-OILY, per bottle ..... Price 3/6.

WHAT HAPPENED WHEN NAPOLEON NEGLECTED.

If Napoleon, when marching towards Moscow, had noticed that the birds were flying southward unusually early he would certainly have postponed his visit.

Winter came earlier than it had for a hundred years or more, and was the cause of Napoleon's undoing. He neglected an obvious warning.

It is because many folks have neglected the toothache, which is nature's danger signal that their teeth need attention, that has led to the undoing of their good health.

The action of decaying Teeth is insidious, the disease which comes from a decaying tooth contaminates the whole of the System. Its poisonous work goes on night and day, causing indigestion, headache, and sore throat.

There is a reason why you should have sound Teeth. Spencer Nolan can preserve your Teeth by filling, without inflicting one twinge of pain. You won't feel the drill, and you will be conscious all the time. His work is thorough and durable, and his fees light.

Painless Amalgam Stoppings, from 5/.

BETTER ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

My Coraline Gum Sets are absolutely unbreakable, and are exceptionally efficient and becoming. For comfort and Appearance my patent Suction Sets at Three Guineas each are unsurpassed.
